THE FLORISTS'
REVIEW

THE STORE FRONT AS A SALES FACTOR

Time was when any store front was good enough—one could conduct a successful business in a basement or in a shanty—but in these days of keener competition and higher ground values the store front demands as much consideration as does the interior, the delivery service or the advertising.

THE retailer, having invested his money in a handsome store interior, may go on doing business year after year before he discovers that his store front, while it satisfactorily serves a purpose as the front wall of his store, is deficient because it is not an active element in winning new business. This latent attribute, an ability to attract new business, aside from the selling aid of window displays, nowadays is considered the chief essential of the good store front.

An Indefatigable Worker.

It is a distinct selling factor that has principally as a function the acquisition of new, or first-time, customers, those who, by reason of the good service given them by the retailer, eventually become regular patrons. Every new buyer who comes in through the medium of the store front is as good as the one who is attracted by a newspaper advertisement; and the effective store exterior works practically free of charge 365 days per year. Surely it is obvious, then, that the front not only is to be treated as a matter of plate glass combined with wood, stone or metal, but also is to be treated as one of the important sales-bringing assets of the retail establishment.

This selling property is rather an abstract quality. It is most easily defined by its work, which is to engender in the minds of the people who pass before the store the knowledge that there is a store, a flower store, on that particular street and in that particular block. The successful front registers a vivid mental picture of itself on the minds of the passers-by—a mental photograph, as it were, that will be forthcoming from the mind when the psychological moment arrives.

How this phase of the front of the store enters the scheme of things may be demonstrated by citing an example.

How the Front Brings Business.

Let it be assumed that one of the passers-by on his arrival home, or a week or month later, had need of a bouquet or funeral piece. If he was not a regular patron of some florist, undoubtedly his first move would be to try to recall a flower shop he had seen. As a result of his mental operation, providing the knowledge had gone before, the likeness of a flower store would be forthcoming from the mind of the passer-by. With it would come the association of ideas, such as the street location of the store and, perhaps, the name of the store. In the course of events, therefore, the florist whose store front made a good first impression would make a "first" sale and add a new name to his customers' list. The retailer with the faulty store exterior would worry along without the business.

Of course, we simply say that our passer-by remembered having seen a certain flower store and then proceeded to the store and made his purchase, but his action really was the result of a knowledge previously transmitted through his mind's eye by a successful store exterior. Thus it may be seen that the front is an important sales factor in building a business, though it is difficult to trace as the cause of the effect. Like advertising, the front performs through the minds of the people.

In the florists' business the shop that frequently misses the mark in this respect is the one with the residential-like front. This is a result of the old-time custom of making a salesroom out of the first floor of a residence, and there are specimens of the variety everywhere. Some of them even have the front steps and entrance of a residence building. Their efficiency as business producers cannot be rated as high.

Dignity Loses.

Another case is found in the store occupying a building that originally housed a business not dealing in commodities, such as a banking or real estate business. The accompanying illustration affords a view of a flower store partially disguised by its bank-like exterior; in fact, the building originally was used by bankers. "Why, that is a handsome front," one will say. Yes, to be sure, but will it be remembered as long and will it be recalled as easily as the store shown in the illustration on the next page? Decidedly not. It seems almost too cold and dignified for a public place of barter.

Of late years there have been erected, especially in the large towns and cities, rows of stores, where each front is of the same architectural style and appearance as any one of the other fronts in the line. A store in such a position does not have the drawing power of the one-building store. Several fronts of like appearance create a mental impression somewhat similar to that of a line of black dots passed before the eye. They are seen as an architectural whole rather than individually. Should one of the fronts be remodeled and made unlike in appearance to any of its neighbors, its selling power would be greatly enhanced by contrast. It would have the effect of one white dot passed alone in the line of black dots—an object quickly and vividly recorded by the mind. This probably is why a shop in a large office building cannot have so successful a front as the store in a building by itself. An office building, however, is in some ways an advantageous location, a point that frequently takes precedence over everything else.

The Model Store Front.

It is apparent that the entire matter of store fronts resolves itself simply into the question of having an exterior with a high "memory value," as it is termed. The more distinctive the store front, the more individual its make-up, the higher is its "memory value." The residential and bank-like front should be avoided, inasmuch as a store primarily should have all the characteristics of a store. Stores with entrances on the same level as the pavement are rated superior to those that have one or two steps at the threshold. The less framework about the plate of glass the better. An unobstructed view of the interior of the store, not considering in this connection the partial screen of window displays, is a thing to be desired. Flower stores have been called "bowers of loveliness" and "paradises of flower-lovers" by the newspapers. Then why not give the people an inkling of the treat that awaits them within?

The model store front is clean, bright and conspicuous. It has a distinguishing feature and individuality that makes it stand out from its neighbors. The model store front is marked, perhaps unconsciously on their part, by a large number of passers-by each day. It is remembered long and recalled quickly when the occasion arises.

Two Concerns First in Field.

The retailer who considers the pros and cons of the store front a splitting of so many hairs is in the same business class as the man who does not discount his bills because it is such a small matter each time. One of the largest clothiers in the country has expended hundreds of dollars in advertising the "front of his house." The most successful chain-store organization in the world has all its stores of one color, each front embellished with the trademark and identified with profit-sharing coupons. Even the window displays are alike—tiers on tiers of cigars and tobaccos. The retailer who combines a model store front with printed advertising and attention-compelling displays, begins to approach the 100 per cent efficiency in sales promotion.

When remodeling or moving day comes around, have a keen eye for the front that will bring new faces to your counters.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Show Pelargoniums.

The flowering season of show pelargoniums has been more protracted than usual this season, thanks to the long spell of cool weather with which we were favored until the second week of July. With the flowering period ended, the plants should be rested. Stand them outdoors in an open, sunny spot, or, if the weather is wet, lay them on their sides for a few weeks in order to ripen the wood well. Cuttings may be taken now, but will root better a month hence. In about a month the plants can be pruned back and kept a little more moist at the root. When they have started to break away nicely they should be shaken out; all the soil should be removed, also some of the larger roots, and the plants should be potted in much smaller-sized pots than those in which they flowered. Keep them protected from heavy rains. A good coldframe, where sashes can be placed over the plants if necessary, will be found far better than a greenhouse for the purpose.

Spiræas.

The florists' spiræas are called astilbes botanically and have been further subdivided, but gardeners and florists stick to the old name and leave the others for the botanists. The spiræas are well known as valuable pot plants. They are also good border plants, but succeed specially well in moist and partly shaded locations. The growth they make in moist places, as compared with dry positions, is simply astonishing. It is no uncommon thing to see S. Davidii six feet high in moist land, while in a dry border it will not reach half that height. All the forms of S. Japonica are useful in the border. They also do well in the field, and forced clumps divided and planted out for a couple of seasons will give far better clumps for forcing than any which are imported.

The varieties Queen Alexandra, Pink Pearl, Rubens, Philadelphia and Salmon Queen all do finely outdoors. S. Aruncus, or Aaron's Beard, presents a fine appearance in front of a perennial border. Individual plants also look well in the lawn. This variety grows four to five feet high, and good clumps are sometimes six to eight feet across. The long, feathery white panicles of the flowers are striking. S. palmata in July produces its rosy crimson flowers in great profusion. It is the deepest colored of the genus. If given sufficient moisture and well enriched soil, all the spiræas make surprising growth.

Roman Hyacinths.

Roman hyacinths, with Paper White narcissi, are among our earliest bulb arrivals. The hyacinths, since the war, arrive later than formerly, and we cannot be certain when they will come to hand, but as soon as they do come a batch should be placed in pots and flats. The pots are quite useful at Thanksgiving and Christmas, while the flats are best where cut flowers are needed. Flats 12x24 and four to four and one-half inches deep are suitable for these and many other bulbs, and seventy-five bulbs can be used in a flat. Place the flats or pots outdoors and, after watering, give them a 4-inch covering with coal ashes or sand.

Freelias.

Christmas freelias are always highly prized, and in order to have some of these sweet-scented and popular flowers at that early date, the bulbs should be placed in pans during the last half of July. I prefer pans eight or ten inches in diameter, in which twenty to fifty bulbs can be planted. If the soil is at all moist at potting time, do not water until it has dried out well. Keep the pans in a coldframe, cover them with leaves or dry moss and cover this again with board shutters, to prevent drying out and to keep the pans darkened. The bulbs will start much more evenly if treated in this way than if exposed to sun and rain, as is too often done in the early stages of growth. After September these freelias must have a light bench or shelf in a house kept at 52 to 55 degrees at night, to insure their being in flower for the holidays.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettia cuttings still can be put in to produce dwarf plants suitable for pans; in fact, I have rooted them as late as August 10 and had nice little stock. Be sure to keep the rooted cuttings potted up while the roots still are small. If allowed to go a few days too long, the roots break badly and the plants get a decided check. If the potting is done when the roots are not over two inches long, there will be no trouble.

Stevias.

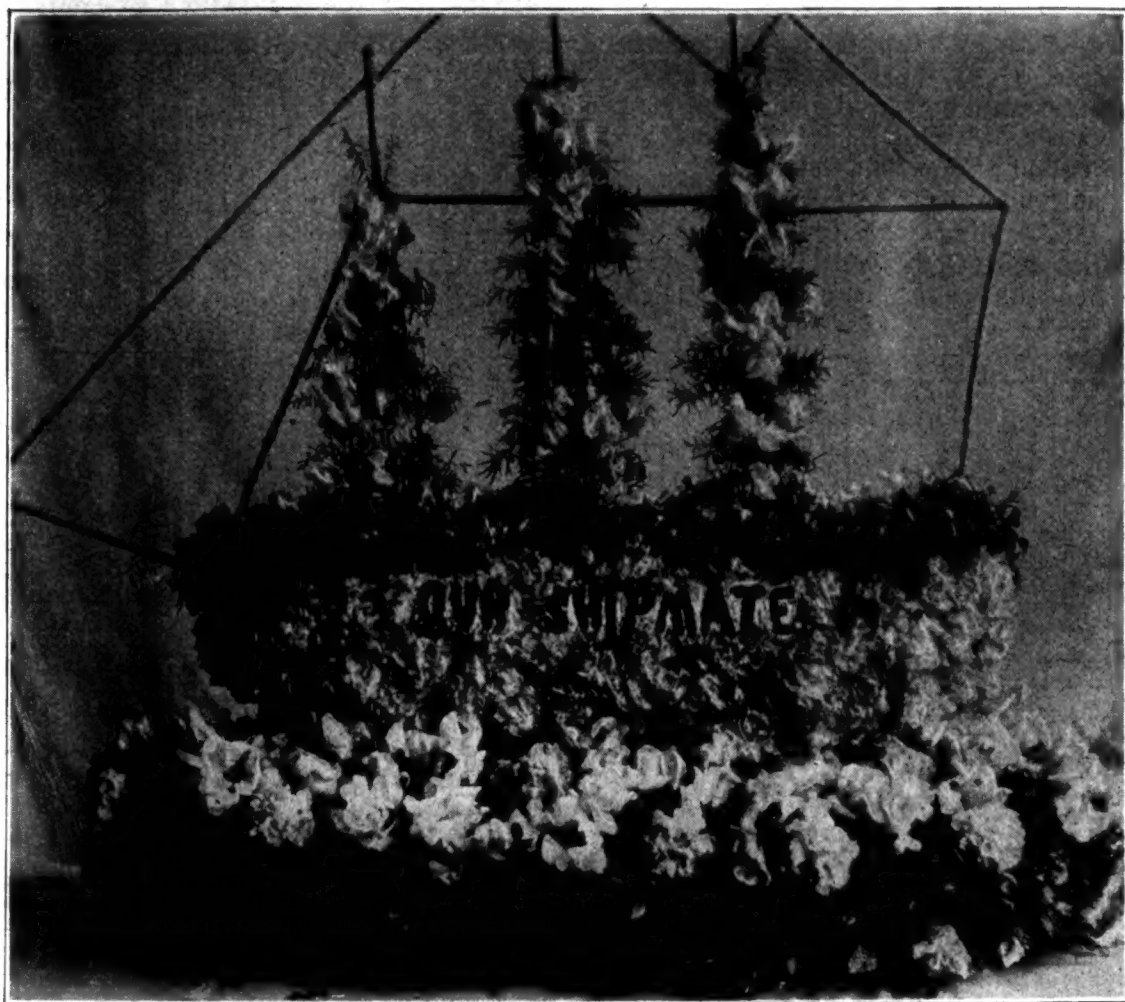

Give the stevias one more pinching now, and this should carry them through the season. Where they are planted out in the field it is best to do the potting from August 15 to 20, before the plants become too unwieldy. Where only a few dozen plants are grown, pot culture through the summer is much to be preferred. Such plants should now go into the pots in which they are to flower, and should be plunged to the brim, in order to keep the soil from drying out so rapidly.

Mignonette.

About the last of July is a suitable time for making a first sowing of mignonette under glass. Mignonette wants a low temperature in winter. It can be grown well in either solid beds or benches and it needs a good soil, just such as mums, violets or carnations would thrive in. If you have not a bench at disposal yet, start the seeds in small pots and plant out later. Mignonette cannot successfully be sown and pricked off like other annuals. Therefore, pots should be used where beds are not yet ready. If sowing in a bench, put a few seeds in little patches twelve inches apart each way. For forcing, purchase the best mignonette procurable. Never mind if the cost is somewhat high; it is quality we need.

Trachelium Cæruleum.

Trachelium cæruleum is one of the finest summer-flowering plants for pot culture that we have. It flowers in a cool greenhouse in July and August. The flowers are usually pale blue, but a fair percentage come pure white. The cloud-like heads of flowers somewhat resemble gypsophila, but have much better keeping qualities and will ship long distances better than almost any other flowers.

T. cæruleum is not at all a new thing, but seems to have been entirely overlooked by florists hitherto. The plants grow two to four feet in height and, if given one or two pinchings, are quite shapely. Plants are easily propagated from seeds or cuttings. It is not too late to sow the seeds now. Treat the plants much the same as Canterbury bells for best results. These tracheliums are members of the natural order campanulaceæ. They do best if treated as biennials, though they are really perennials. In England they are often seen in herbaceous borders. The tracheliums are natives of the Mediterranean region of Europe. They should prove extremely useful to florists who want really nice flowers in July and August.

Genistas.

Genistas now are making active growth and will need an occasional shearing to keep them shapely. They grow well through the summer when the pots are plunged to the brims, or even over them, provided the necessary watering can be given when the weather is hot and dry. Any repotting can be done when the plants are taken out of the quarters where they are plunged; this need not be before the first week in September.

A SHIP IN FLOWERS.

The other day a member of the crew of one of Uncle Sam's torpedo boat destroyers was killed in the harbor of San Diego and his remains were sent home to Watertown, Wis., for burial. There the call was for a ship in flowers and nothing else would do, so Mrs. Wm. J. Stuebe, of the Stuebe Floral Co., made the design shown in the accompanying illustration.

Such designs never are the artistic equal of sprays and wreaths, but when a customer wants such an emblem the florist must be prepared to meet the demand.

PANSIES DYING.

I am sending some pansies under separate cover and wish you would tell me what is the trouble with them. They begin to die at about this time every year. I have them in a bed at the north and east of the house. The soil seems rich. I use some lime and sand with the soil. The plants begin to die close to the ground and the leaves turn yellow and have spots on them. Should some kind of spray be used on them? M. T. S. T.—Kan.

I think the most probable cause of the condition of your plants is a too high temperature. They are naturally cool and moisture-loving plants, as are all members of the viola family, and they would probably do well with you until hot weather came along. While dry heat affects them most adversely, they sometimes become spotted and diseased when spells of hot, damp and almost sunless weather occur. Under either condition there is little you can do to help them. Pansies love a light but rich soil; one containing decayed leaves in addition to rotted manure is ideal for them. The soil will not require lime unless it is acid. To counteract any fungoid affections of pansies and other plants, both Bordeaux mixture and Fungine are valuable.

BREAKING IN.

This picture might be called "The long and the short of it, or why some peonies are better worth 8 cents than others are 4 cents," but instead let it be called "The Self-Commencer." The young man is Harold Amling, son of E. C. Amling, the Chicago wholesale florist and Oak Park bank president. When the young man left school this spring it was his pleasure to begin in the flower business at the beginning, a sort of self-starter as it were. He put on a rubber apron and is learning the art of grading flowers and acquiring skill in packing them for shipment—he is learning the business from the bottom up, as his father did, instead of from the top down, as one so situated might be excused for wanting to do.

ACID PHOSPHATE AND BONE.*Some More Comparisons.

It was with no slight degree of interest that I read, in The Review of June 15, F. W. Muncie's article entitled "Acid Phosphate or Bone Meal?" Though he appeared to criticize certain statements made by me in The Review of May 18, under the head of "Building Up Our Soils," yet I freely admit that his article is especially valuable to us as growers and is an important supplement to "The Report on Fertilizer Work at Urbana," presented before the convention of the Illinois State Florists' Association and printed in The Review of March 9 and 16.

However, I believe that Mr. Muncie's criticism of some of my statements indicates that he did not get hold of my real meaning. My article was written with special reference to a summary of reports regarding fertilizer work, a summary that had been sent to me with a request for my opinion. The reports, as summarized, were such as to lead one to suppose that they were intended as a comparison of animal manure and commercial fertilizer and that they favored the use of commercial fertilizer, particularly the use of acid phosphate. I tried to emphasize the fact that there can be no real competition between animal manure and commercial fertilizer for greenhouse use, as each plays its own particular part and both are essential in the maintenance of the fertility of the soil.

When Using Old Soil.

Moreover, I had in mind that large class of florists who are so located that it is becoming increasingly difficult for them to secure suitable soil each year and hence it is necessary for them to utilize all the old soil that was in the benches the previous year. I am in no way opposed to the use of acid phosphate in greenhouse soils. On the contrary, I recognize in it a most valuable addition to the list of fertilizers.

Yet I do not believe that acid phosphate can take the place entirely of the best grades of steamed bone meal or bone flour. In cases where the same soil must be used from year to year, I have found, in my own experience of about twenty-five years in the growing game, that bone meal is one of the most lasting fertilizers, due to the fact that the phosphoric acid content is soluble only in the presence of carbonic acid and other vegetable acids, becoming available as the plants are in need of it, and therefore is less liable to loss through leaching. Besides, wherever iron hydrate exists in the soil in any appreciable quantity, the reverted form of lime phosphate as found in bone meal is much less liable to become united with the iron hydrate than is the case with the water-soluble form, as found in acid phosphate.

Loss Through Leaching.

The question of soil leaching is most important in connection with the fertilization of soils on the bench. The average depth of the soil on greenhouse benches is, as Mr. Muncie states, about five inches. This shallowness of the soil, in conjunction with the almost perfect drainage obtainable, gives possibilities for large losses of the more soluble of the fertilizer elements through the process of leaching. Acid phosphate is much more subject to loss through this process than is bone meal, and this particular feature accounts in great measure for the lack of danger of ill results from overfeeding with acid phosphate. It is with these facts in view that I prefer to consider acid phosphate rather as an auxiliary fertilizer, for the obtaining of immediate results.

It is not possible, I think, to make any fair comparison of the respective merits of bone meal and acid phosphate without taking into consideration the nitrogen content in bone meal.

In view of the fact that the availability of the phosphoric acid in bone meal is dependent to a great extent on the amount of organic matter in the soil that is subject to decomposition, extremely light sandy soils and heavy clay soils that are deficient in organic matter should be avoided.

An Overdose of Bone Meal.

The danger in an overdose of bone meal arises principally from the content of animal matter and ammonia, and while ammonia is a valuable addition to plant food and has an important bearing on increasing the availability of the phosphoric acid content, due respect to its existence must be given and sufficient quantities of water must be used to prevent firing. In my own practice, however, I have never experienced any difficulty along this line, notwithstanding the fact that I have used finely ground steamed bone in the soil for roses in certain experiments, at the rate of twenty pounds per hundred square feet of bench surface, with no appreciable injury to the plants.

As is well known, the soils generally used by the best rose growers run much higher in organic matter than is the case with soil under ordinary field conditions. Aside from the fact that sod soil is invariably used when obtainable, it is also customary for growers to use not less than one part of manure to three parts of soil, and, after the plants are thoroughly established, mulches of stable manure are added.

Bone Meal in Rose Soil.

The gradual decomposition of this mass of organic matter gives a constant supply of carbonic acid, as well as other vegetable and humic acids that act as a ready solvent for the reverted form of lime phosphate contained in bone meal. This transformation of the more or less insoluble forms of lime phosphate, through the action of carbonic acid, into soluble and available phosphoric acid, is constant and rapid under greenhouse conditions, and for this reason alone I would consider bone meal much more suitable for the fertilization of greenhouse soils than for field use. At the same time, it has been observed by Professor Hilgard and others that, with the best grades of finely ground steamed bone, all of the phosphoric acid may become available in field practice in a single year.

Owing to the fact that the great majority of rose growers carry over roses in the same soil for from two to four years, would it not seem advisable to use principally those fertilizers that will build our soils up to the highest state possible, both physically and chemically?

For Lasting Results.

Mr. Muncie seems to lay stress on the idea that permanent benefits from any method of fertilization are not essential in greenhouse practice. This is true in a measure with many of our larger growers, who are fortunate enough to have an inexhaustible supply of soil adjacent to their greenhouses. But is it always true in connection with the much larger percentage of growers who are obliged to buy their new soil wherever they can, and who, after using soil two or three years for roses, must give it a short rest and then use it in the chrysanthemum benches, and finally, when the mums are thrown out, must work it up in the potting compost?

These are conditions to be met with on a large number of places; hence any method of fertilization that prolongs the life of the soil is of vital interest. The fertilizers that are of the greatest importance in performing this office are such products, I believe, as steamed bone meal, bone flour, blood and bone, dried blood, tankage and the various animal manures. These have seemed to me to be of greater value to the majority of growers than such mineral or acidulated fertilizers as ammonium sulphate, nitrate of soda, muriate and sulphate of potash and acid phosphate.

For Quick Results.

At the same time I recognize the value of acid phosphate in certain soils and under certain conditions, as a means of supplying a quickly available phosphoric acid, and, unlike the several other mineral fertilizers mentioned, it is perfectly safe for use in most cases.

Regarding the use of lime carbonate, I am aware of the observations of "Schloesing, Jr.," as well as those of "Nagaoka," of the University of Tokyo, regarding the unfavorable effect of lime carbonate when used in conjunction with either acid phosphate or bone meal, but I also have the authority of both Professor Hilgard, of the State University of California, and Professor Edward B. Voorhees, of Rutgers College, to the effect that much smaller percentages of phosphoric acid and potash are adequate for the production of crops in a soil with a high content of lime. I have also found this to be true in actual greenhouse practice with certain Wisconsin soils that are low in phosphoric acid content and high in lime carbonate and organic matter. However, I agree most heartily with Mr. Muncie on the inadvisability of mixing the lime carbonates with new or virgin soil in direct conjunction with phosphatic fertilizers.

Judicious Use of Lime.

This, however, may not always be applicable in the case of composting old and more or less leached out soils, that are deficient in lime content. For the most part, my idea of the judicious use of lime is identical with that of Mr. Muncie. Light applications as needed, in the form of top-dressings, are preferable to incorporating the lime in the original soil mixture. Wherever a pure form of finely ground raw rock lime is obtainable, I would not advise as heavy an application in our western soils as ten pounds per hundred square feet of bench surface. I would prefer applications not exceeding five to eight pounds per hundred square feet and would repeat these applications as needed. In my own practice I have used the applications of lime at a period of low crop production and at the end of a period of heavy cropping, when but little feeding with other fertilizers was being done.

In my article of May 18 I did not intend to imply that the phosphates I depend upon for fertilization are in the form of either ferrous phosphate or aluminic phosphate. I did imply, however, that in soils containing appreciable amounts of finely divided ferrous hydrate or aluminic hydrate the use of lime carbonate prevents any added phosphatic fertilizer from uniting with these compounds in a practically insoluble form.

Due to Decomposition.

On the other hand, such phosphatic fertilizers unite with the lime carbonate in the reverted form, and while this compound is insoluble in pure water, it becomes available to plant life through the agencies of decomposition.

In conclusion, since the soils used in the growing of roses should contain large amounts of organic matter and must be well supplied with humus, are not the possible disadvantages that may accrue from the use of lime carbonate completely offset in the many resultant advantages, such as the neutralization of injurious acids and poisonous excreta, the maintenance of neutral humus in the soil, and the production, in connection with proper heat and moisture, of those conditions that are conducive to abundant bacterial life, especially those forms connected with the processes of nitrification?

It has, I believe, been proved by the best authorities that the highly available forms of nitrogen carried in the humus of soils are what really count in the final productivity of the soil, aside from an adequate supply of available phosphoric acid. Hence it is exceedingly important for us, as growers, never to let the humus content of our soils become depleted.

News from Abroad

Hillegom, Holland.—Weather conditions have been unfavorable for the lifting, cleaning and curing of bulbs, cold and damp, rains having fallen nearly every day in June in at least some part of the bulb district.

London, England.—The end of June saw the fortieth annual show of the National Rose Society and the first days of July brought the annual Holland House show, familiar to every British gardener in America. Neither show was expected to be up to the scale of peaceful years, but each was an excellent and successful exhibition nevertheless.

Hamburg, Germany.—The difficulties attending the exporting of the 1915 valley crop, an unusual percentage of which still is in dealers' cold storage here, resulted in a considerable reduction of the acreage planted for the 1916 crop, food crops being counted on to pay better. It is hoped that by the time the crop is ready to move, in October or November, conditions will be such that American orders can be dispatched as usual.

London, England.—During the recent Holland House show two trade conferences were held, one by leading fruit tree growers, the other by rose growers. In each case steps were taken toward the adoption of a scale of minimum prices. The statement was made: "That the present time marks the most serious crisis in the history of the nursery trade which has ever occurred is so obvious that we need not labor the point. We hope also that it is equally clear to everyone that the outcome of the crisis depends largely on whether the trade is prepared to work loyally together for the general good and abandon the old policy of isolation and laissez-faire, which has been our curse for generations."

London, England.—The government has aroused great opposition in the trade by announcing that Holland bulbs will be admitted in the parcel post, but not by freight. The bulb dealers assert this is practically confiscating their business and delivering it to their foreign competitors.

Hazebrouck, France.—In the district north and west of this place, extending into Belgium, there are many hundreds of nurseries and glass-house establishments, great numbers of which have been destroyed by the armies. Not only has glass been destroyed, but plants have suffered, the asphyxiating gas of the Germans having disastrous effect on all plant life. In many cases leaves became covered with great white patches from which the color had completely disappeared; they did not resemble foliage discolored by the action of gas proceeding from large factories where hydrocyanic acid or sulphuric acid is manufactured; but, after remaining white for some time, they turned brown, dried up and fell off. As a result of experiments with the gas which produced these results, it was found that it was capable of penetrating into houses of the nature of chlorine, the effects being similar to those produced by free chlorine. This asphyxiating gas proved which were closely shut and produced effects varying according to the stage of growth attained by the plants and the temperature of the house. In unheated houses, where the plants were covered with morning dew, the damage done was serious. In houses where the atmosphere was dry, the gas did not destroy the tissue of the plants, but it caused a complete cessation of growth for a week. When the fumes of gas had cleared away, growth was resumed, and continued in a normal manner.

BOSTON.

The Market.

After a week of damp, stormy and uncomfortable weather, the market is comparatively bare of flowers, a large proportion of the outdoor flowers usually in evidence at this season having been spoiled. There has been a decided additional shortening of rose supplies and prices have shown some improvement. Short-stemmed stock has been quite scarce. Some good Beauties are coming in, the best making $20 to $25 per hundred. Among the other varieties arriving of good quality at this time are Double White Killarney, Maryland, Sunburst, Ward, Ophelia and Hadley. Carnations are making about double last week's prices and clean up easily. Sweet peas have been poor and scarce, due to the hot, damp weather, but they now are arriving in a better condition.

Gladioli are arriving in large numbers from outdoors and are the most conspicuous flowers on the market. Prices are lower, the best blooms making $4 to $5 per hundred. Mrs. F. King and America are better sellers than Pink Beauty. A few more asters are arriving, but all of them clean up quickly. Some fine Lilium speciosum and auratum are seen, in addition to L. giganteum. Good valley is scarce and makes $5 per hundred. A fair asponents, Captain Miller himself sending in two goals with stinging shots. Peter M. Miller added a third.

The women's baseball game was full of thrills, as usual. The married ladies made a bad start, but gained steadily as the game progressed and might have won out had there been a couple more innings. There was plenty of tea, coffee, ice cream and sandwiches for all, ladies and children in addition receiving boxes of chocolates. Prizes were distributed by P. M. Miller and W. J. Kennedy at the conclusion of the sports, which were successfully carried out, no accident whatever marring any of the games. The list of sporting events and the winners follows:

Baseball, between commercial growers and private gardeners—Won by private gardeners by a score of 3 to 2. The winning team consisted of W. J. Iliffe, captain; H. L. Pree, J. Bannon, Pierce, Lockridge, W. Iliffe, C. Doten, T. Iliffe, W. Doten and G. H. Cray.

Baseball, boys under sixteen years—Won by J. F. Flood's team by a score of 7 to 1. The players of the winning team were Flood, Palmer, Eisenhardt, Whyte, Esty, Pierce, Killian, Pree and Stellberger.

Baseball, between married women and single women—Won by single women by a score of 18 to 13. The winning team consisted of Captain Susan E. Rogers, Alice Iliffe, Edith Iliffe, Florence Eisenhardt, Louise Eisenhardt, A. Birkmaier, E. Stellberger, F. Douglas and Florence Palmer.

Soccer football—Captain John Miller's team won by three goals; their opponents scored nothing. In the winning team were Captain John Miller, W. C. Rust, P. M. Miller, J. R. Ness, J. McIntyre, Hugh McAuley, J. F. Flood, J. F. Bannon, J. Morrison, G. H. Cray and W. N. Craig.

Quoits—Matthew S. Brown, first; John Duguid, second; Walter Jack, third.

Tug of war, between commercial growers and private gardeners—Easily won by the private gardeners, who had the beef lacking among the commercials. The winning team consisted of Captain J. L. Smith, W. J. Iliffe, J. Methven, W. D. Nickerson, G. H. Cray, Fred Coles, F. Cave, J. E. Blockridge, E. Kelly and Donald Creighton.

Fifty-yard race, children under 6 years of age—Walter Costello, first; Frank Duguid, second.

sortment of annuals and perennials are coming in. A few lots of dahlias also are coming from outdoors. Cattleyas are shortening in supply and gardenias are just about sufficient for the demand.

Club Picnic Wet But Great.

Weather conditions in New England have been bad of late and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club annual picnic ran up against a rain storm July 27, for the first time in its history. From 11 a. m. to 12:30 p. m. a terrific thunder storm raged, rain falling in veritable sheets. However, the roomy gymnasium at Cunningham park, East Milton, gave ample shelter for everyone, and there a concert was given, with dances interspersed, until the rain ceased. This kept everyone in excellent humor. In spite of somewhat unfavorable weather, there was no noticeable falling off in attendance from former years.

After luncheon the numerous sports were all pushed through, with the exception of lawn tennis, the courts being too damp for effective play. The soccer football game proved an attractive feature and the players were well soaked with both perspiration and water from the numerous pools on the field when the game ended. John Miller's team well distanced their op-glossis, coreopsis, gaillardias, centaureas, candytuft, gypsophilas, larkspurs, etc.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, commenced throwing out his carnations this week, but will not start housing for at least a fortnight. He finds a ready market for large numbers of flowers at $10 to $20 per thousand. Field plants are making a splendid growth.

Araucaria imbricata, commonly called the monkey puzzle tree, is not frequently seen locally as a pot plant, but James McCormick, of Malden, is marketing a good number at present and finds a ready sale for them.

David Welch, of Welch's, returned from his vacation July 31, well bronzed and a few pounds lighter, as a result of strenuous exercise. Edward Welch left for Old Orchard, Me., on the same day for the month of August. At Welch's I noted splendid gladioli from Carl D. Hale, of Rowley; also excellent Beauties and valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Penn July 31 left by auto for a trip to Maine. Most of the time will be spent camping out. William Penn returned from his vacation July 31. Duncan Robertson, of the Penn staff, is spending his vacation camping; Julius Fagan is taking an auto trip; B. Friedman is in New York and A. L. Bock at Richmond, Me. Funeral orders have come in heavily of late.

The Budlong Rose Co., while its receipts have declined fifty per cent, still get some fine roses. Particularly good are Sunburst Sport, Ward, Stanley, Maryland and Ophelia. The company are trying several new roses this season, including Prima Donna, Mrs. W. R. Hearst and Montrose.

George Small, assistant manager at the Boston Coöperative Flower Market, is spending his vacation in company with John Lynch, assistant to J. M. Cohen, on Cape Cod.

Fred L. Sly, of South Stoughton, is having a successful season with asters and sweet peas, both of which now are selling readily.

The next regular meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held September 19. E. H. Forbush, state ornithologist of Massachusetts, will deliver a stereopticon lecture on "Birds and Their Value to Gardeners and Florists." The evening also will be observed as ladies' night.

A. R. Smith, of West Newton, is strong this season on bachelor's buttons, salpiglossis and Asparagus Sprengeri.

At the store of the Welch Bros. Co. a good volume of shipping is being done. Particularly fine now are Beauties, valley, gardenias, sweet peas, gladioli and asters.

Wax Bros. report that July has been an excellent month with them, funeral business being well ahead of that of the same month of 1915.

Robert Montgomery is not sending in many roses at present, but, while the supply and demand for these are at a lower ebb, he is marketing a grand lot of asters.

W. J. Cain, of Newtonville, still is cutting good larkspurs. He also has excellent asters and bachelor's buttons.

J. S. Philbrick, of Woburn, is in the market with a splendid lot of Kaiserin roses, which are eagerly picked up now.

Extra fine are the asters coming in from H. Zan Brunnen, of Auburndale. E. J. Ahearn, of Wellesley, the yellow marguerite specialist, and P. E. Green, of Quincy, also are shipping in good asters.

Among the shippers of fine outdoor gladioli are William Sim, of Cliftondale, who has several acres of these flowers; Tony Deluco, of the Brighton Conservatories; Burgess & Cooney, of Maplewood.

July has not given us quite so much rain as a year ago, but it was more widely distributed, and dark or cloudy days were easily in the majority. While we have lacked the intense heat from which the west has suffered, we have had a surfeit of uncomfortable days due to excessive humidity. The average temperature of the month has been considerably below the normal. July 29 the minimum fell as low as 48 degrees.

George W. Hamer, of the Flower Exchange, has been spending his vacation along the Massachusetts shore. Mr. Hamer was one of the most interested spectators at the late club picnic.

Henry R. Comley, of Park street, reports that while July business cannot be classed as strenuous, he had a good share of orders, especially for funerals.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

KARL P. BAUM.

ABILITY, energy, public spirit—these are among the essential qualities of the officers of a trade society. If there is any doubt as to whether these qualities are possessed by President Karl P. Baum, of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, let the facts of his career be noted. At the age of 21, after several years' experience in his father's greenhouses, he became manager of the Baum store, the Home of Flowers, in Knoxville, Tenn., and speedily developed it into one of the biggest and best flower palaces in the south. Meanwhile he expended some of his surplus vitality in his activities as a member of the Masonic fraternity, the Knoxville Board of Commerce, the Knoxville Rotary Club, the Knoxville Florists' Society, the Rotary Florists, the F. T. D. and the S. A. F. And, withal, he was not born till January 23, 1885; figure his age—or his youth.

like to get more variety if they were purchasable. Tuberous begonias, achimenes, gloxinias, tracheliums, auratum and speciosum lilies, browallias and al-lamandas are a few which could be used to advantage now. W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week there were few flowers that cut much of a figure and there was no business except the inevitable call for funeral work. This item has been abnormal because of the high humidity, the intense heat and the ravages of infantile paralysis.

In the wholesale cut flower market there has been no life and little supply, with the exception of asters and gladioli. These are arriving in sufficient quantities to dominate the market. Gladioli are down to summer prices, only the novelties being in demand. Few sold above $1 per hundred. Before another week the prevailing quotation will be 50 cents per hundred. America, Queen and the other novelties are in a class by themselves. The selected gladioli have been selling at $2 per hundred. The asters are improving daily and there already are heavy shipments arriving. Few of them as yet are desirable, except for the cheaper funeral pieces. A great improvement in quality is discernible.

Dahlias are here, earlier than expected, and meet with no demand. These will be more popular as the choice varieties arrive and will be the favorite flowers of the market at the time of the dahlia show, in September.

The few carnations that are perfect have been selling quickly at $1.50 to $2 per hundred. Most of the blooms, however, are practically worthless. Few of the large growers are shipping them, but their scarcity is helpful to the asters. Lilies made a fair advance during the week, the selected touching $6 per hundred, with $5 as an average quotation. Valley does not advance, although the supply is limited, $3 per hundred being the top price. Gardenias are here again and seem to be welcome. The Fifth and Madison avenues retailers are paying $1.50 per dozen, and from that down to 5 cents each.

There was a considerable advance in the price of orchids the last of the week, as high as 75 cents being quoted for gigas. From 75 cents down to 25 cents is the present range. There is the usual variety and quantity of outdoor flowers, with a few novelties among them.

The shipments of roses have diminished materially during the closing days of July. A week ago shipments to some of the wholesalers averaged thirty to forty boxes of roses daily; now not one-quarter of this quantity arrives, but it seems to be enough to go around. Little of the stock is first-class and the few selects bring top summer rates, an average of $5 per hundred. The short-stemmed blooms were selling July 29 at 50 cents to $1 per hundred. The top price for the best American Beauties is 20 cents. Few of the summer Beauties are worth 10 cents. The hot spell has been a menace to all roses and many arrive in poor condition. Russell and Paul Euler, of the higher grades, seem to be the favorites at present; also some fine Double White Killarney roses.

Various Notes.

To date there have been few bookings for the water trip to the Houston convention, but the present week perhaps will give an encouraging line on the dimensions of the party.

There is a new seed house in town. The location is desirable—87 Barclay street, one of the streets of the wholesale seedsmen, close to ferries, trolleys and elevated stations. Edward A. Peth and Frank Duggan are the members of the new firm. Both are well and favorably known to the trade. Mr. Peth for more than thirty-five years was with the original house of Bridgeman—an honored name here for a century. Lately he was associated with W. Elliott & Sons. Mr. Duggan has had twenty-five years of experience in the seed business.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. has completed the renovation and painting of its three large stores.

Frank Verona, formerly with C. C. Trepel and later associated with Steinhoff in a Philadelphia department store, now is with C. Abrams, of Brooklyn.

Miss Margaret Hamburger, with Woodrow & Marketos, leaves the city August 5 for a two weeks' holiday in the Catskills. Robert Woodrow has returned from a three weeks' rest at Delhi, N. Y. Samuel Woodrow is at Great Barrington, Mass., in charge of a large landscape contract.

OPEN LETTERS from READERS

HOUSES STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Are greenhouses lightning-proof, or nearly so? Can any of The Review's readers relate any experiences or offer any scientific theories in reply to that question?

It has always been our opinion, and that of most florists with whom we have come in contact, that, on account of glass being a nonconductor, there is little danger of the houses being struck by lightning. However, during the electrical storm on the night of July 24, a bolt of lightning struck different places on three of our greenhouses, breaking about a dozen panes of glass. There is a chimney within fifteen feet of the spots where the lightning struck, but the bolt missed this high point and landed in the greenhouses. What are the experiences or opinions of other florists with reference to this subject?

SMILAX AS A VEGETABLE.

I believe it is not generally known that the southern smilax so largely used by florists in decorations is eaten as a vegetable in some sections of the south. Some time ago, while carrying out development work on a large estate in the south, I became particularly interested in the large shoots thrown up by this species of smilax. These shoots resembled those of the edible asparagus, but were much larger. It seemed to me that the shoots could be served on the table like asparagus. I brought this to the attention of the colored chef employed on the estate, who had the reputation of being the champion in his particular line in that district. He told me that he frequently cooked and served smilax shoots to the estate's employees. I brought in a number of large shoots and had them cooked and served in the same way as asparagus. Really, I could not see much difference between the two.

LIKE THE WATERMELONS?

Vice-president R. C. Kerr, of the Society of American Florists, has been doing yeoman service in getting up "pep" and interest in the coming convention at Houston, and while we are all sure that Houston will prove an ideal host, I would like to remind all florists who contemplate attending the convention that Houston is in Texas and not Texas in Houston, and that the rest of us, located in different parts of the state, would also like to have a hand in entertaining you. It's only a matter of 200 miles to San Antonio, with its missions, soldiers, chile and hot tamales; only a short distance to Austin, our state capital, and although El Paso is not exactly in our near vicinity, a trip to that thriving border town would be of extreme interest to everyone—incidentally, it would be perfectly safe, although Mexico lies just on the other side of the Rio Grande. We believe that a general exodus to Texas will follow the convention, but we don't want you to concentrate in Houston. There is plenty of room for all, and the more of you who come, the better we will like it.

The cotton fields are in full bloom, fruits of all kinds are here for the asking, the carloads of the biggest, finest, most luscious watermelons that ever gladdened a ducky's heart are now moving—and mostly toward Houston. "Go thou and do likewise."

College Station, Tex.

HOUSTON, TEX.

We had another ideal week, with an occasional shower, but mostly cool, refreshing winds, which, from all reports, did not come from the northern and eastern states.

There was an enthusiastic meeting of the north Texas florists at Dallas July 17 and a meeting of the San Antonio florists July 24. At these meetings those present made known their intention of attending the S. A. F. convention at Houston this month, to greet the northern florists and see that the visitors enjoy themselves.

The Glenwood Florists were unusually busy last week with funeral work and state that business as a whole is good.

At a meeting of the Houston florists July 27 it was decided to make a display of native Texas plants and flowers, to give the northern florists some idea of what grows wild in the big Lone Star state.

The Cotney Floral Co. reports considerable funeral work and a good cemetery trade in summer flowers.

The Brazos Greenhouses had a good business for the week, mostly at the greenhouses. The downtown store has been closed for the summer.

Kerr, the Florist, had a week of good funeral work.
G. R. L.

San Antonio, Tex.—John Young, of New York, and R. C. Kerr, of Houston, respectively secretary and vice-president of the S. A. F., were visitors to the trade here recently. Nearly all the florists in this section of the state will attend the Houston convention.

Alvin, Tex.—Practically all the cape jasmine and Shasta daisy shippers here will be at the Houston S. A. F. convention to make the personal acquaintance of their northern customers. Carlisle & Son say they hope to have many visitors to the Alvin fields after the convention, as the distance is only a few miles.

Galveston, Tex.—A meeting of the trade here recently was held to plan the reception of the S. A. F. on the occasion of its excursion to the gulf on the closing day of the Houston convention. Galveston counts this the opportunity to return many friendly welcomes given Galveston florists when they have journeyed north.

Florence, S. C.—De Witt House, proprietor of the Palmetto Nurseries, recently made a unique design for the funeral of the oldest engineer on the A. C. L. road. He was in the service half a century and a charter member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, a member of the Pee Dee Division, No. 265. The brotherhood asked for one-half of a 4-foot locomotive driving wheel, in flowers, for the funeral design, this being an emblem of his occupation and of his half century of service. The shop mechanics made a frame for the piece, as no wire design would answer. The inscription on the rim was "One half century service;" on the base, "Pee Dee Division, No. 265;" on the left, "1865;" on the right, "1915." A feature that may be of interest is that the florist, Mr. House, is a member of the same division, having drawn a passenger train sixteen years on the same road.

SEWICKLEY, PA.

A well attended meeting of gardeners and florists was held Monday evening, July 17, at G. Wessenauer's Flower Shop, Broad street, Sewickley, to discuss the organization of a new society for this district. G. Wessenauer was temporary chairman and all present stated their intention of becoming members of the new organization. It was

ST. PAUL, MINN.

The Market.

Last week found the market in a precarious condition, as stock of all liabilities are $5,744.54 and assets placed at $200, the latter being exempt. Mr. Boardman for a number of years conducted the greenhouses and about four years ago operated a store in the Hotel St. Paul, later moving the store to East Sixth street, near Robert street. This store was closed about a year ago.

J. O. Ramaley, the oldest florist of St. Paul, recently left the St. Paul hospital and now is at his son's home, at Lake Minnetonka. Mr. Ramaley's condition is somewhat better. The Ramaley Floral Exchange has not been operated since Mr. Ramaley's removal to the hospital about six weeks ago.

REMEDY FOR ASTER BEETLES.

What is the best way to keep aster beetles away? There are two kinds that give us trouble. E. B.—Pa.

I do not know how you can keep away the aster beetles. The coal-black one is quite common and probably causes you the greatest trouble. You no doubt could get rid of these easily by spraying with arsenate of lead. This is an adhesive poison, but, unfortunately, it discolors both flowers and foliage so much that its use is practically out of the question. I have found that if the aster plants are sprayed with Paris green as soon as the beetles make their appearance, using the Paris green at the rate of one ounce to twelve and one-half gallons of water, the pests will be cleaned out without burning the plants. If any coloring at all shows on white flowers it is easily removed by dipping the flowers in clear water. C. W.

decided to name the body the Sewickley Horticultural Society. It was agreed that the membership be open to amateurs and anyone interested in horticulture.

The following officers were elected: President, G. Wessenauer; vice-president, R. Boxel; treasurer, William Thomson, Jr.; secretary, M. Curran; executive committee, A. Davidson, J. Carman, J. Barnett, William Thomson, Sr., and Charles Patton. The president named the following committee on by-laws: William Thomson, Jr., C. Patton and J. Barnett.

The society agreed to meet the second Monday of each month. That brings the next meeting on August 14, which will be held at Wessenauer's Flower Shop, at 8 p. m. All gardeners in the district are invited to attend and to bring their friends, thus helping to make the society a grand success from the beginning. M. Curran, Sec'y.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Unusually wet weather has made good outdoor flowers scarce. There are no sweet peas to be had at all. Asters are coming into the market, but they are not large and few pink ones are to be had as yet. Gladioli still are high-priced, bringing $6 per hundred at wholesale.

Various Notes.

S. E. Shaw is sending in some good asters in lavender and white. He reports business as being extremely dull. Mr. Shaw's right hand, which has been in a bad condition from blood-poisoning, is slowly recovering.

Edward M. Pierce has had the roof of his potting shed recovered. It has been a slow job, there being so much rain. Mr. Pierce has a house of fine asters coming into bloom.

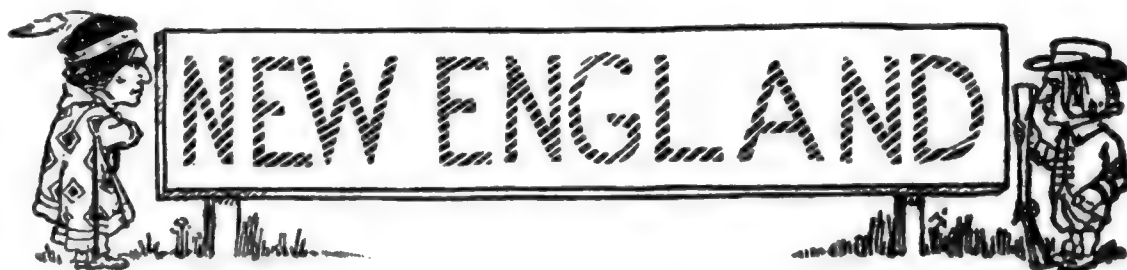

Business has been quiet with Ernest Chamberlain. His designer, Harry Kranzler, has gone on a two weeks' vacation.

Julius, the Florist, reports a dull week. A little funeral work is all that has kept business going.

Haverhill, Mass.—Announcement has been made of the engagement of Morris Yaffe, of Yaffe Bros., to Miss G. Josefur, of Charlestown. The marriage will take place the latter part of this month.

Hartford, Conn.—During the dog days, or, to be precise, during August, the florists of Hartford will close shop Saturdays at 1 p. m. Six o'clock is the closing hour on the other days of the week and Sundays none of the places will be open.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Carl C. Reck, of J. Reck & Son, has returned from a pleasure trip west, which included a sail on Lake Superior. Mr. Reck stopped off at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and participated in some of the usual stunts there, such as shooting the rapids in a canoe.

Worcester, Mass.—Hollis E. Pease is a defendant in two actions of tort entered in the Superior court. A woman has brought suit for $5,000, alleging that, while walking in front of Mr. Pease's store, an awning fell and struck her, injuring her severely. The woman's husband sues for $1,000 to cover medical expenses. The suits are returnable the first Monday in August.

Hartford, Conn.—Last month John W. Scott joined the ranks of the benedicts. The bride was Miss Ella Myers. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Scott left for a wedding trip to Canada and points in the west.

Somerville, Mass.—The reports of man-eating sharks in the waters off New Jersey's bathing beaches have recalled to J. W. Howard the hard 2-hour battle which he and his son, S. P. Howard, fought with a 300-pound shark on Cape Cod bay, off Manomet beach, on the morning of September 1, 1911. When the shark was sighted by the Howards, who had set out in a motor boat in search of it, a lobster hook baited with a hake and piece of porgy was dropped astern, at the end of sixty feet of strong clothesline. After some hesitation the man-eater swallowed the hook and bait. Thereafter the Howards were given an odd joy ride. The shark headed for the open sea "full steam" ahead, but at a distance of five miles from the shore it tired. Then followed one and a half hours of strenuous work in "playing" the monster. The big fish finally was killed with a knife and later taken to Somerville, where it was exhibited at the Howard residence.

OBITUARY

John W. Lyon.

John W. Lyon, senior member of the firm of Lyon & Anderson, Belvidere, Ill., died July 28 at the General hospital in Freeport, where he was taken a few weeks ago, suffering from a physical breakdown which developed into heart trouble.

Mr. Lyon was well known in this part of the state, was prominent in lodge and business circles, at one time was mayor of Belvidere, and was a member for a number of terms of the city council. For several years he has been associated in the florist business with his son-in-law.

Besides the widow, he is survived by three children, Allen Lyon and Mrs. Herb Anderson, both of Belvidere, and Mrs. Florence Hahn, of Elgin, and three grandchildren, John, Arthur and Violet Lyon.

The remains were brought to Belvidere July 29 and the funeral was held in the Methodist church, July 30. Interment was in Stockton, Ill., the former home of Mr. Lyon.

Richard H. Dunbar.

Following an illness that extended over several years, Richard H. Dunbar, for many years a retail florist and grower at Bristol, R. I., died at his home in that town July 28.

Richard Harker Dunbar was born in Bristol fifty-eight years ago, the son of the late Robert and Ruth (Coggeshall) Dunbar. His ancestors were prominent in colonial and revolutionary days. He attended the public schools of Bristol and in his youth was engaged in the grocery and market business. While still a young man he established himself in the greenhouse business at Bristol and for several years maintained a prominence in the business. He was one of the early members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and one of the active advocates and workers for the entertainment of the convention of the Society of American Florists in Providence in 1896. About three years ago his health was undermined to such an extent that he retired from active business. Mr. Dunbar was twice married, his first wife dying several years ago, leaving two daughters. The second wife, a brother and a sister survive him. W. H. M.

Royal Hodsden.

Notice comes from the Pacific coast of the death July 23 of Royal Hodsden, of Santa Monica, Cal., who for many years was associated with his half-brother, George Black, in the florists' business at Back Bay, Boston. The decedent was 62 years of age and is survived by four half-brothers, Edwin C. Black, of Jersey City, N. J.; George Black, of Falmouth, Mass.; Fred W. and Arthur N. Black, of Santa Monica, Cal.

E. W. Clark.

Announcement is made of the recent death of E. W. Clark, of New London, Conn. His demise was not unexpected, following an attack of grip during the Christmas holidays, from which he never recovered. Born in Perth, Scotland, in 1847, Mr. Clark came to America and shortly after entered the employ of the late John Spalding, later engaging in business on his own account. He was a citizen of New London almost half a century, well known and highly respected in the community. The business will be continued by the son, John E. Clark, who has managed the store end for several years. W. M.

Mrs. Theresia Kalisch.

Mrs. Theresia Kalisch, mother of John M. and Edward W. Kalisch, of St. Louis, Mo., died July 24, after an illness of ten days. She was treasurer of the Kalisch Bros. Floral Co. and well known to all in the trade. The funeral was held at Lupton's parlors July 27. Many of the trade attended and the room was completely filled with floral tributes. J. J. B.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

The hot wave at this writing continues and business suffers considerably. July 24 the official thermometer registered 98 degrees and July 30 the temperature was 115 degrees, on the street level. The extreme heat has cut off the demand as well as the supply. The exodus of people to the lake resorts has been large. Funeral work is the only outlet for the stock in the market.

Easter lilies lead the stock offered in the market at present, as they are of excellent quality. Roses are poor and carnations have disappeared entirely. Gladioli are plentiful and of fine quality. Chinese asters also are good. The variety and bulk of outdoor stock are smaller, owing to the lack of rain and the terrible heat.

Many of the local florists are taking advantage of the dull spell and are on vacation trips. Others are cleaning and redecorating their stores. Collections are coming in nicely.

Various Notes.

A visitor last week was Robert Hero, representing Zinn & Co., New York.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lanternier and daughters, Ruth and Hilda, motored to Paulding, O., last week. Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lanternier have gone to Lake James for a week's outing.

Will J. Vesey, Jr., has returned from a business trip to Peru, Ind.

The Doswell Floral Co. has its new rose house, 30x100 feet, near completion. The house will be planted to Hoosier Beauty and Russell roses and sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Shive, of the Flick Floral Co., and Mildred, Marguerite and Georgia Flick motored to Lake Wawasee July 30. R. F.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

F. I. Drake, of Pittsfield, Mass., leased his business to R. Engelmann, intending to retire. After a rest of nearly three years, however, he decided to return to his old love. He secured a handsome store in the center of the town, which is managed by Mr. Engelmann. Mr. Drake has the greenhouses, as formerly. He was giving "first attention" to a promising lot of chrysanthemums at the time of my visit.

L. W. Acheson, of Pittsfield, says funeral work has kept him busy, to the detriment of indoor planting. Outdoor work is about completed.

My old friend, F. L. Follwell, of Pittsfield, has the best wishes of all who know him on his recovery of his former health.

Frank Burfitt, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., observed that, like many others, he deferred building owing to the scarcity of labor. The situation now seems to be easing.

G. H. Sinclair, of Holyoke, Mass., is waiting for a further increase in values to dispose of his land here. He will remove to the new place at Smiths Ferry at the earliest opportunity.

The Beach Greenhouses, at South Hadley Falls, Mass., report a full share of the season's good things.

L. D. Robinson, of Springfield, Mass., has joined the ranks of the grangers by the purchase of a fine 45-acre farm, with an eye to the city growing in that direction. Gladioli in large quantities and of the finest varieties are among the specials set out.

J. W. Adams & Co., of Springfield, observed that this season has been one of the easiest for planting in their several years of experience in the nursery business, and they believe the trade will endorse this opinion. They have leased the glass devoted to flowering stock, finding that the nursery end demands their entire attention.

W. Schlatter & Son, of Springfield, are remodeling their store, adding a new McCray and a Gloekler refrigerator. These make a handsome appearance with the new show cases. The workroom is in the rear and the office and sanctum overhead.

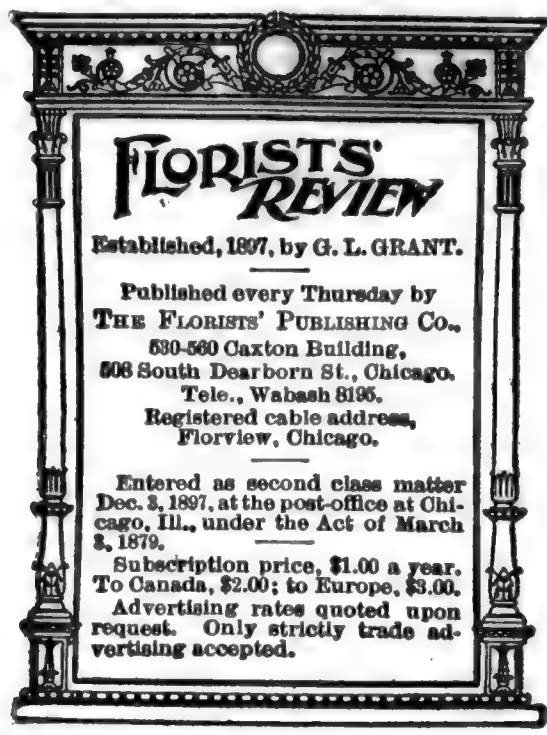

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, says both his stores are doing well. The greenhouses at Agawam are keeping up the good reputation made.

H. F. A. Lange, of Worcester, Mass., is making a good display of summer flowers at his fine store. Early closing is in vogue and is taken advantage of by all concerns, after such a long and busy season.

F. E. Keyes, of Worcester, is preparing for a busy fall. Mr. Keyes suffered a severe accident recently and is slowly recovering from its effects. It is hoped he will soon be himself again.

L. C. Midgley has disposed of his interests in the range at Westboro, Mass., and is giving his entire attention to the Worcester Conservatories, assisted by his two sons. Carnations and chrysanthemums are leaders. A catch crop of Tomato Comet planted June 2 is now—July 12—showing fruit. It is expected these will be cropped and cleaned out by the time carnations are ready to come in from the field. "Plants are doing finely," commented Mr. Midgley, "and so are the weeds."

Oscar Schultz, of Newport, R. I., was a visitor to the Hub at the time of my call, and remarked that this is his best season yet. W. M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1916: President, Daniel MacRorie, San Francisco; vice-president, R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha.

Thirty-second annual convention, Houston, Texas, August 15 to 18, 1916.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE newer delphiniums are winning wide popularity. Get some and watch the way your customers take to them.

GROWERS are taking the safe course by filling their coal bunkers during August. An acute car shortage is predicted for the autumn.

THE man who can offer a good batch of 6-inch to 8-inch Bostons in summer will bank a nice bit of quick money. Everybody has the stock in the autumn, and none in summer.

THE Floridans have gained nearly a monopoly of the asparagus business; while many growers still produce sprays in waste corners, few men can make asparagus pay its way as a greenhouse crop.

THE premium list for the exhibition of the Horticultural Society of New York, to be held November 9 to 12, has been issued and may be obtained by addressing George V. Nash, secretary, Bronx Park, New York city.

"WITH business good, why sell to the man who makes one wait unduly long for the money? There are plenty to sell to who pay promptly." It is a line of reasoning that has been heard of with increasing frequency in the trade of late.

THOMAS KNIGHT, of Knight & Struck Co., New York, states that the recent sale of the entire orchid collection of George Field, of Washington, D. C., to W. J. & M. S. Versey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was negotiated by Mr. Struck, of his concern. It was the largest deal in orchids ever consummated in America.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Clinton, Mass.—Hollis E. Pease has filed a petition in bankruptcy, in which he states that his assets are $40.23 and his liabilities $2,500.

St. Paul, Minn.—The Riverside Greenhouse Co., H. A. Boardman, proprietor, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The liabilities of the concern are placed at $5,744.54 and the assets at $200, the latter being exempt. The owner for a number of years conducted the greenhouses and about four years ago operated a store in the Hotel St. Paul, later moving the store to East Sixth street, near Robert street. This store was discontinued about a year ago.

TEXAS STATE CONVENTION.

L. J. Tackett, secretary-treasurer of the Texas State Florists' Association, asks The Review to remind its readers that the third annual meeting of the state society will be held at Houston on Monday, August 14, the day preceding the opening of the S. A. F. convention. The morning and afternoon sessions of the state body will be held in the banquet hall of the Houston City Auditorium. The evening session will be held in connection with a banquet in the roof garden of the Rice hotel.

"All florists," says Mr. Tackett, "in or out of the state, who contemplate attending the convention of the S. A. F., are invited to come early, so as to be with us August 14, to attend the convention of the Texas florists."

JULY BUSINESS EXCELLENT.

Perhaps nothing is so indicative of the condition of business as the record for July, normally one of the dullest months of the year in this trade. The report is quite general that sales in July set a new high mark for the month. The demand has been noticeably steady, in contrast to the spasmodic condition we have grown to expect during the summer.

And one of the curious features has been that business has improved as the weather grew hotter—the first part of the month was normal as to weather and nearly so as to business, but the latter part of the month was marked by one of the most prolonged heat waves, general over the country from the Rockies to the Alleghenies, that ever has been known. At many places heat records of from five to fifteen years' standing were broken, and yet business, comparatively speaking, was excellent, better and better as the month progressed. Notably, business was better than usual in the better class of stores, where flowers are sold at good prices.

The impression prevails that the business of August also will exceed all previous records for the month.

S. A. F. OPPOSES DUMPING.

William F. Gude, chairman of the tariff legislation committee of the S. A. F., at the request of Secretary Young, has taken up with members of the Senate finance committee the matter of that section of the new general revenue bill providing against the dumping into the American market of foreign merchandise. He told those of the members whom he saw that it was the desire of the florists of the United States that this section be enacted into law in its present shape. Supplementing these remarks, Mr. Gude has sent the following letter:

To the Finance Committee,
Hon. F. M. Simmons, Chairman,
U. S. Senate, Washington, D. C.
Gentlemen: As national representative of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, I wish to endorse "Title VII.—Unfair Competition," contained in the so-called "General Revenue Bill," now under consideration by your committee, and to urge that it be favorably recommended to and adopted by the Senate in its present form.

In this provision we see protection from unfair competition, of a type not generally known—where foreign producers of the various kinds of nursery stock, bulbs in particular, sell to growers in the United States on individual orders at ruling market prices, only to later "dump" into the auction houses the same class of merchandise at much lower prices. There then arises in respect to these a competition, unfair and detrimental to our interests.

Respectfully,

William F. Gude.

In addition to preventing, or rather prohibiting, dumping of such foreign merchandise and providing penalties for misdemeanors thereunder, the proposed law gives to any American business men whose interests are damaged by dumping of foreign goods the right to sue and to recover threefold damages for injuries.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The latter part of last week broke all records for heat in Chicago since July 21, 1901. Ordinarily the heat of summer means dull days for the florists, but when the mercury hits the extreme it is quite another matter. As stated last week, the market has been on the short side, but up to July 29 there was enough stock to supply the demand. With the culmination of the heat wave, however, the volume of funeral orders began to increase to a bulk never before experienced at this season. As a result everything and anything that can be used in funeral work has been snapped up at once, and it must be poor stock indeed that fails to clear. Not only the shipping trade, which is seldom other than good, but the local trade is active.

There are comparatively few good Beauties to be had, but these sell readily and at a fair price. Russell has enjoyed an even greater popularity than usual, because of its superior keeping

New Beauties are Ready in Quantity

WE now have a large supply of New Beauties that are excellent value at 4c, 6c, 8c, 10c, 12c to 16c, according to length. These of course are the short and medium stems that every flower store finds so readily salable. Quality is excellent. Order some today and more tomorrow; the cut is increasing and so will your sales.

THE BEST GLADIOLI

Of course we have America, King and Augusta, for these are the old favorites; but we made special preparations for the Gladiolus season by arranging for a large supply of the newer and different varieties, such as Myrtle, Golden King, Mrs. Pendleton, Primulinus Hybrids, etc. Of Myrtle we have a specially large quantity, as it seems to be a most popular shade of pink. The cut is heavy and will continue large through August.

FANCY ROSES

You will find it easy to keep up a summer business if you use such Roses as our Russell, Milady, Sunburst, Ophelia, Ward, Brilliant, etc. We have the largest supply of Roses in this market, the largest in America. Quality excellent for the time of year.

FANCY ASTERS

In spite of the dry weather, that has ruined many a crop, we offer good Asters—long stems, large, full flowers, grown under irrigation; all colors. We shall be glad to have you try them, for we know you will want more.

AURATUM,

These offer the largest show for the money any flower will make in summer. You can use them for almost every purpose, and you will do well to carry some always in stock, as we do.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

We can supply all the Valley you need—on telegraph order if need be, but why not arrange for regular shipments, so YOU will always have some on hand?

qualities. The supply, however, is short and it shows the effect of the heat, as do all roses. White Killarney is perhaps in largest supply and it is certainly the best seller of the Killarney family. Ophelia, too, is a good seller. Brilliant and Richmond are not popular as summer roses. The great difficulty in the rose situation has been to get the stock into the market before it pops open. This difficulty, great enough under normal summer conditions, was aggravated by the extremely high temperature last week, and the wonder was that the growers were able to get anything to the market in salable shape. With the advent of the cool breezes the opening of this week, growing conditions have been greatly improved and stock is beginning to exhibit a marked improvement in quality.

Valley is again the scarcest item in the market and enjoys a corresponding demand. Easter lilies, as a direct result of the increased funeral orders, are in great request and insufficient supply. Remarkably scarce for this season of the year are gladioli. There is little demand for cattleyas and the price is down. The supply, however, is still small and an order for a few dozen would send the price up again. A thin scattering of daisies may be found on the market, but they cut little figure. Carnations are about at the lowest ebb and, as a result of the dry, hot weather, the supply of good asters is extremely short. As this flower generally figures prominently during the summer months, its scarcity compels recourse to other garden flowers, of which there is an abundant supply. Auratum lilies, too, are brought into requisition to fill the gaps.

Greens, which are abundant, are enjoying a fair demand.

ninety-five, while the highest previous record was eighty-six per cent, in September, 1895. There were twenty-four days with 100 per cent sunshine, with two periods of nine and eleven consecutive days, respectively. The previous record for continuous sunshine was eight days, from September 27 to October 4, 1897.

Various Notes.

It is reported that since the hyacinth market went to pieces in Holland, following the British exclusion order, one salesman has placed 200,000 bulbs in the Chicago district, prices being what the buyer was willing to pay. Even if the figure is exaggerated, as such things usually are, the increase over the normal number of hyacinths forced for the needs of Chicago may produce an interesting situation if business is not good next spring.

Leopold Koropp, formerly well known in the trade here and recently operating as a gardener at Glencoe, filed a petition in bankruptcy July 31, scheduling liabilities of $2,994.12 and assets of $112.20.

Some years ago Mr. Koropp operated the store at 4509 Evanston avenue, now the Schiller north side branch. In December, 1912, the Koropp corporation, as it was then, went into the hands of a receiver and its affairs were wound up. Later Mr. Koropp located in Glencoe.

There are many reports that gladioli, like some of the asters, were burned up by the heat last week, but C. S. Clausen says his gladioli at Wichert have not suffered especially, although they are a week later than last year. He predicts that a considerable proportion of the later gladioli, now thought to have been injured, still will bloom satisfactorily.

That Monroe street east of State eventually will be the best retail flower section of the city is George Wienhoeber's belief; he says it will become such the moment the Illinois Central opens the long-talked-of Monroe street station. There already are eight flower stores within one block from the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street.

No great rush of business is expected in July, but E. Wienhoeber comments that sales last month exceeded those of the same month in any previous year at his establishment. The same was true of each of recent months.

According to C. L. Washburn, Bassett & Washburn now have 36,000 young Beauty plants benched. He says they have stood the intense heat of the last week remarkably well, as they have received plenty of ventilation. Mr. Washburn says he noticed as never before the difference between the low-ridged old houses and the high-ridged new houses. The latter are so much cooler that the plants grown in them are far stronger and healthier than those grown in the former. Erne Anderson, floor manager, has gone to Michigan with his family for a vacation.

Returning from a trip to California, Mrs. W. J. Smyth and Miss Smyth now are visiting in Colorado. They will return to Chicago about August 15. During their absence Mr. Smyth has been sticking close to the store, where July business has been the best ever in spite of extensive remodeling operations. Mr. Smyth had the Moore funeral at Lake Geneva, the largest order of the summer.

An expression of opinion as to what varieties of roses are making good during the hot weather is timely and acceptable. Felix Reichling, in charge of the Peter Reinberg salesrooms, says that within the range of his experience and observation, Russell is the best summer rose in commerce. Next to this he would place Maryland. He likes Ophelia, but does not think much of it as a hot weather variety. Sunburst he considers fair, though not as good as Milady.

In future, Emil Reichling, superintendent of the Peter Reinberg greenhouse ranges, when seen on the street will be found sitting behind the steering wheel of a 7-passenger Buick touring car.

That he would not have believed last week's business possible under the weather conditions is the statement of John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co. The shipping trade was much the heaviest the house ever has known in July. After a fortnight at Woodruff, Wis., A. C. Kohlbrand returned July 29 and next day went to South Haven after Mrs. Kohlbrand, who had been taking treatment there for rheumatism. Bert Cole could endure, John Sinner, of Sinner Bros., thought he would find out if he was losing any of his strength and endurance. So he hied him to the greenhouses and tackled the heaviest work he could find—clearing and refilling benches. All through the hot days he worked, and with the return of the cool breezes he again appeared on the market, still smiling.

Enchantress and White Enchantress still hold first place, in the opinion of Fred Schramm, of Park Ridge, vice-president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association. To his way of thinking the Enchantress is the best family of carnations for commercial purposes, as its members are rapid and prolific growers, good shippers and good keepers. His favorites next in order are Ward and White Perfection. He has just finished planting six benches of carnations and expects to be entirely through with that work in three weeks.

Frank Seiler, 1835 Birchwood avenue, Rogers Park, has been missing from his home since July 11. Mr. Seiler operated a greenhouse and was in comfortable circumstances. At the time of his disappearance he had more than $200 with him. He was 33 years of age, weighed about 145 pounds, was five feet six inches in height and of light complexion. Police search has been unavailing.

Visitors.

Among those who visited the market last week was F. J. Foster, St. Louis. He says Chicago has it on St. Louis when it comes to heat and—this is a confession—he was amazed at the activity of the Chicago wholesale flower district July 27, the hottest day the city has experienced in five years. He said he was at a loss to account for it.

Members of the trade were visited this week by Miss Hardesty, of Hardesty & Co., Columbus, O.

Among the week's visitors was Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, and his wife.

George Crabb, of the Crabb & Hunter Floral Co., was a visitor on the market this week.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

When Pittsburgh sweltered last week, with the temperature at 90 degrees, the interest in the cut flower business fell off and trade showed more of a summer condition than at any other time this year. Roses have fallen off considerably in supply and those coming in are either open or ready to blow. Carnations are likely to disappear entirely this week. Lilies, cattleyas, Beauties and fancy gladioli are the best of the stock. Asters are fair, but the large late ones have not made their appearance.

The retail stores appear somewhat empty, many of the employees being

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is cutting some fine cattleyas.

The growers are busy. It is necessary to keep the field men on the job with the hose, in order to keep the ground loose during the dry weather. The emptying and repairing of houses has been warm work the last two weeks. In some cases the planting of carnations is going right along. Labor troubles seem to be easing up and the growers are able to get the much needed help for the heavy work.

How Much are Dead Flowers Worth?

There is no market for them except the garbage can. And that means not only loss of sales and profits, but it represents money out, because you must pay for your stock whether you sell it or throw it away.

If you could realize on all the blossoms that now wither in stock and are discarded, think how much your profits would increase by stopping this loss. And at no additional overhead or expense.

You can do it with a

Steinhauser Florist & Nursery Co., of Pittsburg, Kan., stopped off on his way home from the east. Clarke.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

Fine gladioli are the feature of a dull market. America, Panama, Mrs. Francis King, Augusta, May, Pink Beauty, a deep purple and a silver pink, are the leading varieties. They do not bring fancy prices, but the average price is far better than that of a year ago. Most of the fine stock sells at from $3 to $4 per hundred. Asters come next in numbers and in popularity—when they are good. The first of the midseason varieties are coming in; they show an improvement in quality. Pink is the scarce color. White asters are quite plentiful; purple fairly so. Easter lilies are in moderate supply and fair demand, at good prices for the season. Kaiserin is scarce and sells well. My Maryland is more plentiful and also in request. Valley is scarce. Orchids are becoming scarcer; most of them are Cattleya Gaskelliana. The rest of the market merits little comment.

Xavier E. Schmitt explained that the east end planting was intended to represent a color chart. The so-called east end planting in Fairmount park lies between Horticultural hall and the grassy slopes that stretch down to the Schuylkill. The flower beds are laid out on a great oval grass plot, drive-encircled. The beds immediately opposite the broad stone steps that descend from the hall are of echeverias, up to the great musician's statue, and of geraniums beyond it. To the right and left are the color chart beds. They are formed of red and white and of blue and yellow and, most startling of all, of yellow, pink and yellow.

It is interesting to note that coleus and alternantheras have been discarded entirely. Mr. Schmitt says the former is too ragged and the latter too slow in growth and coloring. For red, Achyrantes Lindenii is used; for white, Centaurea delicatissima; for blue, the dwarf ageratum—I missed the name of the variety. The startling beds of yellow, pink and yellow, reminding you of the delicate yellow frocks that the pretty girl wears, adorned with pink roses or pink ribbons, is planted in this way: Center, Canna Mrs. Wallace, the only canna used in these beds, surrounded by the pink achyrantes, Victor Brossilon, edged by the yellow achyrantes, Philadelphia. This lovely achyrantes is a free grower, with green foliage that colors charmingly to a golden yellow. It is said to be a sport in Fairmount park and is named Philadelphia by Mr. Schmitt, a name he always gives, when possible, to his pet progeny. The general effect of the east end planting is fine. This description of the color idea will be much better understood when seen.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid is an important factor in the wholesale flower market at present. His gladioli, asters, Kaiserin and My Maryland roses are excellent. Mr.

Producing Baskets is Child's Play

There are thousands of basket makers in the country that can make any sort of a basket you want; any color desired can be put on them by a painter; any designer can give you the shape or style desired, but what will these cost you when they are finished?

In the Neidinger factory you have all these skilled hands so trained that baskets of all styles can be made and put on the market at such low prices as to cause the remark to be passed, "They are losing money on their baskets." Yet we go on increasing our force until now we have the largest basket shop in the florist supply business. We are still turning out large quantities of the newest styles and still selling at the supposed ridiculously low prices. We are not getting rich, but we are making a profit; at any rate you are not interested in what profit we make or if we make any. So here goes for another of Neidinger's new creations and still at the low figure.

market was short of roses. Beauties, in fact all varieties of roses, diminished in supply owing to the fervid heat. Russell roses are holding up better than any other variety. Although Francis Scott Key roses are few and good, they do not move well; there is little demand for red roses at this time of the year.

Valley as yet has not increased in supply and there seems to be only an occasional demand for it. Easter lilies are more abundant and in better demand. The reason is that at the present time they are the best flowers obtainable for design work. Sweet peas are about done for—the blooms that are to be had are of poor quality. Snapdragon and daisies also are on the wane. Some good gladioli are to be had, but the supply does not seem to be as heavy as last year. The quality remains satisfactory. Garden flowers are limited in supply, comprising gypsophilas, candy-tuft, coreopsis and gaillardias. Corn-flowers are still plentiful. The asters seen are short and small, but they seem to sell nevertheless. Lilium roseum are becoming quite plentiful, but the sales of these could be more numerous. A few auratum lilies may be seen. Greens are more than sufficient, particularly plumosus. None of it is moving rapidly.

New Roses Now Coming In

Business is brisker than it was twelve months ago, but the advantage is completely offset by the frantic state of the labor market. There has been no rain whatever since July 2 and the temperature a fortnight ago was so high that some of the men had to leave their work.

Orchids hold their own and command a good market, but transportation of all stock is difficult just now, carnations proving almost hopeless carriers and valley often disappointing long-distance customers.

The Market.

Business as a whole was more brisk last week than that of the week previous, all the florists reporting a large number of funeral orders. At this writing we still are having extremely hot weather. Minneapolis has had but little rain and outdoor flowers are commencing to burn more or less.

The flower stores are filled with a variety of flowers. Gladioli predominate at present and many fine varieties have been shown this week. Dahlias are coming in and it is reported that fine blooms soon will be offered. There now are some fine roses, making from $2 to $8 per hundred. Lilies are plentiful and many fine rubrums and auratum have been noticed. The lilies are in great demand for funeral work and are making from $4 to $6 per hundred. Daisies, asters, sweet peas, gaillardias, coreopsis and bachelor's buttons are in abundance.

Various Notes.

F. E. Boyes, for some time manager of the greenhouses of the Lakewood Cemetery Association, July 22 severed his connection with the organization. Mr. Boyes sailed August 2 on the steamer Adriatic for England. He leaves many good friends in the Twin Cities.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. reports business as being good. This concern does a large quantity of funeral work and has a good retail and wholesale trade. Courtesy to all customers and a desire to please is the motto of the staff. Seven of the greenhouses have been sold and are being torn down, but fall stock is being planted in the remaining houses. There is a splendid stock of roses and good cuts of such varieties as Milady, White Killarney, Ophelia, Russell, My Maryland, Kaiserin and Sunburst. At present heavy daily cuttings are being made of My Maryland. Fine carnations are in evidence, though the hot weather is drying them up rather badly.

Wessling's greenhouses are undergoing many improvements, including the installation of electric lights throughout the houses. Business has been good of late, the last week seeing much funeral work. A fine lot of late chrysanthemums are coming in, as well as Boston ferns, Mrs. Francis King

The Market.

Business during July was not so good as that of July of previous years. This was due to the extremely hot weather we had during the last three weeks. Retailers report that funeral work only keeps them going. Rain is needed badly and outdoor stock is suffering greatly. There is little change in market conditions. Gladioli advanced in price and now sell at $4 and $6 per hundred. The demand has been large and a few days saw clean-up sales of these. The market is not crowded. Roses are selling well, but there is a scarcity of first-class stock. Asters are in big demand, but the local stock is poor. White and purple sell most easily, at $3 per hundred. Single, everblooming tuberoses will be scarce this season, owing to the excessively hot and dry spell. Sweet peas are a thing of the past. There are plenty of lilies, but valley is somewhat scarce. Greens are plentiful. The demand for smilax and asparagus has been large.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its most important meeting of the year Thursday, August 10. This meeting will be held on the grounds of the John T. Davis estate. Automobiles will convey the members to the place. S. A. F.

The board of aldermen passed a bill last week for the planting of trees at the expense of property owners. The bill provides for the establishment of a benefited area, in which property may be assessed for planting. One section of the bill gives Forester Jules Koenig the right to determine where the trees are needed most and to specify the kind to be planted.

David Geddis, for the last three years head of the flower department at Vandervoort's, resigned July 29. He will devote all his time to the interests of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., of which he is president. The new company has rented desk room at 1322 Pine street until the new building is completed.

an operation performed on his right hand for a bone felon. Herman is a daily visitor to the wholesale market.

Otto Sanders, decorator for Mullanphy's downtown store, has a small tract of land in Webster Groves on which he grows outdoor stock. At present his specialty is a fine cut of gypsophila, which he has no trouble disposing of.

Grimm & Gorly had a charming window display last week. They used large vases and baskets of gladioli in various colors and had a background of Cibotium Schiedeii.

Miss Marie Richardson, designer for Thomas Carr, the Union Market florist, left last week for a two weeks' vacation. She is visiting friends in the western part of Missouri.

Fred Foster spent a few days last week in Chicago. He said Chicago has nothing on St. Louis when it comes to heat.

Fred C. Weber, Sr., is spending a few days with his son, Herman Weber, of Chicago, trying to escape the heat, but he ran right into it, according to weather reports.

David Geddis, chairman of the transportation committee for the trip to the S. A. F. Houston convention, would like to hear from all contemplating going to the meeting. The names should be sent in at next week's club meeting.

On postals to friends here Alexander Siegel says he is having a splendid time on Mackinac island. He tells of the fine fish he is catching and says he keeps posted on what is doing in St. Louis by reading The Review.

Horace Lloyd, head of the Shackelford Nursery Co., says he has had great success with his outdoor stock this season. Gladioli and the new Alaska daisies are great sellers at present. They expect to double the present output next season.

Count Von Hoffman says he is not satisfied with the defeat of his ball team at the picnic and contemplates sending a challenge to Manager A. Gumz, of the wholesalers, for a return game sometime this month.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The extreme heat of last week made it difficult to procure good flowers.
Roses of local production are showing the effect of the lateness of the season and are undesirable. The northern stock fails to ship well and reaches here in a condition that makes it unfit for sale.
It is indeed difficult at times to rustle up a sufficient quantity of good stock to make a showing.

It is considered remarkable the way carnations hold their own. True, they are small, but their quality is far better than in any previous year, according to growers and retailers. In this market gladioli still predominate and every store has them on display in profusion.
Valley is largely poor and one no longer sees in any quantity valley of the quality common before the exportation of pips from Germany became difficult.

Washington has had far too much rain, and as a result the aster crop is going to prove a great disappointment.
The asters are small, of poor quality and are not expected to amount to much.
Asters will be replaced by dahlias, which give promise. In many respects, however, these are not so desirable.

Various Notes.

Z. D. Blackistone, who has been spending the summer on his farm on Piscataway creek, near Fort Washington,
Md., found it necessary to bring his son,
Demineu, to the city last week for a physical examination. It seems that while the youngster was playing about the farm he fell from a loft and injured his arm. While Mr. Blackistone is away, Miss Ballenger is in full charge of the business at Fourteenth and H streets, northwest. David Hopkins is spending his vacation taking automobile trips through the nearby country.

Harry Kennelly, who is employed by the Gude Bros. Co., and George Gould-man, who is with George C. Shaffer, are spending the week at Atlantic City, having motored to the seaside resort.

Among the visitors of the week was Walter Garbett, representing the California Cut Flower & Evergreen Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., who has been traveling through the country since April 1.

At the time of that accident, however, Mr. Bickings was in the store of George C. Shaffer effecting a delivery of plants, and so escaped unhurt. C. L. L.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

There has been little change in business conditions since the last report. The last two days of the week brought the most business and flowers suitable for funeral pieces were in most demand. There is little variety to choose from. Roses, asters, lilies and gladioli form the bulk of the supply.

Roses generally are poor, but asters are coming in of somewhat better quality and the good ones sell well. There was a surplus of short stock, which was sold at a low figure. Gladioli have sold more easily. Lilies have moved well, being the only good stock for funeral work available. There still is a bountiful supply of greens, which meet with a moderate demand.

Various Notes.

George Asmus, of Chicago, last week visited the city in his machine, accompanied by a party of friends. He stopped here with the intention of getting a glimpse of the German undersea freighter lying in the harbor, but after securing a launch and cruising around for the better part of an afternoon his efforts were rewarded only with a view of the many barges that surrounded the submarine.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. B. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE first of the 1916 French bulbs reached New York August 1, having left Marseilles July 13.

THE French still will be able to send us some radish, but not nearly so much as in normal years.

VISITED CHICAGO: Ralph M. Ward, New York; Lawrence S. Payn, representing Simon Louis Freres & Co., Bruyeres-le-Chatel, France.

THE big explosion in New York harbor July 30 broke the plate glass in the seed store windows of Stumpp & Walter Co. and Peter Henderson & Co.

THERE has been something brewing that will interest all who buy or sell bulbs, particularly those who sell them. The details may be ready for an announcement next week.

A PARTNERSHIP in a seed business has been formed by Edward A. Peth and Frank Duggan, two widely known seedsmen of New York city, who have leased premises at 87 Barclay street.

WILLIAM KELWAY, eldest son of James Kelway, who has several times visited the trade in America on behalf of his firm, Kelway & Son, Langport, England, has been appointed magistrate for his county, Somerset.

APPRAISERS of the estate of the late W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, have filed an inventory in the office of the registrar of wills at Doylestown, Pa., which appraises the estate at $1,211,990.62, including real estate valued at $298,450.

THE pea crop in Wisconsin is a light one. Growers are taking in peas at different growing stations throughout the state and report the quality excellent. Peas are a better sample than they have been for two years, but the yield has been cut and there will be a short crop harvested in Wisconsin.

THE Holland bulb exporters are more concerned over finding a market for hyacinth than for tulip or narcissus bulbs. While not meaning to disturb advance orders, quotations are being made to those who can use a quantity of bulbs that make hyacinths look cheaper than anything the trade can handle this season.

BEANS in Michigan are being hurt by the hot, dry weather, but up till last week the crop was growing well and the prospects good. If Michigan is fortunate in getting some good showers during the next few days, it will help the bean crop considerably; otherwise there will be a great deal of damage done, as the plants are just beginning to bloom. The next week or ten days will tell the story in regard to the bean crop.

FREE SEEDS TO CONTINUE.

If the Senate adopts the recommendations of its representatives among the conferees which have been considering the various amendments to the Agricultural Appropriation Bill, it will withdraw its objections to the free seed appropriation and there again will be spent this year the sum of $252,540. This paragraph was stricken out by the Senate committee on agriculture, and its action was ratified by the Senate itself, but, as has been the case in past years, the House conferees have stuck to the purpose of providing this petty graft for its members and the Senate is to recede.

A worthy appropriation of $3,000, for the coöperation of the Department of Agriculture with horticultural organizations in the standardization of botanical names, will be withdrawn, it being objected to by the House conferees. "Pure Seed" investigations will use $28,700 and there is to be expended $11,690 on the department's grounds in Washington, and $70,400 for foreign seed and plant introduction and investigations. CHICAGO SETS ARE LIGHT CROP.

Louis Bloom, one of the best known and best liked seed representatives on the road and a man who has had a great deal of practical experience in growing and marketing seeds and produce, has taken over the eastern and southeastern territory for the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago. This territory was formerly worked by Mr. Sutherland, who is no longer with the company. Mr. Bloom has been working other territory for the Leonard Seed Co. for many years and handling its large jobbing trade.

The Leonard concern has just concluded a convention of traveling men, during which the travelers went over the trial grounds and fields of onion sets. It is the custom of the Leonard Seed Co. to take the men into its confidence and have them examine carefully all trials and growing crops, so that

FREESIAS

Our crop of bulbs grown in California now is ready for delivery, and the bulbs are of exceptional quality, ranging in size from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. The mixture offered includes several shades of yellow, orange, lavender and pink, all harmonizing with each other when bunched together.

Rainbow Freesias are great money-makers for all florists, whether they grow for their own retail trade or for the wholesale market. Splendid sellers at top prices. Moreover, the habit of plant is branching, each bulb giving two to three flower spikes with stems long enough for all floral purposes.

$5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000; $187.50 for 5000.

(Note.—Because of the branching habit, Rainbow freesia will give twice to three times as many flowers per bulb as will Purity or refracta alba.)

Every jobber and catalogue house that has a trade calling for high-class novelties should write at once for terms on Rainbow. Freesia bulb growers write for prices on planting stock (bulblets).

THE NUISANCE

THE afternoon was cool and calm, and I was quietly working on my books, being the only one in the office where I was employed. Many customers came in and out, and in this way I met many hundred people. The Nuisance, or the would-be man, came into the office to order some flower pots. I knew his name was on the books for several years as "slow pay," so I agreed to advise him by mail if order could be filled. Well, this was when he started after me—about ten years ago. Goodness me! he called personally five times in three days; he camped on the hall steps for me while I was at lunch. He finally told me he wished I would accept an invitation to Coney Island. He certainly did not look good to me, and I said—"No, thank you!" That did not faze him in the least—he haunted me like a nightmare, trailing — they are well posted on conditions and able to give their customers valuable information when they call. In spite of the temperature being 100 degrees in the shade, the travelers tramped the onion set fields and proved themselves to be more able to stand hot weather than is the militia on the border. A. H. Smith, treasurer, who was with them, states that it was one of the best meetings the company has ever held.

Mr. Smith reports, as a result of this inspection, that the onion set acreage this year around Chicago is much reduced and, in addition to that, the crop was badly damaged early in the season by wet weather and the maggots ate the sets quite badly, leaving spaces and skips in the rows, so that, with the best weather conditions from now until they are pulled, onion sets will be a light crop. Prices may be expected to be correspondingly higher this season. The quality around Chicago promises to be good, as the last two or three weeks the weather has been dry and hot, which has a tendency to make good-keeping sets. If there is not much rain during the next ten days or two weeks, Chicago should harvest choice, small, good-keeping sets of the finest quality, although the crop will be a small one.

PREPAREDNESS IN BEANS.

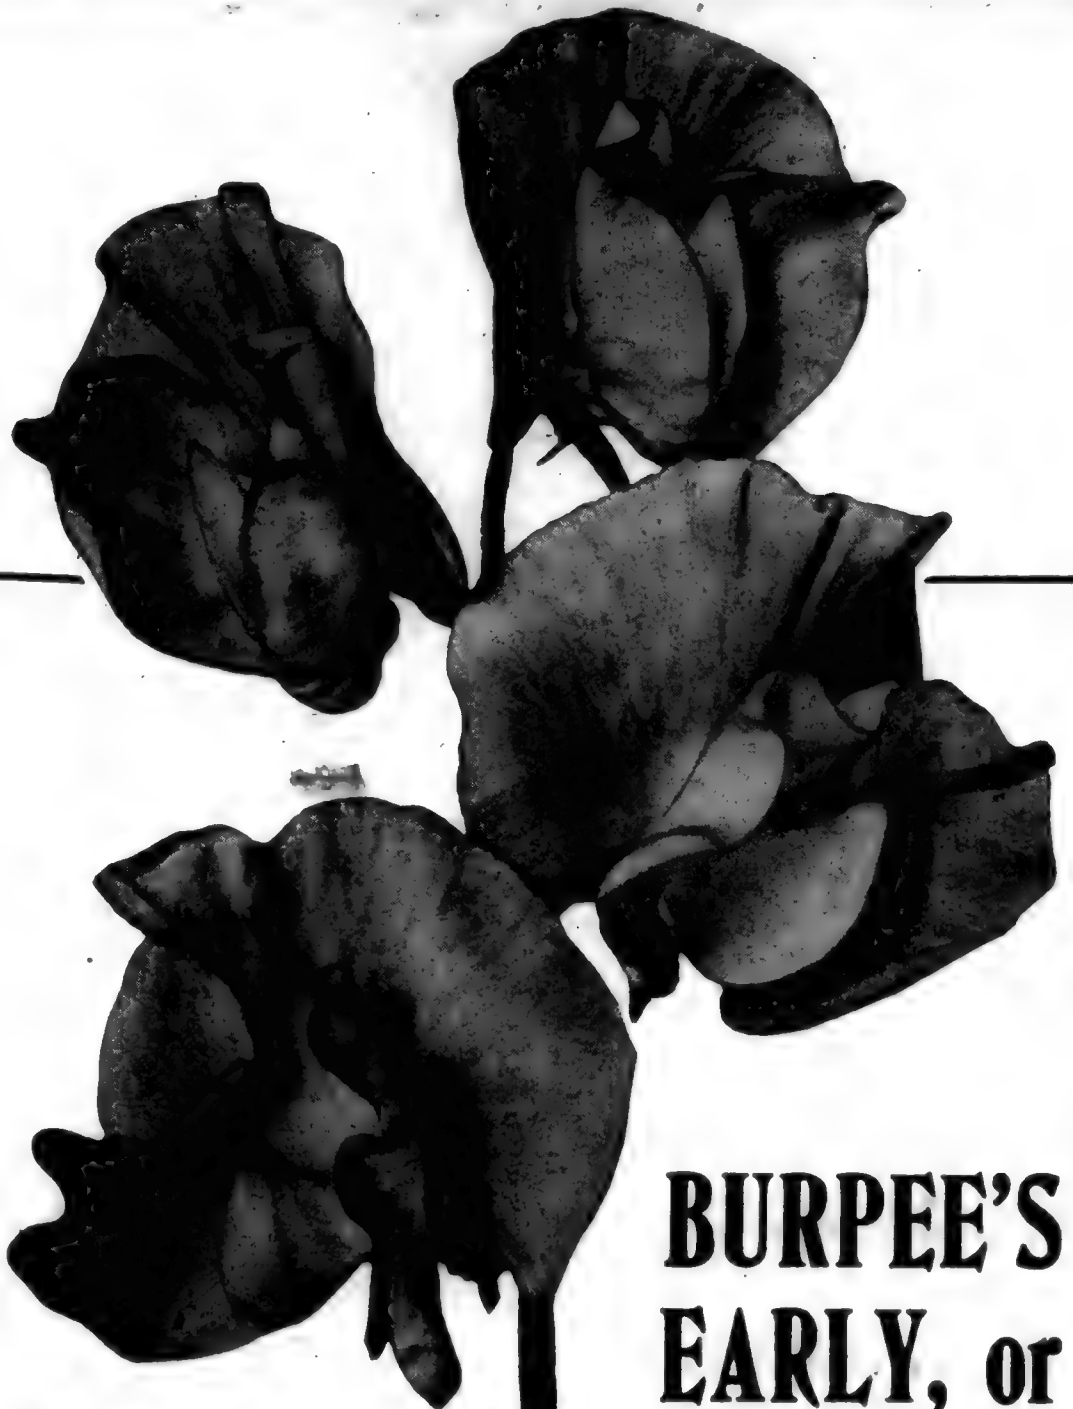

For the preparedness parade at San Francisco July 22, an attractive window display was put in by T. C. Holmes, of C. C. Morse & Co., at their Market street store. The central figure was a flag of the United States, 8x8 feet, in the national colors, made entirely of seeds. Beans were used for the most part. Tepary beans formed the white background, Refugee beans the brown frame, and Six Weeks beans were used for the yellow pole of the flag. The red of the flag was made of Valentine beans, the white of Tepary beans, and the blue of blue gum seed colored slightly. The word "Preparedness" was formed of eucalyptus or Rostrata seed. H. S. DANISH SEED CROPS.

Axel Knudsen, American representative of one of the principal Danish seed growers, has just received the following June crop report from his principal:

Dill.—We have planted out more than sufficient ground to secure full delivery of all our contracts under normal conditions. The plants are so far well above the ground, but of course it is impossible to form any judgment of the crop we may expect at the present writing.

Carrots.—A normal crop cannot be expected. There has been a severe loss in the root-pits during the winter, and at present we can predict only a medium crop of most varieties, while Carrot Amsterdam, Nantes and Paris

BURPEE'S EARLY, or Winter-flowering Spencers

[The House of Burpee has long been recognized as American Headquarters for Sweet Peas, and our introduction of these Fordhook Strains of Winter-flowering Spencers marks an era in commercial Sweet Pea growing.]

[The novelties offered below, excepting Yarrowa, are the results of crosses made at our Fordhook Farms during the past seven seasons. All stocks are grown at our Floradale Farm, "The California Home of Sweet Peas."]

Fordhook Pink and White A most popular Winter-flowering Spencer. A color that is always in demand, similar to the old Blanche Ferry. Bright rosy pink standard, wings almost pure white. The immense flowers measure 2½ inches in diameter and are perfect in form. A very early, free and continuous bloomer, awarded a Certificate of Merit at the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915, and of the American Sweet Pea Society, San Francisco, June, 1916. ¼ oz., $1.25; ½ oz., $2.00; oz., $3.50.

Fordhook Pink This is a distinct shade of pink, suffused with lavender throughout. Flowers are large size, exquisitely waved, produced in threes and fours on long stems. ¼ oz., 40c; ½ oz., 75c; oz., $1.25; ¼ lb., $3.50; ½ lb., $6.25; lb., $12.50.

Fordhook Rose Introduced by us in 1915. Flowers of largest size, usually borne in threes and fours. A charming shade of rosy carmine. Awarded a Certificate of Merit at the International Show, New York, March, 1915, and the Spring Show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, March, 1915. ¼ oz., 50c; ½ oz., 85c; oz., $1.50; ¼ lb., $4.00; ½ lb., $7.50; lb., $15.00.

Yarrowa This magnificent Australian variety has proved its unusual merit with commercial growers in all parts of the country. It has an exceptional reputation as a sure money-maker. First exhibited by us at the great International Show in New York, March, 1914, and awarded a Certificate of Merit by the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, March, 1915. Flowers exquisitely waved, averaging 2½ inches in diameter, many of them being duplex or double. A bright rose-pink, with a clear, creamy base. ¼ oz., 35c; ½ oz., 60c; oz., $1.00; ¼ lb., $2.75; ½ lb., $5.00; lb., $10.00.

Market will produce only a small crop.

Cauliflower.—The growth of the plants has been considerably retarded on account of a cold and late spring. It will largely depend now upon weather conditions during the summer and especially next fall, how big a crop we may expect. An early frost in September can destroy the brightest crop prospects.

Cabbage.—There will be a shortage in all late varieties, because large acreages had to be plowed up, owing to a severe frost in December, which destroyed the plants. However, the early varieties, as Danish Summer Ballhead, Copenhagen Market and Glory of Enkhuizen, may turn out comparatively good.

Red Cabbage.—Conditions are about the same as for late cabbage; only small acreages have come through the winter and the harvest will consequently not be considerable.

Savoy Cabbage.—Will be very scarce.

Pointed Cabbage.—Came poorly through the winter. The crop will be small, with the exception of Express and Winningstadt, of which we may expect a good medium crop.

Brussels Sprouts.—Will produce a good medium crop.

Kohl-rabi.—The weather conditions ever since last fall have been severe on all kohl-rabis and the plants are therefore at present much behind in growth, so we can only count on a medium crop.

Garden Turnips.—Do not look promising at present, with the exception of Snowball, the crop of which will be fairly good.

Field Turnips.—A number of our fields have suffered from a severe frost, but we expect an average crop.

Rutabaga.—One-third of the acreage planted out has been plowed up. The rest has suffered to some extent from insects; consequently the crop will be small.

Beets.—A large part of the planting stock of beets had been destroyed last October by a heavy frost, which came about suddenly and unexpectedly. The acreages have consequently been reduced and the crop will undoubtedly be short.

Mangel-wurzel.—Has suffered greatly during the winter in the pits and we expect that fifty per cent will be lost. The roots have just been planted out and we can give no definite information at present in regard to the crop.

Radishes.—Were ravaged by earth fleas and a large part of the acreages had to be plowed up. Conditions in this respect have changed to the better lately, but it is too early to predict anything in regard to the crop.

Parsley.—With chervil, this crop has

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

Or Winter Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters, and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for Autumn planting on graves, and for very early bedding, as well as for early cut flowers.

- 14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
- 15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark blue eye.
- 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
- 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
- 18. MIXED.

The above four colors, with other shades and variations.
Each color separate or mixed.

Spinach.—Fall sowings were completely destroyed during the winter and, owing to a scarcity of the stock seed, the acreages sown this spring are probably not as large as under normal conditions. The plants are developing well at present, but it is too early to say anything definite about the expected crop, because this depends largely upon weather conditions during the period of growth and harvest.

Kale.—Will apparently give a good medium crop.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

As we are in the midst of summer vacations, business suffered considerably last week, except on Saturday, when funeral work kept most of the florists active. The retail stores in general are extremely quiet. Exceedingly hot weather continues, and the crops, except where there are irrigating systems, are suffering greatly from lack of water.

Outdoor stock is arriving more slowly. Asters, which are just beginning to reach the market, are unsatisfactory, being short-stemmed and small. Most growers have turned their carnations out in the open; consequently they are small and in many cases are burned. They retail at 15 to 50 cents per dozen. It is a hard proposition to handle roses just now. They open fast and are quickly rendered unsalable. Good American Beauties are on the market, but their prices are low. A good supply of Easter lilies arrives, but they are soft and small. There is little demand for valley. Some good Mrs. Francis King, America and Niagara gladioli arrive daily and sell well. Orchids do not move fast. Sweet peas are a little off crop and many are inferior. Cornflowers, yellow daisies, candytuft and feverfew are used extensively for baskets and make pretty combinations. Blooming plants are scarce.

Various Notes.

Schuyler Arnold spent the week end at his parents' home at Ensenore, N. Y. He reports business as fairly good. He

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LAURUS NOBILIS DYING.

I have several fine specimens of Laurus nobilis that appear to be dying. The foliage turns brown and dry, but the stem remains green. Last winter was a severe one and the plants were put in an old barn for protection. They had been watered and the surplus that remained on top had frozen. The plants were brought out in April and now they are beginning to wilt. Any information concerning the revival of these plants will be appreciated. J. M.—Ore.

I am afraid your bay trees have been subjected to too severe freezing. They stand quite a little frost, but it is not advisable to subject them to temperatures more than 8 or 10 degrees below freezing when outdoors. If your plants were not frozen hard, it is possible that you watered them insufficiently during the winter. Of course, they do not need much water while stored away in unheated structures, but the soil must never be thoroughly dry. Plants in a dry condition would be likely to scorch badly if taken out and exposed to bright sunshine and the injury would be greater if they had been stored in a dark shed. They should have been moist at the root and should have been freely syringed for a few days when placed outdoors.

If the plants are not too far gone I would suggest that you clip the heads in an endeavor to get them to break. Use the syringe or hose freely to assist in this. Plants in active growth are much benefited by top-dressings of cow or sheep manure and soakings of liquid manure. C. W.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Vacations are still the order of the day and there is little stirring in business outside of funeral work and an occasional decoration. Retailers are endeavoring to get the best they can out of the situation by making attractive windows and pulling for the business by advertising. But there is a drag to it, and no life. Stock is piling up in many of the wholesale houses, though the shipping trade is really better than local business. Roses are of poor quality and the color is not good. Carnations keep up well and asters are improving. A good supply of centaurea is noted and this staple flower is fine for decorations or funeral work, owing to its long-lasting qualities. Dahlias were never better than this season, as the growers made better selections of varieties than formerly. Gladioli are still overplentiful. Valley is scarce.

Various Notes.

J. S. Acker, of Prescott, Ariz., has been in town on a combined business and pleasure trip.

The many friends of Mrs. Johanssen, of the Johanssen Seed Co., heard with regret that she had so serious a relapse in her illness that her physicians advised an operation. This was performed at the Angelus hospital July 25, and at the time of writing she had come out of the operation quite safely and was resting well.

Not having visited the Homer Laughlin place, at Hollywood, for about two years, I was surprised to see how well the new plantings and other work are coming out. At the time of my former visit new roads had been made that scarred the hillside badly, but these have been grown over with ivy. Such shrubs as Pittosporum undulatum and others have been planted at the base of the rocky walls, which look well. James Taylor, the efficient superintendent here, goes ahead with his improvements in a quiet, orderly way, but he gets there just the same.

For rarity of the shrubs and plants generally, probably no other show place in this locality comes up to that of Arthur Letts, one of our most successful merchants. The place is worthy of extended notice, but in a hurried run through the other day with Superintendent Hunt I only had the chance of a passing look. One beautiful thing ously peddled their stock around town. From a small beginning the company has gone ahead until now it handles the entire output of about 150 growers and the store is a busy place during the rush hours of the morning. It is said the company has shipped stock with good results as far east as Chicago, this, presumably, being specially prepared for the long journey. Daily shipments are made to San Francisco and other northern points and some stock is also shipped to the warmer regions east of us.

It was with a good deal of surprise that the trade heard that John Gordon, for fourteen years manager for Morris Goldenson, had severed his connection there. Mr. Gordon joined the staff at Frank Lichtenberg's August 1.

The L. A. Floral Co. says shipping business is exceptionally good for this time of year. A good deal of stock is being shipped from here to Utah points.

C. W. Kavan, of the Kavan Nurseries, at San Bernardino, has been calling on the local trade this week.

some of the finest dahlias and gladioli seen this season are now being shown. The Golden West dahlia is particularly fine.

Tony Tassano, of Tassano Bros., says business is dull in flowers, but good locally in greens. Bernard Tassano is no longer connected with his brothers here, having joined the staff of the H. N. Gage Co.

A call recently on W. Armacost & Co., at Sawtelle, showed that the new houses were practically finished, only a little more glass having to be laid. When all is done, it will be one of the largest places in southern California. From small beginnings a few years ago, Mr. Armacost has built up a splendid business and continual improvements are being made. The roses are already planted in the new houses and becoming well

I noticed was Bauhinia Galpinii, a superb vine, covered with showy red flowers. Most of the bauhinias here are of shrubby or tree-like habit, but this one is scrambling over a house that must be at least thirty feet high. In the pinetum are some splendid specimens of Picea Pinsapo, which does not usually do well in this vicinity. A dipladenia in full bloom outside is something of a rarity even in this favored spot, but it is to be seen here with magnificent flowers, as good as any ever grown in a greenhouse. A cactus garden has thousands of different species and varieties. In herbaceous plants, also, there is a fine showing. There are about forty acres in the dressed grounds, and in every yard of space there seems to be something interesting.

What might have been a serious if not a fatal accident to a woman passenger of a jitney bus here was avoided by the presence of mind of S. Murata. Mr. Murata was driving home on Stephenson avenue, when a woman got out of a jitney on the wrong side, forcing him to run on to the car line to avoid hitting her. A street car struck his machine, smashing it pretty badly, but, fortunately, no one was hurt much. Mr. Murata escaped with rather a severe shaking up.

The Golden Floral Co., on Wall street, is an organization that was formed some years ago to handle the product of a number of local growers who had previ-established. The houses have a steeper pitch than usual and are ventilated on only one side, owing to the brisk breeze that blows here every day from the ocean. Mr. Armacost says they usually have to reduce the air by noon. The orchids are becoming a noticeable feature here; large quantities of phalaenopsis are grown, as well as cattleyas. In addition to the houses devoted to cut flowers and greens, there are about 6,000 fine cyclamens, ranging from 5-inch pots to 9-inch. The whole place is in first-class order and reflects a great deal of credit on all concerned in its management.

One of the prettiest windows seen for a long time is that at Darling's Flower Shop. It consists of Golden West dahlias and blue delphiniums, a charming combination. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is no special activity here, but business is fairly good considering the season. The market is called upon to dispose of quantities of summer flowers, and there is little change since last report in general outdoor stock. Marguerites, Shasta daisies, gaillardias, marigolds, gypsophilas, stocks, statice, etc., are in bountiful supply and there is a large cut of nice cornflowers. Dahlias are here in ever-increasing supply; though Burgle is the predominating variety, a good many other kinds are to be seen. The stock cleans up fairly well at normal prices. Gladioli maintain their popularity with remarkable persistency, but, fortunately for some of the other flowers, are gradually falling off in quantity. Carnations are not overplentiful, but there is a sufficiency for all requirements, as they move rather slowly in competition with so much other seasonable stock. The supply of chrysanthemums is increasing rapidly, but they still cut little figure in the market. Sweet peas are going off and they are not greatly missed.

The growers are all bringing in asters, and it will be only a matter of a short time before the market will be flooded. Good stock now has a good sale. A fair quantity of Lilium rubrum and auratum finds a ready outlet. There is a good cut of roses, considering the season, and they clean up as well as can be expected in view of the abundance of other nice offerings. Ulrich Brunner can be seen everywhere and has a good sale. More orchids could probably be used if they were available. In potted stock some nice Cincinnati and Lorraine begonias are putting in an appearance. Some fine tuberous begonias also are offered. Potted hydrangeas are still plentiful and the demand is surprisingly good.

Various Notes.

Wherever a few florists have congregated lately, the conversation has sooner or later drifted to someone's version of the bomb explosion at Stuart and Market streets during the preparedness parade last week. The special florists' division was ordered to form at that corner, and the marchers were just arriving when the dreadful calamity took place, killing six people and injuring a great many more spectators, some of whom died later. None of the florists was hit, although several of them were in the immediate vicinity.

.....We were certainly pleased with the results secured from your Seed last year and florists who visited the University greenhouses said they were the finest sweet peas they had ever seen. They made an unusually strong growth and produced great quantities of blooms.

I have received over 1000 such testimonials inside of ten months.

WARNING:—There are or will be advertised many so-called new Winter Spencers. I have seen many new names on the Exhibition tables, but by careful examination all were identical with my older Winter Orchid, years in commerce, excepting the Yarrowa. CLARKE BROS., PORTLAND, ORE.

All the downtown business places closed for the afternoon and the florists were fairly well represented in the parade, in which over 51,000 people participated.

C. C. Morse & Co. are displaying a new marigold, of which they expect to have seeds in commercial quantities by 1918. It is a chrysanthemum-flowered type from the "Forbidden Garden" at Peking, China, raised by one of their customers, who formerly resided in Peking. They are also making a special display of dahlias, including a number of new varieties, some of which have unusually large flowers. A few days ago they exhibited in the window a bloom that measured seventeen inches in diameter.

Miss Bertha Cohn, of the Bellevue Florist, is preparing to leave on a ten days' trip to Los Angeles. It will be a well earned vacation, as she has attended closely to business ever since she and Miss Rothschild took charge of the present establishment at Geary and Taylor streets, which is now nearly three years old. Miss Rothschild says regular counter trade is up to expectations for this time of the year, with a few good-sized decorations to swell the total returns.

F. Burns is bringing in some fine dahlias, including a nice cut of Henry Mairs, also known as Yellow Burgle. He also has some splendid Flamingo, which he expects to do well with.

Geo. N. Tyler, of the Brookdale Nursery, Los Gatos, Cal., will have an exceptionally fine lot of mums this season, both plants and cut flowers.

Domoto Bros. are still bringing in a companions some little time to release him.

Frank Pelicano is bringing in a lot of fine dahlias, among which are some promising new seedlings.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. had in their window recently a large basket which attracted much attention. It stood five feet high and was four feet long, containing over 300 blooms, artistically arranged. The flowers used were pink dahlias, blue hydrangeas and Ulrich Brunner roses.

The California Dahlia Growers' Association has invited Los Angeles and Seattle growers to participate in its first annual exhibition, to be given September 7 to 9 at the Palace hotel. Several cups have already been donated as premiums, and other details are being worked out.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., served on the special jury which held inquest over the victims of the bomb explosion during the preparedness parade. J. Keegan, of this firm's force, has gone south for a two weeks' vacation. D. Traversaro, also with this company, is to be married August 10 to Miss L. Lucchetti, of Suisun City, Cal.

F. Bertrand, of Joseph's, expects to leave shortly for Eureka, Cal., on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Improvements in the Emporium have extended to the flower stand, at the rear of the ground floor. New flooring is being laid in that section this week.

S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The rainfall for July has broken all records since the weather bureau station was established in the early seventies. The abundance and quality of the outdoor flowers are far above normal. The demands of the market are light, entailing considerable waste. The larger stores that grow outdoor flowers find a sufficient supply on their own premises and the wholesale growers find a market for only parts of their cuts. Local asters and dahlias have appeared. Large bunches of auratum lilies are shown. Zinnias are shorter-stemmed than usual and do not sell freely, while sweet peas have passed their best period and arrive with shorter stems and smaller blooms. Some varieties of gladioli are in their prime and many fine vases are shown in the window displays.

Various Notes.

Clarke Bros. showed some good potted dwarf French marigolds grown with ferns.

Elmer Feig, of the Niklas & Son store, is with the naval militia on a cruise to Sitka, Alaska. Hans Niklas climbed Mount Hood last week and as a consequence his face is shedding its skin.

A. Rahn, of the Rahn & Herbert Co., has gone on a trip to Spokane and the cities of Puget sound.

B. C. Cook again is attending to business at his store on Fourth street.

Max Smith and Thomas Luke have gone on an auto trip to Puget sound.

J. J. Butzer has some garden space around his new home and puts in his leisure hours growing vegetable plants.

R. S. Scott, of the Portland Seed Co., is away on a business trip.

Otto Reuble, of the German Floral Co., is visiting relatives on the sound.

S. W. W.

It Pays

To Pacific Coast Florists:

What stock have you for sale to the trade?
Is it moving as it should?
No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast
Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

The transient rate for space is $1 per inch per insertion. Those who have stock to offer all or a considerable part of the year around should write for contract rates.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THE prices of practically all imported nursery stock are to be lower than usual this autumn.

THE nurseries that have landscape departments are busy figuring on jobs that seem to assure good fall and spring seasons.

MORE evergreens will be sold and planted this summer than in any previous August and September; also, the prices will be better than usual.

W. A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is spending much of his time this summer at Winona Lake, Ind., where Mrs. Peterson is interested in the camp of the Bethany Girls.

PRESIDENT JOHN WATSON has not yet completed his committees for the American Association of Nurserymen. He is making up his lists with great care, appreciating that this is the most important year in the association's history.

MANY nursery firms, say McHutchison & Co., especially those doing a retail trade, overlook the advantages of carrying a full line of hardy herbaceous perennials. In many instances the revenue from the cut flowers alone pays the first cost of the plants—and the plants are still ready for sale when dormant. Orders can be constantly filled from them—and the stock plants are still there.

WANTS TO KILL WEED SEEDS.

What is the proper treatment of soil in seed beds to eliminate the growth of weeds? Can the soil be inoculated by something that will destroy weed seeds and not injure tree seeds? Is there any spraying mixture that will kill the weeds and not harm the little seedlings? Any information you can give me will be appreciated.

D. H. N. C.—Ill.

I do not know of any formula that will kill weed seeds and not injure tree seeds. If the soil can be sterilized by steam, or even by water as near the boiling point as possible, and then allowed to dry out before sowing, you will have little trouble from weed seeds. If you will bake the soil with which you cover the tree seeds, the weed evil will be reduced materially. It will not take long to bake a good-sized pile of fine loam suitable for seed covering and I would suggest that you do this or else sterilize it with either steam or boiling water before using. One or two formulas are used for destroying fungoid growths, but these do not kill weed seeds. Perhaps Review readers may have some better formula for getting rid of weeds. C. W.

TESTS OF INSECTICIDES.

A number of tests to determine the effect of different arsenicals on the foliage of peach trees and of arsenicals combined with lime-sulphur solution on peach and bean foliage have recently been conducted by the entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The arsenate of lead was used one to fifty and two to fifty and the arsenate of calcium was used one to fifty. A number of poisons were combined with lime two to fifty and with lime-sulphur one and one-half to fifty.

Following are the conclusions of the entomologists as published in Department Bulletin 278, "Miscellaneous Insecticide Investigations":

"Of the arsenates of lead, the di-plumbic form had no burning effect on bean foliage and burned peach foliage only slightly. Arsenate of lead, consisting of a mixture of the di-plumbic and triplumbic forms, burned peach foliage slightly, but no injury resulted on bean foliage. The commercial No. 1, consisting of the triplumbic form of arsenate of lead, did not injure peach or bean foliage. The commercial (2) burned the peach so badly that all the leaves were shed and produced moderate burning on the bean, about twenty-five per cent of the leaves being shed, but no burning where it was combined with lime or lime-sulphur. The commercial (3) produced no burning on bean foliage and slight burning on peach foliage.

"Arsenate of calcium caused about fifteen per cent of the leaves to drop on peach, but had no burning effect on bean foliage.

"The arsenates of iron, chemically pure and home-made, did not burn either bean or peach foliage.

"Arsenate of zinc did not burn bean foliage, but seriously injured peach foliage, causing complete defoliation. The home-made form of arsenate of zinc produced slight burning on peach and no burning on bean foliage.

"Arsenic sulphide and arsenic tersulphide produced severe burning in all tests.

"Arsenic trioxide burned severely in all cases except when combined with lime, in which case the burning was slightly less.

"Arsenite of lime, home-made, burned the bean foliage moderately when used alone and in combination with lime-sulphur. However, no burning resulted when extra lime was added. The peach foliage was severely burned by this material, causing all the leaves to drop.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Annual Club Meeting.

The new officers of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, elected at the annual meeting in the Association of Commerce library, are as follows: President, P. Abele, of Abele Bros.; vice-president, E. A. Farley, of the Gentilly Terrace Nursery; secretary, Charles R. Panter, reelected for his fifteenth term; treasurer, John Eblen, who has served continuously in that capacity since the organization of the society thirty-two years ago.

The society decided to stage a good exhibition at the National Farm and Livestock Show, to be held at the fair grounds November 11 to 16.

Prompted by natural generosity and by the persuasive eloquence of C. W. Eichling, the society contributed $200 to be used in entertaining the visitors to the Houston convention who will stop over in New Orleans August 14, and who will be met at the train and taken to Kolb's Tea Room.

At the close of the business meeting the company adjourned to the Heidelberg cafe, to participate in the society's annual banquet and listen to the melodies of the Turn Verein Singing Section. Among the speakers at the banquet were P. A. Chopin and Secretary Panter. Mr. Chopin took occasion to make a plea in behalf of the S. A. F. convention. "The time of the convention," he said, "is a splendid time for the taking of that vacation we deserve after twelve months of hard labor. Let us join in and make the S. A. F. convention, to be held in our southland, a big success."

Among the members of the trade who attended the banquet were the following: Henry Scheuermann, retiring president; Joseph Steckler, past president; C. W. Eichling, past president; Paul Abele, new president; E. A. Farley, Charles R. Panter, John F. Bollwinkle; P. A. Chopin, past president; A. Alost, past president; A. Verlinde, Frank J. Reyes, Henry Rehfeld; Max Scheinuk, past president; Xavier Grillot, Charles Tarles, W. A. Dinkel, Henry Kraak, L. H. Mard, Adolph V. Dammeroui, E. F. Dormoy, P. Ackermann, H. C. Doescher, C. L. Ory and B. E. Eble.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The conditions in the market are not what the retailers like, as there is not enough stock to meet the demand. Gladioli, though now the principal flowers, are only of fair quality and must be cut when only one bud is open, as the dry, hot weather burns them as fast as they come into flower. An increasing number of asters are arriving, but they are small and inferior. A large number of lilies reached the market last week and were sold upon arrival. In carnations and roses, small lots of out-of-town stock were available.

Various Notes.

Samuel Murray had a unique table decoration at the club last week. He placed an electric fountain in the center of the table, with water lilies in it and with some fancy-leaved caladiums around the edge. Surrounding these were some well-grown greenhouse grapes in pots. The guests were expected to pick the grapes from the plants.

Arthur Newell had a big run on funeral work last week, including two large out-of-town funerals. He says the only trouble is that he cannot get enough stock.

E. E. Stockdale has a fine lot of carnations and begonias and of cyclamens in pots. He is building two new greenhouses, one of them 22x62 and the other 25x62.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is having a lot of trouble at the greenhouses. The park board is constructing boulevards all around the houses and the dust from the grading settles heavily on the glass. It is necessary to keep spraying the stock all day in order to keep it clean.

Dan Ackerman, a vegetable grower who has a lot of cucumbers under glass, is also bothered by the dust from the grading. His cucumbers have a heavy coating on them and it would be difficult to tell whether his greenhouse roof is made of tin or glass.

T. J. Noll & Co. have been short on cut stock all the week, but will soon receive some extra large shipments from the north.

Henry Kusik says that he sold 3,000 Easter lilies in two days last week. He has just received a large shipment of supplies.

H. E. Humiston, of the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., was here last week.

W. A. Miller, formerly with the W. L. Rock Flower Co., was in the city last week. He is now with F. C. Weber, in St. Louis. W. J. B.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Intensely hot weather, with many hard showers, last week, had a tendency to drive away some of the already greatly diminished summer trade. Funeral work has kept up fairly well and there is an occasional wedding or social event at which some form of decoration is required. Many growers are using this quiet spell in preparing their green-houses for the winter. Some of them put in new benches as they threw out the old crops and benched the new. Many of the growers have fine chrysanthemum plants started.

Each week gives the retailer a smaller variety of stock to choose from, but this of course is not felt so much as it would be at any other time of the year. Carnations are scarcely seen at all in the local market, and sweet peas seem to have completely disappeared. Asters and gladioli practically dominate the market now; they arrive in quantities sufficient for the demand and are reasonable in price. There are roses, fair for this time of the year, but they are not too abundant. Orchids are cheap, but not so plentiful as they were. Good valley is a little scarce and brings a good price.

Various Notes.

Final arrangements were made at last week's meeting of the Essex County Florists' Club for the annual outing of the club, August 3.

Henry A. Strobell states that business at this time is good, when one compares it with that of the same period of any previous year.

Philips Bros. report that during the last week or two they have had more funeral work than usual at this time; in fact, business has been remarkably good during the last month.

About fifty laborers employed by the Elizabeth Nursery Co., of Elizabeth, struck last week for an increase in wages of 25 cents per day and a 9-hour day instead of a 10-hour day. They announced to the police that they would commit no disorder. R. B. M.

Vevay, Ind.—Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Jaynes have sold their establishment to Charles Kinkaid and retired from the business.

Omaha, Neb.—The flower store in the Hotel Fontenelle has been purchased by Lee R. Larmon. Lewis Henderson was the owner.

It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

HOUSES ON DIFFERENT LEVELS.

I have two greenhouses, one 18x50 and the other 15x45, and am about to install the boiler. A sketch of the houses is enclosed. Will you kindly tell me how to plan the construction so I can add another house if necessary, possibly south of the present houses, where the dotted lines appear on the sketch? I wish to grow carnations and mixed stock for a retail trade. The carnations will probably be planted in the north house. What size of boiler is needed? Please state the right size and arrangement of the pipes.

M. E. R.—Mich.

The sketch shows that the two houses run east and west, with the south house three feet lower than the other. The third house, the construction of which is proposed, will extend to the south from the east end of the present south house.

There is a chimney at the northeast corner of the north house and we are asked whether we should place the boiler at the east end of the south house, using the present chimney, or place both chimney and boiler at the west end of the south house. The slope of the land makes it necessary to place the boiler at one end of the south house, and if the chimney at the end of the north house is of the proper size we would arrange to use it. The boiler should be either in a basement or a room partitioned off from the greenhouse.

If a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees is to be maintained, we would use a boiler rated for 600 square feet of radiation for the present two houses. In case the third house mentioned will be about the same size and is to be heated to 60 degrees, the boiler for the three houses will require a rating for 1,000 square feet of radiation. For the north house we would run a 2½-inch main under the ridge, and connect it at the farther end of the house with ten 2-inch returns. Five of these may be upon each side wall or under the side benches, or three may be under the side benches and the others under the middle benches. In the other house eight 2-inch returns and one 2½-inch overhead flow will give a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees. Unless it is possible to sink the boiler so that it will be as low as the level of the walks in that house, the coils should be kept as high as possible.

STEAM FOR THREE HOUSES.

We are sending you a sketch of a range of three parallel greenhouses, running east and west, and we wish you to tell us about our requirements in the way of heat. The center house is for roses, except the rear end, 27x30, which will be used for lilies, etc., with a temperature of 65 degrees or whatever is needed. The south house is to be piped for carnations, geraniums, etc., and will require a temperature of 50 to 65 degrees. The north house will be used for the same crops, except that we wish to add a ground bench for sweet peas, smilax, plumosus, snapdragons, etc. As we are trying roses for the first time, you will know better than we what temperature we should maintain for them. The outside temperature here may be as low as 10 degrees below zero for a day or two at a time.

Our present boiler is of the locomotive type and is supposed to be 16-horsepower. It has fifty-six 2-inch flues, six feet long, and the firebox is 32x38 inches. The floor of the boiler pit is eight feet below the floor of the greenhouses. We wish to use steam heat. If we add another boiler of equal size, will the two, fired together, give us enough heat? If that plan will not work and it is necessary to discard the present boiler, what should be the rating of the new one? The present boiler heated satisfactorily a house 25x100 and another 14x60, with hot water. Be so kind as to tell us the right size and number of flows and returns, and where they should be placed.

No. 1—The lug in which the grate end rests.

No. 2—Note how the grate end is off the vertical in order that it may be turned and lifted right out of the lug.

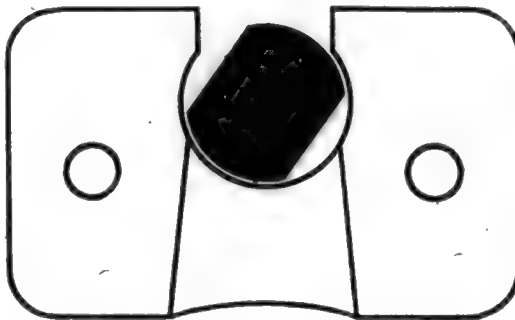

It Takes the "Cuss" Out of Your Grate "Cussings"

HERE are four real live straight-from-the-shoulder reasons why there's no grate "cuss" to the Burnham Boiler's grates:

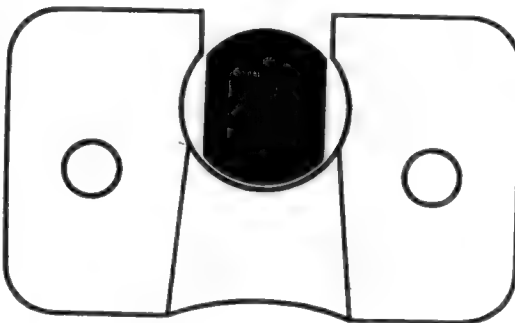

1. The Burnham Boiler's grates shake half at a time, which just naturally makes them twice as easy to shake. You can clean your fire half at a time. And in mild weather you can bank up the back half with ashes and run your fire on the first half, getting just the heat you actually need and burning only just the coal you actually need to get it, and no more. Or you can start up half your fire when you want to and leave the other half slumbering. So, you see, this half-at-a-time feature makes the Burnham Boiler easier to operate and cuts down your coal bills at one and the same time.

2. Each grate bar is built like a roof. Half the ashes are on one side and half on the other. Because of this, the slightest movement of the bar will shake the ashes down. So you can accomplish at least a third more with a third less shaking. But that's not all that the roof-shape does. The peak of the ridge digs into the ashes and stirs up the fire—a result accomplished with the usual flat-topped grate only by dint of violent shaking.

3. Every Burnham Boiler grate bar is kept absolutely warp-proof by heavy trussing from underneath on both sides of the ridge. This trussing will keep the entire grate bar true and right in line for years.

No. 1—This shows how the grate end rests in the lug before turning.

No. 2—Showing the grate end turned and ready to be lifted right out of the lug.

4. And here's a last-but-not-least point that takes out the cuss that is probably the cussiest cuss of all your grate cussings. When for any reason you want to remove a grate bar you can do so by the one simple operation of turning the grate into the position shown in line cut No. 2. It will then lift right out of the lug. No bolts to remove. None of the disposition-destroying stunts that you've had to go through with other grates. And the grate end is at such an angle that it won't "bounce out" of the lug when you shake your grates, no matter how hard you shake them. It takes a pronounced and decided pull forward to put it in the position from which it can be lifted right out.

Line cut No. 1 shows how the end of the grate lies in the lug before turning to remove.

These grate differences are just a few of the differences that make Burnham Boilers different from other cast iron boilers.

Make sure of surely having your Burnham Boiler when you need it by ordering it now, before you need it.

middle house. For returns use ten 1½-inch pipes in the middle house and eight 1½-inch pipes in each of the other houses. Two of the returns should be upon each wall and the others distributed under the benches. The boiler described would surely deserve a rating of fourteen or fifteen horsepower, and would heat the three houses in mild weather. The addition of another boiler of the same size would provide all of the heat required when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

PIPING TWO LETTUCE HOUSES.

Enclosed you will find a sketch of my two greenhouses, as they will be after they are rebuilt. As you will see, they run east and west. The boiler room, at the northeast corner, is twenty-six feet long, cutting that number of feet off the length of the north house. I expect to heat with steam and to burn slack coal. Will you please tell me how to pipe these houses for a gravity system, so as to hold the temperature at 55 degrees in zero weather? I shall use solid, ground beds. Lettuce will be grown. How large a firebox boiler will it be advisable to purchase, so I shall not have to fire up too often and so I can add another house, 25x140, if I wish? Will 1-inch returns be satisfactory? S. W.—O.

The sketch shows one house 29x130 and twelve feet high to the ridge, with two feet of glass and two feet of concrete in the south wall. The other house, which adjoins, is 18x104. The north wall is of wood and the space between the houses, under the common gutter, is open.

We prefer to use 1½-inch pipe for the returns when they are more than 100 feet long, but 1-inch pipe may be used in these houses. For 55 degrees we would use in the larger house one 2-inch flow pipe upon each of the wall plates and either eight 1½-inch or eleven 1-inch returns for the coils. These may be placed on the side walls, or two or three of the returns may be in the center walk. For the house 18x104 use a 1½-inch flow upon each plate and three 1-inch returns in each of the wall coils.

For economy in the care of a boiler for heating the three houses described, it should have a rating of at least twenty-five horsepower, with sixteen square feet of grate. The chimney flue should be about sixteen inches square and thirty-five feet in height.

The Market.

Business is fairly good. The supply is large enough to take care of the present demand and comprises a good deal of stock of excellent quality. Roses are in fair supply. Gladioli are plentiful, but more of the choice varieties in white and pink could be used. Asters are abundant. There is a sufficient quantity of Easter lilies. Some excellent hardy hydrangeas may be had. Snapdragons meet with a fair call. Among the other available flowers are Lilium rubrum, water lilies and cornflowers. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Roger Peterson's new house was struck by lightning during a recent storm.

P. O. Coblenz, of New Madison, O., began shipping his fine gladioli to C. E. Critchell last week.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mayhall report that they had an exceedingly enjoyable time on their auto trip to Lexington, Ky., last week.

Recent visitors included Frank J. Farney, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Joseph Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; Martin Weber, of Brookville, Ind.; Fred Rupp, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., and Ernst E. Schaeffer, of Dayton, O.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has moved into its new quarters at 10 East Third street. C. H. H.

NEWPORT, R. I.

At the annual meeting of the Newport Garden Club Mrs. Charles F. Hoffman was elected president and Mrs. Frederick Pearson, secretary. The offer of the Hilltop Inn grounds for the annual midsummer show, to be held jointly with the Newport Horticultural Society, August 17 to 19, was accepted. This promises to be the best flower show ever held in Newport, growers from Philadelphia, New York and around Boston having announced their intentions of entering. A good list of prizes has been offered. On the second day Arthur Herrington will lecture on irises.

A striking reminder of the Mexican border was to be seen last week in the Leikens window on Bellevue avenue. The "flower" was sent by Sergeant Joseph Leikens of the Seventh Regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., who is with his command at McAllen, Tex. This sample is but a part of the cactus field the troops had to clear to pitch their camp. W. H. M.

The Market.

The local market affords but little to report at the present time. There is the seasonable lethargy among the retailers, although the growers and greenhouse men attest some activity. Overhauling, repairing, renovation and rebenching are the chief occupations at present.

Carnations are almost entirely absent. Roses are of fair quality and quantity. Gladioli are coming in nicely, but move slowly, and early asters are of indifferent quality, the field blooms having been badly handicapped by the excessive rains.

An Octogenarian.

Alfred L. Warner, the oldest florist in Rhode Island, if not in the country, still pursues his occupation in his greenhouses on East street, Pawtucket, despite his many years. July 28 he observed his eighty-second birthday. There was no celebration, the event being marked only by the octogenarian's strict adherence to his business affairs and the exchange of congratulations by his numerous friends.

Mr. Warner was born July 28, 1834, in Webster, Mass. Early in life he went west, where he was given a thorough training in farming. Later he returned to Pawtucket and became a machinist, until failing eyes and health caused him to follow the sea for recuperation. For many years he pursued the life of a mariner, advancing step by step until he became master. When he finally married, his wife prevailed upon him to give up his life at sea. He entered the greenhouse business and has followed the vocation for the last thirty-seven years.

Various Notes.

John A. Macrae has added another car to his delivery department.

Samuel Woodrow, of New York, was at Narragansett Pier last week in the interests of his branch store there.

Fred C. Green, superintendent of parks of this city, will attend the annual convention of the American Association of Park Superintendents at New Orleans in October.

Mrs. P. F. Conley, of Updike street, has thrown out her last house of carnations and made renovations preparatory to rebenching. W. H. M.

Bath, N. Y.—William W. Orcutt, for several years a grower of flowering plants outdoors, is planning to erect a greenhouse this month.

How Far Does Your Money Go?

- Q Some men spend their hard earned cash and have nothing to show for it. Others spend it and have a lot to show, but nothing that amounts to much. Then there are the kind that spend it and have something worth while to show for it.
- Q What do you want when you spend, the most for your money or the best your money can buy? The answer is simple enough. You want the best. Quality, not quantity, is true economy.
- Q Now, that is just where we come in. We buy quality and that is what we sell—absolute quality. No French Pastry to look nice and cover up the defects, but just plain, oldfashioned quality.
- Q That is why a man who has once bought from DIETSCH always buys from DIETSCH. He has learned that quality (the "all wool and a yard wide" kind) pays and there is no chance for anything but that in DIETSCH material.
- Q Of course if you have built the DIETSCH way you know all about it. This advertisement is written for the other fellows, who either spend and have nothing to show or get a lot of stuff that amounts to nothing.

The Market.

Trade has been quiet during the last two weeks, with stock suffering from the extreme heat and drought. Roses are good, but they develop rapidly and are hard to keep from one day to the next without opening. Beauties still are good, considering everything, and the demand for them is fairly strong. Carnations will be more or less missed for a few weeks. Most of the plants have been thrown out and the ones that remain produce blooms of such poor quality that it does not pay to try to bring them in. Sweet peas are burned, as well as nearly all other outdoor stock. Gladioli are plentiful. Where they have been watered sufficiently the quality is good, but a certain quantity of poor blooms is coming in. Lilies are quite plentiful and the demand for them has been good in funeral work. They really are a standby for such work. There still are a few calls for porch boxes and the number of boxes used this season is surprising. It now is a hard job to find enough good stock to fill the boxes.

Various Notes.

Sherman Stephens is adding another greenhouse to his range and reports prosperous times.

Joseph Martin, out on East Main street, is adding an extension of eighty feet to one house. He reports that everything outdoors is burning out his way, as there has been no rain since early in June; that is, to amount to anything. As he is without water-works, the drought makes things hard for him.

Ralph Knight says everything is cleaned out of his houses and that it will be some time before he will be cutting stock again.

C. A. Roth reports business as being quiet, with just a little funeral work now and then.

The Livingston Seed Co. has a number of its force on vacations and at times orders bunched so that it was a case of working overtime for the ones on deck.

The Market.

Weddings have been unusually numerous for this time of the year and have helped business considerably. There have also been many funerals. The opening of the Old State National Bank created some call for stock. The new 8-story bank building is nearing completion and was opened to the public July 26. The banking quarters are finished and the magnificent rooms were profusely decorated with plants and flowers. Banking houses as far away as New York sent flowers. This is the second new bank building to be completed here this summer and is a good indication of the prosperity of Evansville.

Various Notes.

All members of the Evansville Florists' Club are requested to bear in mind that the first annual picnic will be held at Cypress beach August 9. Members of the trade who do not belong to the club are invited to attend. Everybody should be on hand to take the 9 o'clock traction and spend the day. Everything is free; the "eats" and car fare are furnished by the club. The committee appointed to arrange for refreshments and transportation consists of E. L. Fenton, Carl Elsperrmann, Karl Zeidler and Emil Niednagel.

Emil Niednagel is receiving congratulations on the arrival of a baby girl, July 24. N. O. Halbrooks also was made happy by the arrival of a boy three weeks ago. E. L. F.

CYPRESS BY TEST. SUBSTITUTES BY TALK.

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 45 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 45 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good, ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that wood-pile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years' "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?

There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too.

A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). Vol. 3 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money-saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT. Vol. 4 is the Barn Book; Vol. 20 is "All Farm Needs Book"; Vol. 36 is the Carpentry Book, in which a dozen hard jobs of carpentry are made easy, and Vol. 37 is the Big, New Silo Book. All contain plans for building and are profusely illustrated.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

THE FORCING OF FANCY FREESIAS

The recent improvement in the quality of the freesia, with the addition of new varieties in many colors, has opened a fresh field of opportunities for freesia forcers. Many growers who heretofore have given the freesia scant attention may now find it worthy of their best efforts.

IN GROWING freesias; or other flowers, the grade or quality of the crop depends on various circumstances—not only on the grower's disposition and skill and facilities, but also on the requirements of the local market. There are other questions involved, besides the question of the grower's efficiency. The grower may be a marvel. He may be able, if he wishes, to hand out superfine flowers from the most unpromising conditions, as nonchalantly as a sleight-of-hand performer produces a bushel or so of bouquets—or lingerie or what not—from a No. 7 derby hat. The grower, indeed, may be a veritable magician in his own line, yet he may not feel inclined to waste much of his time and dexterity in growing extra special freesias for customers who will pay just as much for a lower grade.

If the grower is ambitious, however, he will judiciously lure his patrons on to higher things—including higher prices—by offering them stock which is at least a little better than they expect. And a florist who has learned the best methods may be able to grow specials as easily as his poorly informed competitor can grow seconds.

"Neutral" Flowers.

If a grower knows that he has a market for a quantity of indifferently good freesias—freesias of neutral quality; that is, neither good nor bad—and if he has excellent conveniences for producing just that kind, he may be fully justified in doing so. He may use the freesias as a catch crop, stringing a lot of the bulbs along a bench of partly worn-out soil, after the early chrysanthemums or other plants have been removed. In such a case he will plant the bulbs about two inches apart in the rows, with the distance between the rows about six inches. And when the man with the hose waters the other stock in the house, he may water the freesias also, perhaps allowing the artificial shower to fall as indiscriminately as the rain and the dew of heaven descend on outdoor vegetation.

Impartial Treatment.

In growing these "neutral" freesias, the entire houseful of miscellaneous stock is often treated almost as impartially, with reference to temperature, moisture and other matters, as nature treats the outdoor world. In other cases the freesias are "humored" as fully as is possible in a house of mixed stock, and the extra care is well rewarded. The flowers fulfill the grower's expectations and will probably suit the purpose for which they were grown.

But if the grower has a market for really fancy freesias, or can readily develop such a market, it will be profitable for him to give the plants a more special sort of treatment—the kind of treatment that they most enjoy, and they are not hard to please. It will pay him to use suitable soil and to plant the bulbs in pots, flats or pans, which can be set on shelves well up to the light or in some other favorable location, and can be moved from place to place as the plants require hurrying or retarding.

The process is not intricate or difficult and the returns are excellent. The Christmas prices received by some of the leading growers, for freesias of choice quality, would make the average grower's eyes glisten. Of course, the flowers are not so good at Christmas as are those that are grown cooler, but, as one Boston expert remarks, "the Christmas blooms bring the money." After the holidays the flowers are better and the prices not so good, but the compensation is still satisfactory.

It is a sample of this sort of money-making Christmas stock that is shown in the illustration. The plants are about twenty-eight inches high as indicated by the 2-foot rule that stands by their side.

Timing the Blooms.

The culture of freesias is easy, but distinctive in method; they require different treatment from most other bulbous plants, such as the so-called Dutch bulbs.

One of the peculiarities of freesias is that they suffer comparatively little from a delay in planting, if the storage conditions are suitable. It is especially easy, therefore, to regulate their periods of blooming. They are exceedingly accommodating in this respect. By planting them successively or by removing batches from coldframe to greenhouse as wanted, or by a combination of the two expedients, they may be had in flower from Christmas till June, if such late blooms are really desired. If the spikes are cut when only two of the five to seven flowers are fully open, the others will usually expand satisfactorily.

Such of the freesia bulbs as are intended for flowering at Christmas or New Year's should be placed in pots, flats or pans as soon as the first bulbs are received. Let the planting be shallow; just cover the bulbs with soil. Then set them in a coldframe or on a cool cellar floor, to remain there till September, when they should be removed to greenhouse shelves and grown in a temperature of 50 to 55 degrees at night. If the flowers are not wanted until after the holidays, a lower temperature will be advantageous. Water moderately until the foliage and roots are well developed; then let the supply of moisture be liberal.

Planting in Pans.

The practice of growers differs considerably with reference to the size and shape of the receptacles used and the number of bulbs planted in them. A common suggestion is to plant from six to nine bulbs in a 5-inch pot. Some of the most successful growers, however, prefer 8-inch and 10-inch pans, placing twenty-five to thirty bulbs in 8-inch pans and about forty in the 10-inch size. At least one expert grower puts as many as fifty bulbs in a 10-inch pan and he declares that he gets just as good spikes as when half that number are grown. Thick planting of the bulbs is also conducive to the lengthening of the stems.

The Compost.

The compost should be a good loam, fairly well enriched. The following proportions are suitable: Two-thirds well decayed fibrous loam and one-third cow manure, well dried and passed through a 1/2-inch screen; add some flaky leaf-mold and a good dash of sharp sand.

In planting the bulbs it is advisable to see that those placed together, in the same pan, do not vary too greatly in size, for if the bulbs are of approximately the same size and quality the plants will be more uniform in strength at flowering time.

Perhaps it is scarcely necessary to state that freesias do not come true from seed. The production of blooming plants from seed is not only a tedious process, but an utterly unreliable one. It is equally certain that few florists would find it profitable to grow their own freesia bulbs; it is more economical and satisfactory to purchase them from specialists.

A COMMON PRIMULA DISEASE.

Destructive to P. Malacoides.

About this time every year we hear of numerous complaints of a wilting and rotting of Primula malacoides. The writer has had this trouble under observation ever since this beautiful plant was introduced, and so has had an opportunity of making notes on the diseases of this plant from season to season.

As a rule the disease appears when the plants have reached their best, which is about the time when the warm spring days are coming. You may go over your plants one day and find them apparently healthy, and in a few days one or more are wilted and dead. The first evidence of the trouble is the yellowing of a few of the lower leaves, followed in a day or so by the complete collapse of the plant, as seen in the accompanying illustration. If the affected plant is pulled apart, you will find that the lower leaves are rotted off and that the crown is beginning to rot. When the diseased plant is left for several days in the bench, small tufts of a mold will be noticed on the rotting plant.

Cause of the Disease.

This trouble is caused by a fungus, Botrytis cinerea, found everywhere about a greenhouse establishment. You will find it in the cutting bench and seed pans, on fallen branches and flowers. It is perhaps the most common fungus found about a greenhouse. The peculiar thing about this fungus is that, as a rule, it will live only on dead plant parts, but under certain conditions it is able to cause a serious loss to apparently healthy plants.

What are the conditions under which this fungus is able to cause a serious rotting of Primula malacoides? They are, in the main, high temperatures, too much moisture and humidity, lack of ventilation and lack of vigor in the plant. To control this trouble, we must overcome these conditions as far as possible.

Preventive Measures.

Let us take the question of high temperatures. These can be avoided in the first place by not sowing your seeds until late in July. By the time cold weather sets in, you will have fine young plants. If these plants have not been troubled with damping off by this fungus, you are reasonably sure they will not be attacked during the winter. Dispose of the plants before warm weather.

Lack of ventilation ranks next to temperature in importance in the spread of this disease. The habit of Primula malacoides is such that the lower leaves cover to a large extent the top of the pot, thus making a fine place for the fungus to obtain a start. A bushy plant is more liable to be attacked than a smaller one.

I think most growers will agree with me that careless watering is one of the best aids to fungous diseases in the greenhouse. Careful watering will help in the control of this trouble.

A Precaution in Potting.

In potting the plants it is a good plan to set them in a little high. Never, under any conditions, set them in too low. When the plants get larger, those set in quite high will not be so bushy near the base and so will allow more air to pass under the leaves. The larger plants should not be crowded in the bench and should be set on pots. This treatment will allow for a maximum of ventilation and so will tend to keep the plants clean.

As I have often stated, anything that will tend to lower the vitality of the plants will make them more subject to fungous diseases. This statement holds for the disease under discussion. You will find that as the plants reach maturity their vigor appears to decrease and so this disease is especially severe in the case of the older plants.

Other species and varieties of primulas are also subject to this trouble, but not to so great a degree. The precautions here suggested will be helpful in all cases. Geo. L. Peltier.

TIME NEEDED TO FORCE BULBS.

Will you kindly tell me the length of time it will take to bring narcissi into bloom in South Carolina at Thanksgiving; also, hyacinths for the middle of December, and Easter lilies for the middle of March? M. S.—S. C.

The only narcissi which could be flowered with you at Thanksgiving are the Paper Whites. Bulbs of these usually arrive about the end of August, when they should be placed in flats containing four to five inches of soil, or, if preferred, they can be planted in a greenhouse bench. Flats are preferable, as they can be moved around so as to force or retard the growth. These narcissi start to grow quickly and, if given a temperature of 60 degrees at night for four or five weeks before being wanted, they will come in all right.

You can get Roman hyacinths in flower quite easily by the middle of December. Treat them as advised for Paper Whites. They do better if stood outdoors, well watered and then given a covering of sand or coal ashes. Allow their shoots to be two and one-half to three inches long before you start to force them. Both narcissi and Romans will be of better quality if placed in a cooler house to open.

Easter lilies can be had in flower by the middle of March without much trouble. You can flower Formosa lilies much earlier than the giganteum form of longiflorum. Pot the bulbs as soon as received in September or October. Once the pots are well filled with roots, give the plants an average night temperature of 60 degrees. You should allow six weeks from the time the buds can be distinctly counted to the time the flowers are wanted, in a night temperature of 60 degrees. Of course, a mild or a severe winter may necessitate some retarding or extra forcing.

ANNOUNCING A NEW CONCERN.

The Review is authorized to announce this week the organization of the American Bulb Co., with headquarters at Chicago, about which there has been much speculation since it became known that several men of intimate acquaintance were simultaneously severing connections of long standing.

The principals of the new concern, which was incorporated last week under the laws of New Jersey, with $100,000 capital stock, are A. Miller, Albert Koehler, Samuel Seligman and Robert Newcomb. Mr. Miller, who is to be president of the company, is widely known in the trade, having in recent years been one of the partners in the firm of A. Henderson & Co. Mr. Koehler, who is to be secretary and treasurer, has for sixteen years been with Vaughan's Seed Store, rising to have charge of credits and the office. Mr. Newcomb has long been one of the travelers, covering the west, for the same concern. Mr. Seligman has gained an extremely wide acquaintance among retail florists as traveler for Wertheimer Bros. Mr. Newcomb and Mr. Seligman are to be directors. These four are to be the active workers; there are other undisclosed interests well acquainted with the trade that are putting in capital only, and a number of experienced people have been engaged for the various departments.

The name, American Bulb Co., is a misnomer, in that the plans include a much broader business than the corporate title implies. Mr. Seligman's connection with the company presupposes a department of florists' supplies specializing on ribbons and corsage accessories and it is stated Mr. Seligman contemplates an early trip to Europe in quest of novelties for the high class retail stores to which he has been selling for years. There also is to be a plant department, florists' seeds are to be handled and other lines are to be added as the organization grows.

The first step after incorporation was to lease the store at 172 North Wabash avenue, Chicago, adjoining that of the E. C. Amling Co., for accessible office purposes; there are half a dozen floors upstairs available for stock rooms when they are needed, but of course the greater part of the bulb and plant business is to be on import orders and the stock never will go into the store.

The company has made ambitious plans. The organization is composed of young men, full of energy, possessed of wide acquaintance with buyers and their needs, with connections that reach the sources of supply in all the countries of the world. They have complete confidence in the opportunity for the development of a larger business than any now existing in these lines and they start with the determination to reach this goal at as early a date as possible.

KENTIA LEAVES TURN BROWN.

Will you please tell me what is the trouble with my palms? The variety is Kentia Forsteriana. At first they put out five or six beautiful leaves, look well and have a good, green color, but after a time the leaves suddenly turn brown, especially at the ends. Frequently I find it necessary to cut off three or four leaves at a time.

M. O. B. H.—Miss.

Without knowing something of the conditions under which the plants are growing, it is not easy to say what is the cause of the trouble, but from the description given one would infer that it is caused either by lack of water or by some defect in the soil. If you could send one of the affected leaves—the entire leaf—it would be easier to find the cause, for most of these troubles with palms have some particular characteristics that show quite clearly to those familiar with them.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Winter-Flowering Begonias.

We always find plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine on sale early in October and this reminds us that, in order to have plants in nice condition thus early, they should go into their flowering pots or pans at once. During the hottest part of the year these begonias do not seem to grow particularly fast, but with the arrival of somewhat cooler nights their progress will be much more rapid. Use plenty of flaky leaf-mold in the compost and let one-fifth of the whole be well decomposed and screened cow manure. If loam forms one-half of the whole you will not go far wrong. Add some sharp sand and powdered charcoal where your soil is at all retentive or heavy. These begonias can be grown in frames in the summer, but will do vastly better in a greenhouse. Do not shade heavily. Water carefully and air freely. Unless you want some plants in flower quite early, pinch back any shoots which are running up and pick off all flowers.

Begonia incarnata improved is a valuable winter plant, not so much grown commercially as its merits would seem to warrant. Three rooted cuttings in 6-inch or 8-inch pans make splendid plants, and these can be had in fine flower for Christmas, but can be held some weeks later if desired. B. La Vesuve, a scarlet, continuous-blooming variety with a vigorous habit, should be more grown for Christmas. It is a much easier doer than Lorraine, Cincinnati or incarnata and can be grown quite cool. B. Gloire de Chatelaine, of similar habit to Erfordii and Vernon, is of a lovely pink color. This, also, is a continuous bloomer and equally good for bedding or pot culture. Anyone unable to grow Lorraine or Cincinnati satisfactorily will find Chatelaine a splendid substitute. As many country florists do not propagate their own begonias, they should order their plants from one of the specialists without delay.

Callas.

Callas can hardly be dispensed with by the average country florist, giving, as they do, a continuous crop of flowers for two-thirds of the year. They are, or should be, resting now, and soon they can be shaken out and repotted. While the old Richardia Æthiopica still is largely grown, there can be no question that the Godfrey is vastly superior. It produces at least double the number of flowers, which are of large size and much purer white. While callas can be successfully grown and flowered in benches or solid beds, pot culture usually proves far the most satisfactory. Three medium bulbs in a 7-inch pot, or three large ones in an 8-inch pot, will give splendid results. Use a fair amount of bone in the soil. Later, also, when the pots are filled with active roots, it is astonishing how the callas will devour top-dressings of this fertilizer.

Palms.

We get occasional rain storms and spells of disagreeable weather even in summer, and at such times a little attention should be given to the palms. Sometimes a sponging may be necessary. In other cases a good pressure from the hose, directed through a spray nozzle, will help to clean the plants. If scale infests them, give a spraying with Aphine, Lemon Oil or some other good insecticide. This will kill and loosen the scales and the majority can be blown off later with a good water pressure. Well rooted plants will appreciate an occasional dose of liquid manure. If their color is a little pale, the addition of some soot will materially help in darkening them.

Pansies.

For winter flowering it is advisable to sow pansies as early as the last part of July, but plants to be used for next spring sales are all right in the more northerly states if sown from August 1 to 15. Seed can be conveniently sown in a coldframe, keeping sashes over the seeds until they germinate and shading them from direct sun, but an even better plan is to prepare beds a yard wide outside, making the soil as fine as possible. If the beds can have the advantage of shade part of the day from trees or buildings, all the better. After sowing, water the beds and give a light mulch of leaves or dry moss. Remove this as soon as the seedlings start to germinate.

For the average grower who wants a few hundreds or thousands of pansies of a good strain, there is nothing superior to the Giant Trimardeau, which is a reliable hardy type, with flowers of large size and attractive colors. This can be had in mixed or separate colors. Perhaps some of your customers may want plants of one special color. In this case it may be necessary to sow suitable colors separately. By far the greater number of buyers, however, seem to like mixtures. If you want something that will flower right through the summer, try some of the tufted pansies or violas. These have smaller flowers than the true pansies, but are much more floriferous and are distinctly superior for bedding.

Repairs.

The hottest period of the year is not the most comfortable one in which to make repairs to boilers, pipes, ventilators, benches or roofs, but it is now that the houses are more or less bare of stock and in many establishments fire heat has been discontinued for some time. Do not leave the overhauling of boilers and pipes until cool nights make you think about starting a fire. Do it now. Do not patch up half-rotted benches and hope they will carry another season; they may collapse when the plants are in full crop. This is a concrete age, but wood still predominates in the majority of greenhouses. Push the bench repairing now; also, all painting, glazing and whitewashing. You will enjoy your vacation all the more if you get these repairs done before you steal away for a little repose.

News from Abroad

Bailleul, France.—A German airship not long ago dropped bombs on the Cordonnier vinery here, the largest in France and possibly in the world, located only four miles from what was then the fighting front. Many of the glass houses were completely destroyed, the vines being at the time in full growth.

Zurich, Switzerland.—This country never has played an important part in the international trade in seeds, bulbs and plants, but has been coming to the front of late as the headquarters of concerns organized since the war. The growth of the business would be much faster were it not for the skepticism of the governments of the warring nations.

Lyons, France.—In the nursery of Pernet-Ducher are at least two new roses that will go around the world after the war. One is Constance, an improved Rayon d'Or, which won the gold medal at the Bagatelle trials, Paris, as the best variety of French origin. The other is Admiral Ward, a hybrid tea named for the American, dark red, said to be a superb variety.

Copenhagen, Denmark.—The Danish growers of pansy seed have had an unusual run of orders from America this season, evidently from those who generally have used German stock.

London, England.—Because of the vehement protest by British dealers, led by W. Cuthbertson, president of the Horticultural Traders' Association, the government has announced that the importation of bulbs by parcel post will be prohibited. The trade felt that the admission of bulbs in the mails and not in quantities by freight would be a great injustice.

London, England.—The increasing comprehension of the power of advertising is well illustrated by the use the Royal Horticultural Society recently made of the "Times" to nullify the effect of irresponsible writings urging that shows and gardening be abandoned during the war. As one writer put it, "it cannot be said that the R. H. S. is habitually prodigal in expenditure for advertising, but for once it has done something out of the ordinary, and has done it well."

CARNATIONS

STEM-ROT STUDIES.

One of the most serious and troublesome diseases which must be contended with by carnation growers in this country is the so-called stem-rot due to the fungus rhizoctonia. In July, 1912, a study of this disease was undertaken by George L. Peltier, associate in floricultural pathology at the University of Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, together with a thorough investigation of those diseases of vegetable, field and floricultural crops which are caused by rhizoctonia, the primary object being to determine whether infection is brought about by one or by more than one race or species of this fungus. The results of the investigation now have been embodied in Bulletin No. 189, consisting of 112 pages, which will be sent free upon request, addressed to Director, Illinois Agricultural Experiment Station, Urbana, Ill.

"Repeated observations in the greenhouse and field," says Prof. Peltier, "have shown that a certain amount of the mycelium must be present before the fungus is able to attack and kill the plant. A small amount of mycelium has always been observed around a carnation plant in the bench a week or more before the plant showed any signs of being diseased. In fact, a certain amount of mycelium is always present in the carnation soil in the greenhouse, but it is only when the temperature is high that the fungus is able to attack the plants. This explains why stem-rot of carnations is more severe during the summer months than in the winter. In the field similar conditions are necessary to result in the infection of a plant."

SHADE FOR CARNATION HOUSES.

Will you please inform me what is the best shading for carnation houses when the field-grown plants have just been set out in the benches? Some claim that plain whitewash is better than if mixed with mud or other coloring matter, as the white surface does not absorb the heat from the sun. Even if this is true, I object to the plain whitewash on account of the glare which comes through.

G. L. B. & C.—Va.

We are indebted to William Nicholson for the following recipe for shading greenhouses, which is the best we have ever tried: Take ordinary Spanish whiting and stir into it enough water to make a thick cream. After allowing this to stand a couple of days, dilute to the desired state and add a 3-inch potful of linseed oil to each three gallons of the spraying liquid. We apply it to the glass with a spray pump. This material will not injure the paint, as a lime wash does, and it will not leave a scum on the glass, as mud does.

CARNATIONS FOR MOTHERS' DAY.

I should like to know when would be the best time for me to plant carnation cuttings for Mothers' day. It is difficult to get flowers at that time from the northern markets, and I have decided to grow enough to supply our trade. Please tell me, also, which you think would be the best varieties of carnations for the purpose.

H. C. S.—Fla.

There is no carnation on the market today that will give enough blooms for one day to come anywhere near paying for the cost of growing them up to that time. It takes about half of a season's crop to cover the cost of growing a carnation plant up to the first real crop of blooms, and, unless you can make use of the blooms for the rest of the season, you would be likely to lose through the venture. Perhaps the following plan would prove successful in your case: Plant your beds in mums. Then pot, and carry along in cold-frames, enough carnation plants to plant these beds after the mums are finished. Carry the carnations along cool and do not allow them to bloom until they are well established. Under such a method, the first real crop would be ready late in spring and probably would cover the Mothers' day period. Use White Wonder and Matchless for white; Enchantress Supreme, Mrs. Ward and Rose-pink Enchantress for pink.

WHAT WE WANT.

E. G. Hill, of Richmond, has been greatly interested in the pros and cons of American vs. British carnations which have been spread before the readers of a British trade paper of late. Injecting his little say-so into the discussion, Mr. Hill points out an interesting difference in the essential requirements in the two countries, as follows:

"The one point to be borne in mind in a discussion of this sort is the fact that climatic and trade conditions are quite different in the two countries. We in America must have varieties of carnations that will give good bloom in the late autumn and early winter, and they must produce flowers in quantity at this particular season of the year, and especially at Christmas time.

"If I understand British conditions aright, the height of the carnation season begins in March and ends in the latter part of June. I think I can state truthfully that hundreds of fine carnation varieties have been thrown aside in this country simply because they did not produce sufficient bloom to be profitable during autumn and winter, and most of the British varieties that have had trial in America have not given bloom in sufficient quantity during the periods mentioned above to prove of commercial value to the growers in the United States. Britain has produced some most excellent sorts, gauged by its trade requirements, but they have not measured up to our American standards for American trade purposes.

"It must not be imagined for a moment that there is any prejudice in America against English raised varieties, for such does not exist; neither sentiment nor prejudice counts in the judgment passed upon a valuable new carnation having trade possibilities for our country, no matter what its origin. Growers on this side have tried all the British varieties, or nearly all, but with disappointment over their failure to make good during the winter months."

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Carnation Thenanthos has been registered by Anton Then, Chicago, Ill., who supplies the following description: Parentage, Enchantress x red seedling; color, brilliant scarlet; size, three and one-half inches; prolific bloomer and entirely free from disease, never being troubled with rust; raised by John A. Then.

Lynn, Mass.—Greenhouses at Lynn were damaged by hail that fell Independence day.

Lowell, Mass.—The city purchasing agent is receiving bids for supplying the park department with 12,000 tulip bulbs.

Portland, Me.—The store of E. J. Harmon & Co. has been purchased by Donald R. Fogg, of Biddeford. Although a young man, Mr. Fogg has seen much service in one of the New York stores.

Stoneham, Mass.—By order of the trustee of the John L. White estate, the Wright street greenhouses and 12,000 square feet of land have been sold to Christine C. Drewett, of Roslindale, Boston.

Worcester, Mass.—More than 1,000 plants, comprising azaleas, cosmos, nasturtiums and geraniums, recently were contributed by H. F. A. Lange to the city gardens.

Hartford, Conn.—The Rose Hill Floral Co. has filed a certificate of organization with the secretary of state. The officers are: President, Louis L. Barton, of West Hartford; vice-president, A. P. Pitner, of Hartford; secretary-treasurer, Ralph M. Grant, of South Windsor. The capital stock authorized is $50,000, divided into 2,000 shares of common stock, par value $25. The amount paid in is $50,000 in property other than cash. The president holds 1,998 shares of stock.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

LEAF ROLLERS ON MUMS.

Will you kindly inform me what to use for leaf rollers on chrysanthemums? I am using nicotine extract, at the rate of about a tablespoonful to a gallon of water. This solution, however, does not affect the pest in the least.

F. H. L.—Ind.

I have never had any actual experience with the leaf roller, but I understand it is extremely troublesome in some localities, and one of the hardest possible pests to exterminate. A grower of my acquaintance cleared his house of it entirely by the use of cyanide of potassium every ten days. If it is impossible to use this, hand-picking will have to be resorted to, as the caterpillar's habit of rolling itself up in the leaf renders it immune from poison, and fumigation with tobacco will not bother this insect. Were I in F. H. L.'s place, I would try the cyanide treatment, as affording the easiest and best way of exterminating this pest.

Chas. H. Totty.

MARKET FIXES BLOOM SIZE.

I have a few hundred extra fine chrysanthemums in a bed. They are from eighteen to thirty inches high, with from two to five branches each. They were pinched back at six to ten inches and now are unusually strong, some of them being as thick as a pencil. The compost is rotted sod, 1 year old, and rotted manure. Now, shall I allow only one flower on each lead or shall I let them branch at the top and leave two or more blooms on each lead? The varieties are Pacific Supreme and Glory of Pacific. Will they be too early? I am spraying them with Bordeaux, with nicotine added. Last year I had blooms six and one-half inches in diameter.

E. B.—Pa.

Whether you should grow one flower to a plant or let them branch is entirely optional. For the finest results, the plants should not be allowed to produce more than one or two flowers to a plant. The thing to consider is whether or not your market will pay the price for stock of this grade. If you could use a medium grade of stock to better advantage, which will sell, say, at $3 per dozen, the plants may carry three or more flowers.

The plants that now are eighteen to thirty inches in height have made a splendid growth and you should have fine results. Because the plants have been planted early is no reason why they will bloom earlier, but they will give you better finished flowers when they do bloom. If I were you I would grow just a few specimen show blooms—one flower to a plant—in order to make a display. The large blooms are always valuable for show purposes and as advertising, but if you were to run your whole house in large flowers I question if it would be profitable.

Chas. H. Totty.

TOP CUTTINGS ARE BEST.

I have about 1,000 rooted chrysanthemum cuttings ready to bench. In making these cuttings I cut two or three from the same growths on the old plant, and I am informed that they are not so good as if cut only from the tops of the original growths. If you can give me some advice on this, I shall greatly appreciate it.

J. G.—Ill.

I am not sure just what J. G. means by taking two or three cuttings from the same growth, unless it is that the growth was extra long and he cut the same growth in two or three places. If this is so, the plants would not be so good as if they were top cuttings, since the growth farther down the stem is considerably harder than the top and the cuttings will not run evenly or grow the same size when so treated. Cuttings made from hard wood often run to bud, instead of growing along and making a good, clean growth, as top cuttings will. If the stock has been rooted some time and is now making a nice growth, it may prove to be fairly satisfactory, but, speaking on broad, general principles, this method of increasing stock is not to be commended.

Chas. H. Totty.

CUTTINGS KILLED BY FUNGI.

We are sending you a few samples of cuttings which are affected by a fungus. The fungus has given us considerable trouble in our cutting bench. In fact, out of 2,000 chrysanthemum cuttings we did not get over 100 to root. We have cleaned out the sand and put in a fresh supply, after whitewashing the bench and giving it a good washing with a solution of formalin, but all this seems to do no good. Perhaps you can tell us of a remedy. If you can tell us the reason for the presence of the fungus, we shall take steps at once to prevent it.

C. F. S.—S. C.

The trouble referred to is the usual bench fungus, and if C. F. S. has faithfully carried out the work as described in his letter, cleaning the bench, putting in fresh sand, whitewashing the bench, etc., the trouble must be due to the sand. In such a case the only thing to do is to sterilize the sand by cooking it with live steam for an hour or two before putting it in the benches. This will kill all the germs of fungoid growth and should insure a bench of cuttings free from fungi.

Chas. H. Totty.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS LOSING FOLIAGE.

Can you tell me what is causing my geraniums to lose their foliage? There are small flies hovering over the beds and the decaying leaves seem to have some kind of parasites on them. I have sprayed the plants with nicotine and soap suds, but have not been able to check the decay. The geraniums in the greenhouse are not affected. I am sending a leaf taken from an affected plant.

J. B. M.—Mo.

The principal cause of geraniums losing their foliage outdoors is not the attacks of insects but fungoid affections due to abnormal climatic conditions. Heavy rainfalls at frequent intervals, or long spells of hot, moist and more or less sunless weather, frequently cause geraniums to lose a great deal of foliage. When this fungoid disease is in an aggravated form, it can be checked by using Bordeaux mixture or Fungine as a spray, being sure the foliage is dry when the spray is applied. Greenhouse-grown geraniums, not being exposed to the same weather conditions, are not usually affected in this way, and when attacked are more readily and more successfully treated.

C. W.

WORMS ON GERANIUMS.

I am sending you a stem of one of my ivy-leaved geraniums. There is something on the stem, but I have been unable to ascertain what it is. What would be the best thing for me to do? I burned tobacco stems in my greenhouse a few days ago.

M. E. E.—Ind.

The stem appeared to have been tunneled by a small worm of some kind, but I could not find the worm. Fumigating with tobacco would be of no avail against pests of this character, but if you spray the plants with a nicotine extract—the directions come on each can—I think you can overcome the worms. This remedy has proved effective against the marguerite leaf miner and I think should prove serviceable in your case.

C. W.

GERANIUMS FLOWERING POORLY.

For two years I have noticed that my plants of Poitevine geraniums have grown rank, flowering but sparsely and producing flowers of small size. Other varieties under the same treatment do well. From this description would you advise a renewal of stock? Is there any salmon-pink geranium similar to Poitevine and Viaud that you would advise as being suitable for growing?

H. F. W.—Mass.

Poitevine is naturally a robust variety and it flowers, or should flower, with unusual freedom. While it has been in commerce about thirty years, I have not noticed any weakening in its constitution. Possibly your Poitevine plants were in a too rich soil. I would advise you to hold your stock, if it is healthy, and would suggest that you use less rotted manure in the soil for Poitevine than for other varieties, as likely to make it flower more freely.

The following varieties are good commercially: Berthe de Presilly, light rose-pink; Mme. Jaulin, peach-pink; Mrs. Lawrence, bright salmon-pink; Mme. Landry, salmon-apricot. If you have not grown these varieties I would suggest that you try one or two of each in order to see which would fill your requirements best. C. W.

kerosene emulsion, Aphine or one of the nicotine extracts. C. W.

THRIPS ON OUTDOOR ROSES.

Our outdoor rose plants are full of thrips and I have sprayed them quite often, but with no success. The roses are planted in a field for summer cut. The varieties are Maman Cochet and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. The thrips seem to be getting worse. I have sprayed them with sulphate of nicotine and free nicotine, forty to sixty. We have the Skinner watering pipes over them. Would it be advisable not to use these on the days we spray? I would appreciate any information that would help me to get rid of the thrips. P. H.—O.

Keep the roses well supplied with water and freely syringed. On the days you spray, it certainly would be much better not to use the sprinkler system. I would suggest that you try the following spray for thrips, which has proven successful: Thoroughly mix five pounds of brown sugar and one pound of Paris green. Use two ounces of this mixture in two gallons of water as a spray, applying it in the evening. If it is clear on the morning following the spraying, syringe the roses with cold water to prevent any danger of burning. C. W.

THIS LOBELIA WELL KNOWN.

I have a dwarf white lobelia. Will you kindly let me know if it is a new plant? I have never seen it advertised. C. E. M.—Wash.

A white form of Lobelia speciosa, which is of dwarf habit, has been in cultivation for many years. The variety is variously listed as speciosa alba, White Gem, White Lady, White Perfection, etc., but all are practically the same dwarf white lobelia. C. W.

ROSES

THRIPS ON ROSES.

I am sending a few leaves from my rose bushes and should like to have you tell me what is discoloring them and how to treat them. W. S. R.—Fla.

The leaves have been badly attacked by thrips. Keep the plants as well watered as possible and use the hose on them freely, or, if that is not at your command, a force pump will answer. A good remedy for thrips is as follows: Mix thoroughly five pounds of brown sugar and one pound of Paris green. Use three ounces of the mixture in a 3-gallon can of water and use as a spray late in the afternoon. To prevent danger of burning the foliage, spray well with cold water the next morning. C. W.

CUTTING BACK ROSE PLANTS.

I have been trying to put my roses to sleep, but they seem to be growing faster than ever before. I keep the buds pricked off as fast as they appear. Now I wish to know how to cut Killarney roses back after the resting process. You will notice that I am located in the extreme south of Georgia. I have been in the florists' business only a little over a year, but am succeeding finely on the whole and my success is due largely to The Review. M. N. T. P.—Ga.

So much depends upon the size and condition of the plants that no really definite advice can be given regarding the pruning of roses without examining the plants themselves.

In a general way, I would advise cutting away some of the weaker shoots and heading back the branches upon the others, leaving from two to four buds upon each branch. In case there are numerous branches, some of the weaker ones might be removed. The shoots themselves should also be headed back, but to what extent cannot be definitely stated. If the plants are quite high and the lower branches are numerous, cutting back one-third and even one-half may be desirable. This also applies to any tall, unbranched shoots, which should be brought down to the height of the other shoots. T.

REMEDY FOR ROSE THRIPS

I am enclosing a few leaves taken from rose plants grown outdoors. The plants have what commonly is called "curly leaves." Please advise me of the nature of the disease or insect that produces this condition and what the remedy is. G. D.—Fla.

The foliage had been attacked by thrips. This occurs when rose plants are too dry at the roots and when the atmosphere also is dry. As a remedy supply the plants with water at the roots. Use water from the hose at a good pressure, directing it below the leaves, and spray the plants with a

Sweet Peas

FERTILIZER FOR SWEET PEAS.

Will you kindly tell us in what proportion to use blood and bone in preparing soil for sweet peas for winter blooming in the greenhouse? H. J. V. & S.—O.

I never have used blood in preparing soil for sweet peas, either under glass or outdoors. One or two acquaintances who have used it had unsatisfactory results. If used at all, it should not be mixed with the soil but applied in the form of a light top-dressing when the plants show the need of some stimulant. I would greatly prefer, however, to use cow or sheep manure, either in liquid form or as a top-dressing, as being much safer and more certain to give satisfactory results.

Cow manure, well decayed, cannot be beaten as a fertilizer to mix with sweet pea soil. Where this is unobtainable, sheep manure, applied at the rate of 100 pounds per 500 square feet of bench or bed space, with twenty-five pounds of fine bone, each thoroughly incorporated in the soil, will make a satisfactory growing medium. Winter sweet peas can be grown either in raised benches or solid beds. The latter are preferable and it is important that the soil be worked over at least eighteen inches deep and be well drained if you want the best results. The plants will require liquid manure or top-dressings during the flowering season, in addition to the fertilizers already mentioned.

C. W.

VIOLET-COLORED SWEET PEA.

Please tell me through The Review the best dark blue sweet pea to plant to take the place of violets for color. I want the violet color regardless of the size of the blooms. L. V. G.—N. M.

Le Marquis as a forcing variety is a good dark blue. Navy Blue is a good outdoor variety of a violet-blue color.

C. W.

EARLY AND LATE PEAS.

Please name some good varieties of sweet peas for late and early sowing, in white, light pink and lavender.

G. F. C.—Tenn.

In pure white, White Orchid, or Bridal Veil; Yarrowa, rose pink, wings lighter pink; Mrs. A. A. Skaach, bright pink; Mrs. Alexander Wallace and E. Burke, lavender. These varieties are equally good for early or late sowing under glass. For flowering extremely late, such outdoor Spencer varieties as the following may be used: Constance Hinton, white; Mrs. Hugh Dickson, cream pink; Hercules, deep pink; Florence Nightingale, lavender. GULLETT'S STAFF'S OUTING.

The employees of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., picnicked near Salt Creek, commonly called Baker's Fish Trap, August 2. It was a most enjoyable day. Games took the attention of everyone, special contests being held between the employees at the new place and at the old place. The baseball game and a tug of war were won by the staff at the new range. A tug of war and various other events were won by the men from the old range. Refreshments were served and, especially a supply of iced watermelons supplied by the firm, were greatly enjoyed by all.

GULLETT & SONS' ACTIVITIES.

Great changes are being made in the ranges of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill. The old range, consisting of twenty-six large houses, is entirely taken up with the growing of pot plants. Approximately 100,000 cyclamens are being grown this season. Of these, a great many will be sold as young plants in 3-inch and 4-inch pots. The rest will be flowered for fall and winter trade. About 50,000 Boston fern and its progeny are grown, in benches and pots. There is also a large stock of begonias, pandanus, dracaenas, crotons, Christmas peppers, rubbers, table ferns and poinsettias, and a large shipment of azaleas is expected. The old houses are being overhauled and repaired, painting and steam-fitting being done.

When the new houses, erected by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., are ready, 100,000 carnations will be planted as follows: 10,000 each of Enchantress, White Enchantress, Champion and Ward; 15,000 Matchless; 6,000 White Wonder; 5,000 Enchantress Supreme. The rest will be planted to Alice, Good Cheer, Gloriosa, Rosette, Nebraska, Akehurst, Pink Sensation, Belle Washburn and Yellow Prince. About 10,000 carnation plants have already been planted from 3½-inch pots and are showing up nicely. Most of the benches for the stock in the field are filled, ready for planting.

Of roses the following varieties will be grown: 10,300 Ophelia; 10,000 Russell; 10,500 White Killarney; 9,600 Killarney; 4,000 Killarney Brilliant; 1,600 Ward; 4,000 Shawyer; 2,500 Hoosier Beauty; 3,200 Richmond; 5,600 American Beauty; 800 Cécile Brunner; 400 Baby Doll; 800 Mrs. Bayard Thayer. Some of the earliest planted young stock of Russell and Ophelia is being cut from and the other young stock and old, replanted stock is in excellent condition.

About 40,000 chrysanthemums of the best varieties will be planted. For this purpose the smaller houses will be used. Later these houses will be used for the grafting of roses and the propagation of carnations and chrysanthemums. About 300,000 Manetti stocks have been ordered for late autumn delivery.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A week of intense heat, high humidity, little sunshine, explosions, street car strikes and infantile paralysis—is it any wonder that the cut flower business in our big city is at its lowest ebb? There was, literally, nothing doing until the week end.

The market is swamped with asters, gladioli and longiflorum lilies. The latter were offered in quantity at $4 per hundred August 5 and 7. In small lots, $5 per hundred was obtainable for the selected. Asters are of high and low degree. Some fine large flowers were in the market, wholesaling at $1.50 to $2 per hundred. From 1 cent each down to 10 cents per bunch were the other quotations, and anything below that grade either went to the street vendors or to the discard. The top price for gladioli seems to be $2 and this only for the selects and the new varieties. Fine stock is selling at $1 per hundred and the lower grades already are quoted at 50 cents per hundred. Valley seems to be the thing needed most and the price of it, because of the scarcity, ran up to $6 per hundred, and even more as the week ended. The supply has been extremely light for many days.

Gardenias begin to appear normal again and some handsome flowers are arriving, worth $1.50 to $2 per dozen. There are practically no carnations arriving, the few being shipped hardly realizing the express charges. Orchids sold last week as high as $1 each. They are scarce, just when the demand is widest. The average price for the best gigas is 75 cents. There are the usual quantities of outdoor stock. Goldenrod and Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora are here and wild smilax is in abundance.

The rose shipments are light, but increasing. Much of the stock is small and short-stemmed, of a No. 3 grade, and disposed of at $2.50 to $5 per thousand. There are some Hadley and Prima Donna roses among them. Some grand Double White Killarney roses are arriving, as well as Hoosier Beauty, Russell and Ophelia.

Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, Mass., and lilies from Carl Woerner, of Secaucus, N. J., are coming in heavily. Fred Theiler is spending his vacation in the Catskills. J. Austin Shaw.

HOUSTON, TEX.

We are still having good weather and everything is coming along well. Every mail brings in news of florists who will attend the convention and new memberships are coming in fast. Waybills are coming in, consigning trade exhibits; some are already here and are being arranged.

Henry Kuhlmann, of Kuhlmann the Florist, states business is dropping off some for the summer but still is good. G. R. L.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

The temperature has been over 90 degrees every day and we had severe thunder storms last week. The heavy rains did considerable damage, but there were no reports of any losses in the trade. The weather has been particularly hard on the men who are emptying and refilling the benches for carnation planting, but the work goes on just the same.

Stock of all kinds is in that peculiar condition in which it does not seem to be affected by the hot weather, except the roses, which open too easily. There are a few carnations still coming and some fair roses. Gladioli are fine, but there are not many good asters. This makes up the stock in trade, in addition to Beauties, which have small heads, orchids, lilies, some snapdragons and greens of all kinds.

The retailers have some funeral work, but, taken as a whole, things are exceptionally quiet. But, then, it would be impossible to take care of many good orders with the grade of stock coming in at this time.

Various Notes.

Benjamin Elliott and his family are sending postals from various New England towns through which they are passing on their automobile trip. J. Wilkinson Elliott, president of the Elliott Nursery Co., sailed for Holland a week ago. This concern is a large importer of bulbs of all kinds and Mr. Elliott wants to look things over, buy the best and try to arrange for shipments. We wish him a safe and speedy journey.

Harold Tayler, with John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, was a visitor in Pittsburgh on his way to eastern cities. Clarke.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Market conditions last week were fair, though funeral work showed practically the only activity. The downtown stores report but little business, but the greenhouse men and growers are busily engaged in outdoor work and preparations for rebenching. Carnations are practically gone, but asters take their place. The early asters were generally a failure, on account of the continued and excessive rainfall, but the crop now coming on is quite satisfactory, both in quantity and quality. Gladioli continue to strengthen in popularity and some excellent spikes are to be seen, at reasonable prices.

Various Notes.

A novelty in the way of a nearly black hollyhock in the garden of ex-Governor A. O. Bourn, at Bristol, where William J. Flynn is gardener, is attracting considerable notice.

According to information filed at the city clerk's office, the business of Geo. Johnson & Son, 521 Elmwood avenue, is conducted by Alexander H. Johnson and Hugo De Wildt.

Joseph L. Savard has commenced the erection of a greenhouse and boiler room on Merida avenue, Woonsocket, to cost $1,000.

A mortgage of $1,800 on the property of Richard Higgins has been discharged by Margaret R. O'Connell.

Henry Patry is spending a two weeks' vacation at Shawomet beach.

Maurice Torgin, formerly with Joseph Koppelman & Co. and Johnston Bros., is now in Arizona.

Alex H. Johnson, of George Johnson & Son, has returned from Port Greble, where he was doing duty as an officer in the Rhode Island National Guard.

Charles Smith, of Washington street, is suffering from a carbuncle on the back of his neck.

Charles H. Hunt has been on an automobile trip through southeastern Massachusetts. W. H. M.

Clarksville, Tex.—Although only in the business since last spring, Mrs. Amos McCulloch has prospered so well that another and larger greenhouse will be erected this fall.

Atlanta, Ga.—At a recent meeting of the State Federation of Women's Clubs resolutions were passed urging the legislature to make the Cherokee rose the official flower of Georgia.

New Orleans, La.—A flower show of some magnitude will be one of the features of the National Farm and Live Stock show, November 11 to 19. C. W. Eichling is superintendent.

Altamonte Springs, Fla.—A 4-acre asparagus fernery has been completed here by Col. E. T. Haines, who formerly was vice-president of the Royal Fern Co. Mr. Haines expects to ship his stock to commission florists during the coming winter.

Richmond, Va.—Delivery of flowers Sundays for funerals, church decorations and the like is a necessity, according to a police justice, who dismissed a case against John L. Ratcliffe and two of his helpers for laboring on the Sabbath. The ancient Sunday laws of Virginia have been revived and in violation of one of them Mr. Ratcliffe and his employees were brought into court.

Columbus, Miss.—John R. Laws has resumed management of his establishment, after several years during which the place was leased to another party.

Muskogee, Okla.—The Wieland Floral Co. has just completed the erection of two new greenhouses, which will be quite an addition to the plant. H. W. Wieland, proprietor, was owner and manager of Lincoln Heights Nurseries, in Newtown, Pa., for twenty-five years.

Ada, Okla.—The Ada Greenhouse, of W. E. Pitt, is only three years in business, but Mr. Pitt is well pleased with the increase in demand shown each season. The spring trade was excellent. There are three railroads centering here and no other greenhouse within fifty miles in any direction.

Enid, Okla.—If western speed and eastern stick-to-it-iveness are a winning combination, then the prospects of the Enid Floral Co. are most promising, as W. E. Roberts, a New Yorker of experience, has joined A. D. Zimmerman and J. Brand in a partnership that will operate the company. Mr. Roberts has taken charge of the growing end of the business. A plan of expansion has been mapped out by the trio, to begin with the erection of three houses.

BUFFALO.The Market.

An intensely hot wave made Buffalo gasp for cooling breezes, but the city nevertheless was reported to be one of the least suffering of the cities that sweltered under a fierce sun.

Good Beauties are sufficient for present requirements, but other roses are quite the contrary in this respect. Russell, owing to its keeping qualities, is about as much in demand as any rose in the market. The supply in general is short. White as a rule will accumulate for several days and then suddenly clear completely. Ophelia seems to be decidedly popular. The carnations to be had are showing the effects of the hot weather, being small in size and soft. Red spider has a grip on some of them.

Valley is not in much better condition than last reported. Easter lilies now are enjoying a great demand as the result of funeral work. Gladioli are unusually scarce this season, but those that arrive clear with no difficulty. Cattleyas have increased in supply somewhat; the demand for them is rather small. Asters are arriving in small consignments, the stock being short and small as a result of the dry and hot weather. The inferiority of this flower, which is an important item of the summer months, reacts on other garden flowers, which are none too abundant at present. Greens are in ample supply.

The Florists' Club's Outing.

Never before has there been such a large turnout of florists as at the outing of the Florists' Club this year, which was held at a new place, the Automobile Club's grounds, at Clarence. The weather was ideal—not any too warm. The first event on the program was the baseball game between the greenhousemen and the storemen. The joy-maker, L. H. Neubeck, acted as umpire. John Cramer, the pitching demon, and Edward Stroh, the big small man, were the batteries for the storemen, and W. Gittere, the minute-man of Charles Sandiford, and T. G. Tighe, of the King Construction Co., were the batteries for the greenhousemen. The final score was 2 to 1 in favor of the storemen. Every minute proved to be exciting and interesting. After the ball game the athletic contests were held. The winners in each event were:

Fifty-yard dash, for boys under 14 years of age—Sydney Stoll, first; Chauncey Neubeck, second; John Hunt, third; Albert Koehler, fourth.

Race for boys and girls under 12 years of age—Donald Scott, first; Fannie Preisach, second; Geraldine Reichert, third; John Kasting, fourth.

Three-legged race—A. Kieffer and Leo Neubeck, first; John Cramer and Edward Stroh, second.

Hundred-yard dash—P. A. Brennan, first; E. Slattery, second; E. Stuntz, third; Henry Krauss, fourth; R. Kinkel, fifth.

Women's ball-throwing contest—Miss Blessing, first; Miss Berner, second; Miss Hoffman, third; Miss White, fourth.

Women's race—Miss Wilson, first; Miss Blessing, second; Miss Redmond, third; Miss Sewell, fourth.

Hurdle race—G. P. Brennan, first; Leo Neubeck, second; R. Kinkel, third; Joseph Tobin, fourth.

Men's ball-throwing contest—J. Roach, first; W. Grever, second; B. Booker, third; D. Scott, fourth.

Various Notes.

F. G. Nelson, of the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, of Burlington, Ia., and S. D. Greene, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, were recent visitors.

Arthur Wilke, Joseph Cannon and Henry Krauss August 19 start a two weeks' vacation at Conesus lake. Joseph Cannon also will spend a week at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Harold Taylor, with John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., stopped here en route to Washington, D. C. He intends stopping off at Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

For several weeks W. J. Palmer & Son have had carnations placed in front of the store, with a placard reading:

"Take a carnation and drop your offering to send some young kiddies to Cradle Beach." The sum realized was $150, for which the committee was grateful. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Palmer and family toured to their summer home in the Muskoka region, where they expect to stay for several weeks. Thomas Cahill, of the Z. D. Blackistone store, Washington, D. C., was here last week en route to Niagara falls. A. E.

CINCINNATI.The Market.

The continuous hot, dry weather has seriously impaired the cut, both in quantity and quality. The better grades of flowers have sold readily and at times have run short. The entire supply, however, is not large. Roses are in limited supply. Gladioli and asters are plentiful. In the former the choice light colors are in greatest demand. Easter lilies are abundant and meet with a good call. Rubrum and album lilies have a good market. Hardy hydrangeas are excellent and sell pretty well.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson are the only Cincinnatians who, up to this time, have signified their intention of attending the S. A. F. convention at Houston, Tex.

C. E. Critchell has had a good sale for his Lilium speciosum, rubrum and album.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett and Mr. and Mrs. William Mayhall drove to Amelia, O., on Sunday, August 6. They found everything at Charles Pommert's place in excellent condition.

Miss Laura Murphy left August 6 for a two weeks' stay at the Murphy cottage at Le Cheneaux.

Among recent visitors were G. E. Moore and J. T. Turner, of Rushville, Ind. C. H. H.

William A. Natrop, formerly with the E. G. Hill Co., has opened an office at 910 First National Bank building to practice his profession as a landscape architect.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

William Sim, of Clifondale, Mass., is reducing the area of single violets and giving the space to roses and carnations. This stock is in splendid shape and will be an important factor in the market. The Comet tomato is appropriately named, as the fruit and seed bring the highest figures known to the writer. Among other interesting and promising items here are polyanthus grown for blooms, pansies for seed, and a select strain of Early Cory sweet corn, sown in pots in the greenhouse and transplanted into a 10-acre tract.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., is preparing for holiday trade with a house of ardisias, pretty stock that is setting fruit. There are also cyclamens, heaths, Dracæna Godseffiana and other stove plants. A visit to this place, one of nature's beauty spots, at this season of the year, is charming.

The W. W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, Mass., has a fine lot of Otaheite oranges that are setting fruit. The cyclamens, begonias and early chrysanthemums also are highly promising. The new house is rapidly going up, to take care of holiday stock. "We have just closed a most prosperous season," commented Mrs. Edgar. I met Manager Herman H. Bartsch, who had just returned from the sweet pea show, feeling greatly pleased with the outing and perfectly fit for the fall campaign.

W. T. Walke, of Salem, Mass., finds local retail business increasing, necessitating the growing of a larger variety of stock and the engaging of more labor. "There's more money in it also; so we have to do it," observed Mr. Walke.

McGee, Geary & Co., of Salem, Mass.,

are taking the opportunity to repaint their establishment. Funeral work is a leading feature in their trade and has been notably steady for some time.

Chatterton Warburton, of Fall River, Mass., has taken possession of his new store, located directly opposite the old one. More space and several other advantages are gained by the move. Funeral work has been good right along. His carnations are fine in the field, despite the heavy rains. He finds Benora to be the most useful variety.

Antoine Leuthy, of A. Leuthy & Co., of Roslindale, Mass., was going over some checks at the time of my visit, and remarked, "There is a class of customers who pay promptly in any case, while others will not do so, no matter how flourishing the times may be. Undoubtedly the coming season will see a tightening up of credits," he continued, "owing to the scarcity of many kinds of stock and the impossibility of importing any to fill the shortage." Mr. Leuthy has just returned from a tour among the leading growers of decorative plants in the east and he bases his opinion on the result of his observations. "A bundle of mail for my house is held up by the Allies and we do not know when it will reach us; so we are at a total loss as to what to expect in several large shipments supposed to be in transit. I find our experience is similar to that of many others," concluded Mr. Leuthy.

The Breck & Sons Corporation, of Boston, reports a record-breaking season in the sale of implements. Thomas Grey is again with this house, and greeting his large circle of old-time friends. W. M.

OBITUARY

Jackson Thornton Dawson.

When the news spread August 3 that Jackson Dawson, Boston's and New England's grand old horticulturist, was no more, there was a feeling of universal sadness among his hosts of friends, and I am sure that a great many beyond the confines of the Old Bay state will feel keen pangs of regret when they read of the death of this able, genial, warm-hearted and lovable man. Mr. Dawson had been ailing for several months, but until the last day or two his condition was not regarded as critical and his friends felt sure that his strong vitality would pull him through.

Jackson Dawson was born in the East Riding of Yorkshire, England, in 1841. He came to America when quite young and at the early age of 8 years started to work in the nurseries of his uncle at Andover, Mass. He moved from there to Cambridge, Mass., a few years later and worked for a considerable time in the noted nurseries of C. M. Hovey & Co., at that time the Mecca of new and rare plants in America. His enlistment during the Civil war dated from August 2, 1862, and he served until the close of the great struggle. He was severely wounded in the leg, which bothered him to some extent the rest of his life. While in the southern states he studied the plants of that region carefully and sent home many packages of seeds.

In 1871 Mr. Dawson was offered and accepted a position with the Bussey Institute, Jamaica Plain, Mass., then in charge of the late Francis Parkman. After two years' service in the school of horticulture there, Prof. C. S. Sargent took the place of Mr. Parkman and a little later became director of the now world-famed Arnold Arboretum, which is one of the departments of Harvard University. Mr. Dawson was appointed superintendent of the arboretum over forty years ago and then began his wonderful life work in the propagation of hardy plants from all parts of the temperate globe. As a propagator, no matter whether it was from seeds, cuttings, grafts, layers, roots or by some other method perhaps not previously considered, the deceased had no equal in America, and his wonderful skill with admittedly difficult subjects was even better known and appreciated in Europe than in America. He sometimes tried his hand with cool greenhouse plants, and the writer has seen plants of Acacia pubescens seven feet in height from grafts made in the modest arboretum propagating house, only one year from grafting. The way in which he grew countless thousands of rhododendrons, azaleas and other shrubs was an eye-opener for even expert propagators.

Mr. Dawson had a great love for all plants, and they certainly responded in wondrous measure to him as a propagator. Professor Sargent, with whom he worked for the upbuilding of the Arnold Arboretum for so many years, thus referred to Mr. Dawson's place in scientific horticulture: "Mr. Dawson seems to be able to look at a plant and tell you what its affinities are—that is, what it may be grafted upon. He is a real wizard in this line. He seems to know the art of grafting by intuition—what stock to use, in what condition to use it and how to use it. This knowledge and skill he has acquired by patient practice and by love for the things with which he works. Plants seem to respond to affection, and he has that affection in large measure. In addition to the great number of trees and shrubs he has raised here, no one can tell how many hundreds of thousands he has sent to every part of the United States, and every part of the countries of Europe."

Mr. Dawson's skill as a hybridizer also was quite pronounced. He raised, among other roses of merit, Farquhar, Dawson, William C. Egan, Lady Duncan and Professor Sargent. He discovered the Scotch heather growing wild in Massachusetts some years ago. He propagated it freely from seeds and cuttings and after proving its hardiness to skeptics, popularized it in Massachusetts to such a degree that now whole hillsides of some estates are being covered with it. His work with difficult or intractable plants would take too long to describe. Suffice to say that he mastered all of them; that many thousands of people have enjoyed seeing them and will ever hold in affectionate memory their associations with our dead friend. So long as the Arnold Arboretum survives and the love for beautiful trees and shrubs persists, the name of Jackson Dawson will be indissolubly wrapped up with the people.

The writer has frequently heard the remark that Jackson Dawson had no enemies, and he can well believe it. Those privileged to work as his assistants can well bear this out. Matthew Daley worked under Mr. Dawson over forty-four years and never had a quarrel. He says he was treated more as a son than as an assistant. A. P. Calder, Sr., who knew him intimately since 1861, bears similar testimony.

Mr. Dawson was a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society and secured numerous medals from that society for his novelties. He joined the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston in 1887, served as a member of the executive committee in 1888, as vice-president in 1891 and 1892, the years following the Boston S. A. F. convention, and as president in 1893. Of late years he had been carried on the rolls as one of the club's honorary members. He also was a member of the Horticultural Club of Boston. In 1911 Mr. Dawson was awarded the George R. White medal of honor by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the great work he had done in advancing the interests of horticulture.

In 1866 Mr. Dawson married Mary McKenna, who predeceased him. Of eight children born, six survive him, viz.: William F. Dawson, George Walter Dawson, James Frederick Dawson, a member of the firm of Olmsted Bros., landscape architects; Henry S. Dawson, who operates the Eastern Nurseries; Mrs. Harold Blossom and Miss Laura Blanchard Dawson.

Funeral services were held at St. John's Episcopal church, Jamaica Plain, August 5, when there was a large gathering of mourning friends. A multitude of beautiful wreaths and other floral designs were banked in the chancel. The casket was covered with beautiful flowers, including one of the bonny purple heather.

Among those connected with the horticultural trade noted were: Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, W. A. Manda, A. E. Thatcher, W. J. Stewart, Charles S. Sargent, David Welch, Charles W.

Jackson Dawson.

Hoitt, A. P., Sander, A. R. Sargent, Charles Sander, William Martin, William Thatcher, Jean Finlayson, T. D. Hatfield, W. P. Sch, John H. Dillon, James B. Sher, W. N. Craig, W. H. Judd, E. H. Wilson, David Weir, Leonard Barron, W. E. Fischer, E. Allan Peirce and Alfred Rehder. Interment was at Christ Church graveyard, Andover, Mass., where Mrs. Dawson was buried some years ago. The honorary pallbearers were Prof. C. S. Sargent, E. H. Wilson, Judge C. W. Hoitt, William Warner Harper, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and Prof. Benjamin M. Watson.

John Charlton.

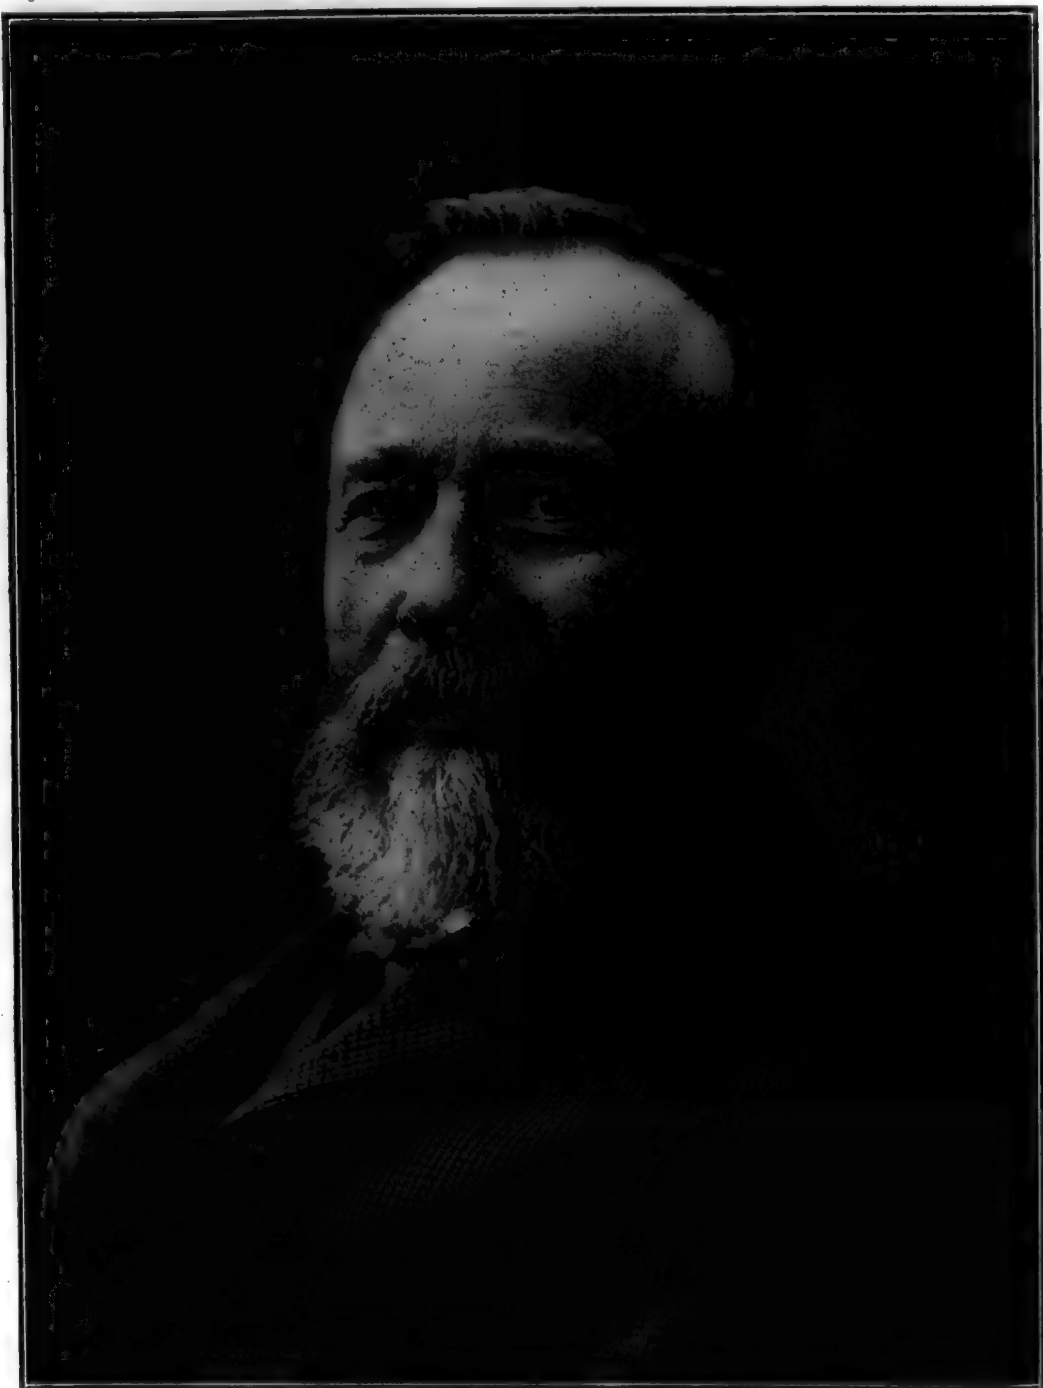

John Charlton died at his home, 629 Culver road, Rochester, N. Y., August 2, at the age of 80 years. In his death the city loses one of its veteran horticulturists, one who ranked high in his knowledge of plants and fruits and who did much toward making Rochester worthy of its distinction as the Flower City. He was the last of the pioneer nurserymen who settled in the vicinity. He was born at Horningsham, Wiltshire, England, November 19, 1835. At the age of 17 years he became apprenticed at the gardens of Longleat, which is now one of the show places of England. After completing his apprenticeship he went to the island of Guernsey, where he took charge of the garden of Peter De Jersey. In the fall of 1856 the young gardener landed in New York. The first winter he worked in Canada and in the following spring he removed to Rochester, where he spent the rest of his life. In 1864 he was married to Miss Sarah McAskie. In 1865 he started in business for himself in a humble way, growing flowers and small fruits.

His wonderful knowledge of the business won for him much respect and prominence. His knowledge of botany, both through study and through observation, was of the broadest kind. He stood for all that was noble and progressive in horticulture and the nursery trade. He was known throughout the country as the founder of the Charlton nurseries, but he had still greater fame as an importer of new varieties of plants. In 1869 he introduced into this country Ampelopsis Veitchii, and it was he who first offered a number of the Japanese and Chinese shrubs that long since have become generally popular. In 1873 he propagated the Peter Henderson tree carnation, and later he introduced the Pocklington grape and the Golden Prolific gooseberry. After 1883 he devoted his entire time to the growing of nursery stock. When his sons, John A. and Joseph M., became old enough, he associated himself with them under the firm name of Charlton & Sons.

The funeral took place from his residence, August 4. Rev. Marvin J. Thompson, pastor of the United Presbyterian church, officiated. Mr. Charlton is survived by his wife and two sons, John A. and Joseph M.; also by two daughters, Mrs. W. B. Kerr and Miss Margaret Charlton, and three grandchildren.

John Supper.

John Supper, of Lakewood, N. J., aged 70 years, who for many years sold the output of his small greenhouse to the people stopping at Lakewood's fashionable hotels, committed suicide

John Charlton.

July 31 by shooting himself. The tragedy occurred at the decedent's home. Ill health was the cause of the act. A wife and two sons survive.

Naham J. Greil.

Announcement is made of the death July 17 of Naham J. Greil, president of the Greil Bros. Co., of Montgomery, Ala., wholesalers of groceries, liquors and seeds. The seed department was started September 1, 1915, the main business of groceries having been established in 1865.

Mrs. George C. Shaffer.

Mrs. George C. Shaffer, wife of one of Washington's leading retail florists, died August 6, after a long illness.

Mrs. Shaffer was one of the best liked among the lady florists of the national capital. She was extremely active in everything pertaining to the social life of the florists and was a leader in the ladies' auxiliary when it flourished for a number of years. At the florists' outings she always took a prominent part and usually wore the badge designating members of the reception committee. Her loss will be equally felt in the neighboring city of Baltimore, for on many occasions she was hostess to the lady florists of that city. And other cities will miss her pleasant smile during the holding of S. A. F. conventions, for here again she always took a leading part, lending her every effort to make the stay of some other person pleasant.

Mrs. Shaffer held the honors among the lady florists of the District of Columbia as a bowler, for, like her husband, she was an adept at that sport and was the winner of many trophies.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Shaffer leaves behind her a young son, Clarence Shaffer. The funeral was from her residence in the Brighton, 1342 I street, northwest, with burial in the Congressional cemetery.

Mrs. J. L. Dillon.

July 25 occurred the death of Mrs. Louise H. Dillon, owner of the J. L. Dillon florists' business at Bloomsburg, Pa., under whose will the entire property and business are given to her two sons, Charles H. Dillon and Harold P. Dillon.

The florists' business in Bloomsburg was founded in 1875 by J. L. Dillon, father of the present owners, under whose successful management it grew to the largest in that section of the state. At his death in 1906, the business went to Mrs. Dillon, who greatly enlarged and improved the establishment. The business will be continued under the name of J. L. Dillon and the management of Charles H. Dillon.

IRELAND, where the seedling raisers are especially active, is supplying a surprising percentage of the new roses and promises steadily to increase and improve its output.

THE heat has been so great the last month that it is a wonder there is any business at all. That business has been the best ever known at this time of year shows how flowers are passing out of the list of luxuries and becoming necessities.

PLANT stocks never were lower in this country than they are this summer. In a measure this is due to the non-arrival of many of the usual spring importations, but the chief factor in reducing stocks has been an exceptionally good year's business.

THE recent high temperatures have given most of the growers something to think about. Many plants, especially roses and mums, are showing symptoms of having suffered more or less as humans would if compelled to stay under glass under such unusual conditions.

A FEW blooms of Golden Glow chrysanthemums have appeared in the cut flower markets during the last fortnight, but most of them are sorry-looking specimens. Just what growers expect to gain by starting the season before creditable stock can be shown is a mystery.

FLORISTS' SUPPLIES houses have stocked all sorts of merchandise with confidence that purchases now will look cheap by comparison with the prices the goods will cost after the autumn season opens. These astute merchants do not believe prices in general will show any decline in 1916; quite the opposite.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

PITTSBURGH PLANS SHOW.

A large flower show will be held in Pittsburgh in June of 1917, under the auspices of the Garden Club of Allegheny County. The proposed date is June 13 to 16.

One of the largest and most centrally located halls in Pittsburgh will be engaged, wherein to make the display. The plan and scope of the exhibition will be of the most comprehensive character. The choicest products of the many fine gardens in Pittsburgh and vicinity will be displayed in competition to an extent never before attempted in that city. An opportunity also will be afforded florists, nurserymen, seedsmen and other allied trades to participate. A preliminary schedule offering $5,000 in prizes is being drafted. This will be sent out to gardeners, growers and everyone interested as soon as possible, so that they may have ample time to grow and prepare their exhibits.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., who has so successfully managed and arranged recent large exhibitions in New York, Philadelphia, Newport and other places, has been engaged as manager.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Cleveland, O.—Jack Keck probably has established a new record among retail florists by getting into financial difficulties after only five weeks in business. After an experience of some years in the employment of others, he started in business for himself, in the latter part of June, at 8309 Cedar avenue, and August 3 his attorney called a meeting of the creditors for August 9, saying: "My client started in the florists' business some five weeks ago with a limited capital, is now in a position where his creditors are pressing him for money, and he is desirous of making some arrangements so that he can still continue to do business at the same place. Mr. Keck is a man who has had considerable experience in his line and he is an honest man and fair in his dealings with everyone, and he feels that if he was given an opportunity to continue business he would be able to make good. I therefore suggested to him to call the above meeting and take the matter up with his creditors. He is desirous of obtaining an extension of time of one year for the payment of his present indebtedness. He had chosen this method in preference to going into bankruptcy because that would mean a loss to himself, and a total loss to all of his creditors because after paying expenses and the allowance of exemptions there will be absolutely nothing left for the creditors."

ROCHESTER TO HAVE SHOW.

A flower show is to be held in connection with the annual exposition at Rochester, N. Y., September 4 to 9. The show is planned along different lines from the one held last year, in which some of the best growers in the country made exhibits. This year it has been decided to have a competitive exhibit and prizes are being offered. There are classes for amateurs as well as professionals, and also a division in which both will compete. Prize lists may be obtained from Secretary Edgar F. Edwards, 309 Powers building, Rochester, N. Y.

NEXT WEEK'S CONVENTION.

With reference to next week's convention of the S. A. F., Vice-president R. C. Kerr, of Houston, has sent the following letter to members:

Just a word from the 1916 convention city. We have lined up a most interesting entertainment program and, also, I wish to call your attention to the business that is to be transacted at this convention.

We have some vital questions that will be taken up for discussion at this meeting, which are to guide the destinies of this organization in the future. I want to urge that you attend this convention if it is possible for you to make arrangements to do so.

The florists of Houston and of Texas particularly urge this invitation. We are going to do everything in our power to make this a grand success. We will hold our state convention on Monday preceding the S. A. F. convention and, after we have our business meeting, then the Texas florists will be formed into a reception committee and will look after the visiting members from without the state.

This is an unusual opportunity for you to visit the great state of Texas. The eyes of the people of the U. S. are now on this great state and I believe that you should avail yourself of this opportunity to see the most wonderful state in the union. We are within twenty-five miles of the Gulf of Mexico and we enjoy the gulf breeze here that will make it most pleasant for you while in our city.

Mr. Kerr also offers his services to anyone who wishes to arrange hotel accommodations, etc. Hotel Rice is to be convention headquarters.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

With the exception of a slight increase in the number of short roses and a steady shortening of good stock in other lines, there has been little change in Chicago market conditions. The first part of last week there was every indication of a break in the hot weather. Cool breezes from the lake fanned the city and the mercury slid down to a point more conducive to the general welfare. For a few days stock looked better. Then the city again found itself sweltering in abnormal heat. With but a short lapse now and then, trade continues to hold up with a surprising continuity. Funeral work, of course, constitutes the bulk of the demand.

Young Beauties, which are practically the only kind to be had, are coming into the market more plentifully. The demand for them, however, is only fair. Of other roses there is little to be had in the fancy grades. Most receipts are short and medium length stock. All varieties, without exception, have suffered from the heat. Russell seems to be standing up under the strain better than the others, but really first-class rose stock cannot be had in any quan-

Your Trade Will Like These New Beauties

FOR many years the best liked flowers of summer have been the short and medium Beauties, the first cut from young plants. And again we have a large crop. Much the best roses now in market, following the hot weather. Excellent values at 4c, 6c, 8c, 10c, 12c to 16c.

THE BEST ROSES

We offer a large cut of such Roses as Mrs. Russell, Milady, Sunburst, Ophelia, Ward, Brilliant, etc. We have the largest supply of Roses in this market, the largest in America. Quality excellent for the time of year.

FANCY GLADIOLI

Of course we have America, King and Augusta, for these are the old favorites; but we made special preparations for the Gladiolus season by arranging for a large supply of the newer and different varieties, such as Myrtle, Golden King, Mrs. Pendleton, Primulinus Hybrids, etc. Of Myrtle we have a specially large quantity, as it seems to be a most popular shade of pink. The cut is heavy and will continue large through August.

GOOD ASTERS

In spite of the dry weather, that has ruined many a crop, we offer good Asters—long stems, large, full flowers, grown under irrigation; all colors. We shall be glad to have you try them, for we know you will want more.

LILIES

These offer the largest show for the money any flower will make in summer. You can use them for almost every purpose, and you will do well to carry some always in stock, as we do.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

We can supply all the Valley you need—on telegraph order if need be, but why not arrange for regular shipments, so YOU will always have some on hand?

tity. Killarney has enjoyed a little better demand during the last week than has fallen to its lot for some time.

Valley shows little tendency to desert the short side of the market. Easter lilies, too, are scarce. Cattleyas are scarce, but in small demand. The intense heat has about cleaned up the daisies, and snapdragons are none too plentiful. Gladioli are in extremely moderate supply for this time of year and enjoy a steady demand. Quality is much better than one would expect under existing conditions. Among the heat sufferers are the garden flowers. While they are still on the market, they bear signs of their struggle. Asters are showing the lack of rain and the growers are facing a heavy loss. Auratum lilies are becoming few in the market.

Greens are in sufficiently large supply to meet the demand and move evenly, though not rapidly.

Various Notes.

A. Miller, Albert Koehler, Robert Newcomb and Samuel Seligman went to New York last week on business connected with the American Bulb Co., the organization of which, with headquarters at 172 North Wabash avenue, is reported on page 11.

The agent of the Wabash railroad states that to August 9 only one reservation has been made for the trip to Houston, Tex., to attend the convention of the S. A. F., and that one was made by Fred Lautenschlager, of the Kroeschell Bros. Co. August Lange and M. C. Gunterberg have indicated their intentions of going and P. J. Foley is on the way.

A contract has been let by Bassett & Washburn for the construction of a 2-story cold storage building 28x28 feet at Greggs, Ill. Also a 2-story packing shed and storehouse, 35x60 feet. Both buildings will be constructed of brick and fireproof hollow tile, with concrete floors and asbestos shingles. The contract is in the hands of Peter

Instead of being in the market for field-grown carnation plants, as was the case last season, the George H. Heim Co., at Blue Island, this year has 73,000 in the field with less than 25,000 needed to stock the houses. It has been a good growing season. The establishment has been rebuilt and put into first-class condition since coming under the present management.

At Maywood the Weiss & Meyer Co., which specializes on Beauties, is get-

Saturday F. F. Benthey, who makes his headquarters with Kennicott Bros. Co., received many congratulations, from friends who recalled that this Nestor of florists was born August 5, 1850. With his sixty-six years he is much the oldest man in the Chicago wholesale market.

Funeral work has been keeping Otto F. Larson, 1604 West Sixty-third street, so constantly on the go that he has had little time to think of a vacation.

According to John Ziska, of Joseph Ziska & Sons, the demand for large wire designs has been the heaviest during the last three weeks his firm has ever known for this season of the year.

An elaborate electric fountain in the display window of A. F. Keenan & Co., 1306 East Sixty-third street, is attracting no little attention. Mr. Keenan reports summer business in both his stores the best he can remember.

Everyone on the market has been agreeably surprised by the continued activity of business during the hot days. Paul Klingsporn, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says this is proving the best summer in his experience.

The store formerly owned by J. F. Wolniewicz, 1550 North Kedzie avenue, has been purchased by May Flynn.

At Libertyville Joseph Kohout is starting to cut roses from the young stock and everything looks promising for next season. Mr. Kohout has a new Pathfinder and his vacation is being taken in short trips to the lakes in which northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin abound.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., for many years on South Wabash avenue, now occupies the warehouse of the James H. Rice Co., on St. Clair street, the latter concern having been absorbed some months ago.

In spite of the hot weather, the business of D. D. P. Roy continues to grow and another man has been added to his staff in the person of George D. Reid. Mr. Reid was formerly with the Ernst Wienhoeber Co., 22 East Elm street, and he will assist Mr. Roy in the operation of the Lake Forest store. Several good landscape contracts have been booked recently.

PHILADELPHIA.The Market.

There is no special change in cut flower market conditions, save that gladioli are much more plentiful, at lower prices, and that good asters and good roses are scarce. There are a great many poor asters; it is estimated that fully eighty per cent of those coming in are inferior.

Cattleyas now are fine and at slightly higher prices. Valley at times is hard to obtain. The absence of eastern-grown roses, especially Beauties, is explained by the extremely slow express service between Newport and this city. Shipments take from twenty-four to thirty-six hours in transit. This is prohibitory in hot weather, as the flowers are unfit for shipping when received, and often they are too far developed even for local demand.

There are a few new-crop local Beauties coming in, and some nice Maryland.

Management.

A successful retail florist in a suburb of Philadelphia described his progress in nine years of endeavor. He believed that the principal factor in his career lay in his keeping before him "constantly the necessity for brain work." Said he: "When a man has seven or eight or more people working for him it is impossible for him to do much of his own work. He has no time for that. He must plan every bit of work his employees do, and see that it is properly done and done on time. Where a large number of plants are grown in a number of varieties this is no easy task. On this place are grown a greater number of varieties than are usually found on one place. Each variety must be ready at the required time or it is unprofitable. Take, for instance, a case that occurred the other day. A man who had been here for three years was told to wash the Cattleya Mossiae plants.

He carefully washed off the new flower spikes that had just formed. Even with an experienced force of workmen these mistakes will occur. Unless a close watch is kept, they will prove costly.

"While the Easter and spring seasons have been unusually good, the closeness with which one followed the other made it extremely difficult to have everything on time. I have not visited many florists, but those I have visited have had many of their spring crops late, owing to the short time for preparation. I made it a point to keep every inch of space full, potting up the spring plants as fast as possible. Three-fifths of the spring stock had received the final shift before Easter and the remainder was done immediately after Easter. To do this, night work at times was necessary and, owing to the unusual labor conditions, much judgment was necessary to get the work done without friction. We were so successful, however, that practically everything was ready in time. During the spring we kept two automobiles going daily from early until late, taking out the spring plant orders. Now we have a clean place with almost nothing left over."

FIELD-GROWN CARNATION PLANTS

We believe in honest advertising. Owing to the cool, late Spring our carnation plants are not as large as we have had them other seasons. But quality, well—can't beat them. 300,000 ready now. Our guarantee back of every plant. We will reserve your stock until you are ready for it, if ordered at once.

This interesting bit of information comes from Emil H. Gerschick, who in nine years has changed the Pelham range from a run-down place to one of the best retail growing establishments in the city. Practically all the flowers and plants are retailed on this place. The quality of the stock grown is excellent. Mrs. Gerschick and Miss Mary Gerschick ably manage the store.

Coal.

The last article on coal that appeared in this column strongly advised those who could to purchase their coal early, owing to the unsettled labor conditions in the coal regions this season. While this is true, a new condition has recently developed. The fear of a strike last April was so heavily discounted that it has had a marked effect. So large a quantity of coal was stored at that time that the usual summer orders are not coming in. Buying is light and some of the collieries are having trouble in marketing their output. This has

Our paint is especially adapted to greenhouses.

The florists say we put the stuff in it. Anyway we pride ourselves on making a paint that will wear and withstand the exacting greenhouse conditions.

The Moisture Will Not Get Under the Paint

The cost of the paint is small compared with the cost of the labor for putting it on; therefore why not use the best paint for the purpose, which several years' experience with greenhouses has proven to be Tunlin?

Finish the Story for Yourself

The Florist in question was in business for over 20 years, and, as he told our man, he had tried all sorts of baskets during his career. Even up to two months before placing a small order with us, he had bought a line most of which he still had on his shelf. Our man knew at a glance that neither he nor any other florist could sell the line he had in any quantity, and so advised him. After a long conversation (which, by the way, was probably too long for the florist in question), he gave our man an order which from the amount purchased looked more like an order to get rid of the man than to get the few baskets. It was not long after that a good sized repeat order came by mail; then another; until today this same florist is one of our largest buyers of baskets.

If you don't sell many baskets, it is because you don't have the baskets that can be sold at a nominal figure. Get the habit of buying your baskets where large quantities of baskets run into small quantities of money.

Don't fail to see the line our men have on the road.

All baskets contain liners.

led to a break in prices in some instances on orders for present delivery, and to an extension in time on some contracts. While the lowest prices quoted are higher than last season, they are not as much higher as at first. There is a growing feeling among florists that some of the cheap coals are often more expensive in the long run than the higher grade coals. The wide-awakes are studying the percentage of ash and the B. T. U.'s.

American Rose Society.

Samuel S. Pennock believes that the time has come when the American Rose Society should advance to the dignity of a great and powerful body and have a show of its own. He hopes that the executive committee at a meeting to be held in Philadelphia in October will decide to hold an independent show, preferably in Philadelphia, next March. In this way Mr. Pennock believes the scope of the society could be enlarged and many new members secured. The idea is to make the rose society in this community truly national. This would entail methods somewhat similar to those used in making the National Flower Show. They would include publicity, a guarantee fund and a thorough canvass for more members, particularly among influential amateurs, whose support would mean so much to the society and its welfare. It is earnestly hoped that all who are interested in the future of the rose will support Mr. Pennock in carrying out this plan.

Various Notes.

Martin Reukauf has returned to this city.

Clarence J. Watson is away on his vacation.

H. H. Battles is putting his handsome shop into shape for the fall campaign.

Strawberry plants in front and flowers suggestive of the strawberry planting season formed an attractive window display at the Henry F. Michell Co. store.

There are three sad deaths to record: That of the mother of John Grunnes, of Gloucester, N. J.; that of the youthful Mrs. J. W. Grandy, of Norfolk, Va.; that of Mrs. George C. Shaffer, of Washington, D. C.

John Deutscher has been in New York, closely following the ups and downs of that market.

The Market.

The long, dry spell of weather has become discouraging to many of the growers. Outdoor stock is at a standstill. We have had about four weeks of warm days, with much sunshine and only an occasional shower or two. The growers fortunate enough to have a sprinkler system are cutting a fair quantity of blooms. Outdoor stock, however, with the exception of gladioli, is quite inferior. Gladioli are not as plentiful as they might be, but some fine Francis King, Niagara and America blooms are seen and clear easily. Asters so far are not at all good, being small and irregular.

The supply of cut flowers is somewhat limited. The daily shipments of roses are below the average, but these are of fair quality, considering the season. My Maryland, Francis Scott Key, Sunburst and Ophelia roses move easily. Lilies are none too plentiful; the same may be said of valley. Sweet peas are good, but they have short stems, which render them less salable. Carnations now are poor—particularly small. Achilleas, candytuft, bachelor's buttons and snapdragons are found useful. Good hydrangeas are in the market, as well as a few good gloxinias, but blooming plants are not seen much. Greens of all kinds are quite plentiful. Galax and magnolia leaves move well.

The Market.

Summer dullness prevails in the usual degree. Roses of all kinds are poor and it is almost impossible to procure American Beauty roses, even at top prices. Indoor carnations are about done for in this market. There are a few still coming in, but these are not of much account, although they are selling fairly well.

Although the weather has been exceedingly hot and too wet, there are some fair dahlias offered. Asters are more plentiful and their quality is better, but they are not considered as good as those of former years. This condition is due to the unseasonable weather during the growing period. There are a few gardenias in the market and there is a light demand for these. Some summer-blooming sweet peas are fair in quality and sell well. Gladioli are arriving in huge quantities. While there are some fine specimens that bring good prices, the majority of them are thrown on the market at whatever price they may bring. At this time the double white althæa, or Rose of Sharon, is being largely used in funeral work. It is declared to be superior to carnations and white balsam. Large quantities of Golden Glow are being received. Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora is being used for church decorations, of which there are a few, occasionally.

Florists' Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., President R. L. Jenkins was instructed to confer with Secretary J. Henri Wagner, of the Aquarium Society of Washington, which is considering the matter of holding an aquatic exhibit of flora and fauna sometime during the late fall. It was suggested by Secretary Wagner that possibly the florists might cooperate by holding a flower show in conjunction therewith.

The death of Captain Emil G. Schaffer, one of the members of the club, caused the adoption of a resolution that the regret of the club be made known by spreading upon the minutes an expression of sympathy for the family of the deceased. Two representatives were appointed to attend the services at Lee's chapel and at the grave in Rock Creek cemetery. Milton Thomas and Otto Bauer were the representatives selected.

An invitation was received from the Kallipolis Grotto, a Masonic organization in which a large number of the florists hold membership, to participate in the "family excursion" to Chesapeake beach August 23. The attractions will be many. In past years the florists have coöperated to a considerable extent with the Grotto, even to having a joint outing at the beach.

Captain William H. Ernest rendered a preliminary report on the annual outing of the club, during which he declared this to have been the most successful event in its history. The evening closed with a discussion of routes to Houston, Tex., and the annual convention. Ex-president Richard Vincent, Jr., addressed the members on this subject, urging that as many as possible be in attendance. It is not expected that more than six will make the trip this time. The secretary was instructed to make note in his minutes of the meeting of the death of William F. Kasting.

Various Notes.

Over in Anacostia, D. C., Adolph Gude is busy prior to leaving for the convention at Houston, replacing the five large houses which he recently had torn down. Mr. Gude believes that the cheapest way to rebuild an old house is to use new material entirely from the ground up. The new houses will be more modern in type and equipped with the latest hoisting apparatus. The houses demolished were erected over twenty-three years ago.

Fred H. Kramer is much disappointed with a letter he has just received from Van Zanten & Co., of Hillegom, Holland, wherein that concern states: "Sorry to say we are not in position to fill your order for 50,000 Paper Whites."

The area of the United States Botanic Gardens will be greatly increased if the bill passed by the Senate is favorably acted upon by the House of Representatives, to which branch it has just been referred. The Market.

There was some improvement in business last week. Heavy funeral orders helped to relieve congestion and prices averaged a little better than those of a week ago. Roses are, in the main, of inferior quality, although some nice Beauty, Ophelia, Stanley, Miller and My Maryland roses are coming in. Prices vary from 50 cents to $12 per hundred. Only a small number reach the highest figure. The best Beauties sell at $20 per hundred. There now are no carnations of any value in the market, but an abundance of fine asters make their absence little felt. Values of these were as high as $3 per hundred until August 2, from which time the values have declined until flowers now may be had from 50 cents per hundred upward. Gladioli are abundant and lower in price.

Lilies, next to asters and gladioli, now are the most important flowers in the market. They have been selling quite well. Thanks to clearer skies, sweet peas have been arriving of improved quality. Gypsophila is abundant. The double form sells best and, while it is in season, the call for asparagus is small. Bachelor's buttons, sweet sultans and other annuals form the bulk of the other flowers seen. Cattleyas were well cleaned up in late funeral orders and now are in shorter supply. Valley is ample for all requirements.

Various Notes.

William H. Carr, one of the most popular and genial salesmen at the Boston Flower Exchange, one who always has a pleasant smile and can sell flowers when others fail to do so, was married at Cambridge, August 3, to Miss Helen Scorgie, late bookkeeper for the W. nished numerous other choice designs. I noted here some fine vases of aconitums and the new pink astilbes, grown at Bar Harbor, Me.

The death of Jackson Dawson, while not wholly unexpected, caused a general feeling of sadness in horticultural circles here. He was a man universally esteemed, one who will be greatly missed and whose place will be hard to fill. Although 75 years of age, he had been until recently so hale and hearty that his friends felt that he would rally from his sickness. See the obituary column for details of his life and career.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is making concrete walls for a large storage shed for coal, contiguous to its battery of boilers. This concern's large new greenhouse now is being glazed. Winter-flowering stock, such as begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias, never looked better.

Recent visitors included F. G. Sealy, Rutherford, N. J.; Thomas Knight, New York; William Warner Harper, Chestnut Hill, Pa.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; A. E. Thatcher, Bar Harbor, Me.; Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.; Charles W. Hoitt, Nashua, N. H.

Samuel Wax, of Wax Bros., left for Maine August 8 with Mrs. Wax and family. He will spend one week at Old Orchard and will later go camping until September 12. Martin Wax returned from his vacation August 7. He had some heavy catches of fish while away. J. B. McDonald, of Wax Bros., leaves for his vacation August 12. Mrs. Pike, bookkeeper, left August 1 for a month's vacation. Some fine designs were furnished for the Jordan funeral, including one for the Old Colony Trust Co.

William H. Elliott is cutting specially fine American Beauty, Ophelia, Stanley and Miller roses for the season. Sales of asparagus just now are comparatively light.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are heavy shippers of Queen of the Market asters. Last week they sold some thousands as high as $3 per hundred, a good price for an early variety.

It is expected that the gladiolus show opening August 9 will be the most extensive Boston has ever held. All the specialists in this flower will make large exhibits.

Before returning from his vacation, David Welch spent several days at the military training camp at Plattsburg, N. Y. He is strong for preparedness, but considers Plattsburg does not afford facilities for the training of men from so many states and thinks each state should have its own training grounds. Shipping trade at Welch's shows a decided improvement.

Penn had a large number of high-class funeral orders for the late E. D. Jordan, using cattleyas and valley in quantities. This firm reports a large volume of funeral business.

In H. R. Comley's window I noticed a nice display of nymphæas, fancy caladiums and herbaceous perennials. Specimen hydrangeas in tubs were used outside the store.

John McFarland, of North Easton, is sending in a fine lot of cold storage lilies and Asparagus Sprengeri. His houses of mums are looking well and he is stocking up on poinsettias heavily.

The Welch Bros. Co. reports a large increase in shipping orders to shore and mountain resorts. In addition to its large lines of roses, valley, etc., its shippers now are sending in asters and gladioli heavily. W. N. Craig.

rain arrives, which is badly needed. Asters, gladioli and dahlias are nearly burned and single tuberose stalks appear sickly.

Gladioli sold at $3 to $6 per hundred. Locally grown asters are small, but some fairly good stock is shipped in and brings $3 per hundred. Dahlias soon will be arriving in large numbers. The dry, hot spell has retarded their growth somewhat. Roses are mostly short-stemmed and poor in quality. They, too, are suffering from the excessive heat. The white varieties continue best in demand. There was an excellent demand for carnations, but the fancies would be called rubbish in the regular season. The scarcity of stock has kept prices up this summer. Greens continue in large demand. The scarcity of smilax keeps asparagus moving at a lively gait.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association held its monthly meeting August 2, at the Eleven Mile House. Secretary Deutschmann reports a good attendance and much important business transacted. The date for the annual picnic of the association is August 24. It will be held at Creve Coeur lake. Messrs. Cerny, Rowe and Werner were selected the committee on arrangements, and Albert Scheidegger is marshal. All in the trade are invited to attend.

The building under construction at 1410 Pine street for the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. is making rapid headway and the new company is assured that it will be ready not later than September 5.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold an important meeting August 21, at the Mission Inn Garden. President Charles Young and Secretary Weber are making efforts to have all the members present.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, has a large field of his new yellow canna, Queen Helen, and it is worth the trip to see the grand sight. Mr. Emunds invites all florists to visit him to see what a grand variety this new canna is.

H. L. Merkel and R. S. Hoyt, proprietor and landscape designer, respectively, of the Watrous Nursery Co., of Des Moines, Ia., were visitors last week. They spent most of the time at the Missouri Botanical Garden, studying plant material.

Fred Grossart, landscape superintendent at the Valhalla cemetery, reports that the association will build two greenhouses, each 20x51 feet, with a large conservatory in front.

F. H. Weber left August 7 for a month's stay at Estes Park, Colo., accompanied by his family. Mr. Weber says a good rest after a busy season is most beneficial.

J. F. Ammann and family, of Edwardsville, are away for a month's trip through Indiana. Mr. Klein and Mr. Smith are in harness, preparing things for the fall trade.

Fred Alves, of the cut flower department at Angermueller's, and Harry Schlechter, of the supply department, will start this week sprucing up the place for the fall trade. Mr. Angermueller says shipping trade keeps up remarkably well this summer.

In the parade of the city employees August 5 none made a better showing than those of the park department and of the city forester's office. These were led by Ernest Strehle, superintendent; John Moriz, head of the greenhouses, and Julius Koenig, city forester.

August Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Seed Co., is spending his spare time on the company's fall catalogue. The picnic for the employees will be held sometime this month. Mr. Hummert says the mail-order business has been quite heavy of late.

James Gurney, head of Tower Grove park, is out early each morning looking after his pets in the lily pond. He takes great pride in showing the blooms of his new varieties. Some of the fine ones are Frank Trelease, Stella Gurney, R. J. Lockland and Pink O'Marana. These daily attract great crowds.

Martin Lechner, of Lechner Bros., who is on the Mexican border with the soldiers, writes that he soon will get a thirty days' leave of absence. He will return to help his brother, Ben, in getting out the fall bulb orders.

Miss Dollie Laughlin, buyer in the wholesale district for Mrs. M. Eggeling, is one of the best buyers in the market. She makes the trip in her automobile every morning and has a chauffeur to guide her on her trips.

Visitors last week were Harry Balsley, of the Detroit Flower Pot Co., Detroit, Mich.; M. Le Vine, of Lion & Co., New York; H. G. Knowlton, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. J. J. B.

HOLYOKE, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held August 1, at the establishment of R. S. Carey, of South Hadley, Mass. The attendance was well up to the average and practically the entire session was devoted to the reading and discussion of essays. H. E. Downer read a paper furnished by the National Association of Gardeners, entitled "Horticulture as a Profession, from the Standpoint of a Gardener," by J. Johnson, of New York. The essay was replete with good points and a most interesting discussion ensued.

G. W. Thorniley, florist at the state hospital, read a paper entitled "Reminiscences of Bedding Plants," from which we gathered that some of the stock offered today falls short of the standard of quality obtaining in years past. This naturally started something and the discussion ranged all the way from the customers' pocketbook to the problem of obtaining efficient help. Mr. Thorniley also entertained the audience with his experiences on a recent trip to Florida. H. E. D.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

MANY American firms have dealings with the British firm of Hurst & Son and will learn with regret of the death of its head, N. N. Sherwood, in late July.

CHARLES H. VICK, of James Vick's Sons, is chairman of the trade committee in charge of the flower show that is to be a feature of the exposition at Rochester, N. Y., September 4 to 9.

LAST week's boat from Bermuda brought only seventy cases of Harrisii, forty-eight of which were consigned to Peter Henderson & Co., New York, and twenty-two to Maltus & Ware, forwarders.

JAMES FISHER, formerly associated with A. L. Berry & Co., of Chicago, has been appointed sole representative of the Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., in the middle west. He will office at 180 North Dearborn street, Chicago.

THE entire fourth floor of the building at 258 Fifth avenue, near Twenty-eighth street, New York, has been secured by the Knight & Struck Co. as its new quarters. The company moved to the new address August 1.

THE secretary of state at Springfield, Ill., reports the incorporation of the Chicago Seed Co., of Chicago, with $5,000 capital stock, by Charles H. Hammill, Samuel Guestdorf and Harry Markheim. The latter is a lawyer at 105 West Monroe street. He declined to divulge the names of his principals.

A. H. SMITH, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., of Chicago, who recently returned from Louisville, says there is a heavy yield of onion sets to the acre planted, but the acreage there is small. In that part of the country there have been almost daily rains. The sets are, however, coarse and large.

JUDGING from present appearances, the onion set crop in the vicinity of Chicago will be one of the choicest harvested in recent years. The sets will average from one-half to three-quarters of an inch. The quality is excellent, dry, hard and uniform. The yield, however, is not more than half that of average seasons.

THOSE who have been over the ground say the navy and wax bean crops of Michigan are suffering heavily as a result of the excessively dry weather. The leaves on the plants are dropping and the pods are shriveling. Unless these crops have rain soon they will be a complete loss. At best it will be more than a fifty per cent loss.

THIS is from a British contemporary, dated July 19: "The copious rains and the prevalence of cold nights still keep seed growers in an anxious frame of mind. Some crops will, unless atmospheric change comes quickly, be scarce, and not only the growers, but the buyers for big seed houses will have difficult problems to solve."

APPLICATION will be made August 26 for letters patent incorporating the Allen & Reils Seed Co., a new concern, which is to be capitalized at $10,000 and which is to engage in a general seed business at Tampa, Fla. Its charter will allow it to engage in business in Cuba and the West

ENGLAND TO ADMIT JAP BULBS.

It is announced that the English government has agreed to allow the trade to import fifty per cent of the usual quantity of Japanese lily bulbs under special license granted by the Board of Trade. The details of the arrangement have not yet been worked out and announced. If the quantity admitted is half that of normal years it will be about 3,500,000 bulbs, nearly if not quite as many as the trade in England used last year when under no restriction. If half last year's quantity is admitted it will take about 1,750,000 to 2,000,000 bulbs off the market in Japan.

JAPANESE LILY BULBS.

There is a feeling in the bulb trade that the prices of lily bulbs must go up in keeping with the rise of other commodities, and especially with the rise in price of other products of the soil in Japan.

It is true that the supply of Japanese lily bulbs this season is ahead of what at present appears to be market requirements, due to the action of the British government in closing the English market, but this does not necessarily mean lower prices, for the simple reason that those who wish to insure the continuation of the industry know that they will kill the goose that lays the golden egg if they do not pay the growers as much as they could make from the land under some other crop.

A few years ago it was considered that a normal crop of longiflorum bulbs in Japan was from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000, of which England took 9,000,000 and the United States 7,000,000. The crop has not increased to any appreciable extent, but recently America has used 9,000,000 to Great Britain's 7,000,000. This was before the great war. In the last two years the English consumption of bulbs has been materially reduced, good authorities estimating last year's quantity at one-half the normal. The Japanese knew this and reduced their planting this season to in some measure guard against an over-supply.

That England will take no Japanese bulbs this year is not yet certain. That the embargo was under consideration was known to the Japanese months ago

Yes, trailing after me at noon and in the evening; he surely "got on my nerves." He was a widower with three children and a terribly lonesome life—that is, as he claimed, for he worked the sympathy racket. I really did feel sorry for him, and I tried to be polite at least. He called at the office five and sometimes six times a week. Oh, my! What a bore! And then I had a real sweetheart, the one I really liked, and there was certainly no room for the soft, mushy love talk which The Nuisance was trying to pass me free of charge. He wanted me to marry him and made the most desperate efforts to appeal to my sympathy. I could not quite understand why I had such an aversion to this man, but he was really disgusting to me. He almost tortured me with his unwelcome attentions. However, I do admire the man who makes a determined effort to win the girl of his choice, and does not take "No" until he is positive she means it. I told him I did not like him and I never would. Then he turned the story completely around, telling different parties how I was in love with him, how he could not escape my attentions and devotions to him, and that he felt sorry for me, but he just could not see his way clear to reciprocate the love. Oh, rot! What a joke! The story did not hold good, but he has a wild desire to make all the men think he is popular with the fair sex and that the women just run after him awful. Well—

RAINBOW

FREESIAS

Our crop of bulbs grown in California now is ready for delivery, and the bulbs are of exceptional quality, ranging in size from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. The mixture offered includes several shades of yellow, orange, lavender and pink, all harmonizing with each other when bunched together.

Rainbow Freesias are great money-makers for all florists, whether they grow for their own retail trade or for the wholesale market. Splendid sellers at top prices. Moreover, the habit of plant is branching, each bulb giving two to three flower spikes with stems long enough for all floral purposes.

$5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000; $187.50 for 5000.

(Note.—Because of the branching habit, Rainbow freesia will give twice to three times as many flowers per bulb as will Purity or refracta alba.)

Every jobber and catalogue house that has a trade calling for high-class novelties should write at once for terms on Rainbow. Freesia bulb growers write for prices on planting stock (bulblets).

and instances are known in which British funds paid for large quantities of bulbs which it now is sought to get into England on the contention that they were bought and paid for before the embargo and will be a loss to the English owners if excluded.

[It is reported the English authorities have agreed to admit fifty per cent importations of Japanese lily bulbs this season.]

It is believed to be a fact that bulb growing recently has been less profitable to the Japanese farmers than have other crops, and it is on this that the trade bases its belief that higher prices are necessary if the industry is to be continued on a rising plane.

THE KENILWORTH Giant Pansy

Seeds are all grown by myself and are offered in the following mixtures and separate colors:

- 22. GIANT KENILWORTH STRAIN. The flowers are of perfect form and substance; many of the immense flowers are from 3½ to 4 inches. It is a striking collection of beautiful colors and markings, rich with shades of red, brown, bronze, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.
- 24. GIANT KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of large flowers; the immense flowers are of circular form and great substance. A beautiful collection of colors and markings.
- 26. GIANT KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Is a distinct class by itself, surpassing all other strains as a cut flower or for exhibition purposes, for inside or outside growing; the large flowers are carried erect above the foliage on heavy stems, 7 or 8 inches long, in the most graceful manner, and stand the hot, dry weather well.
- 28. GIANT MASTERPIECE. A remarkable type; the curled, wavy petals giving the flower a double appearance; large flowers of great substance, on long, strong stem.
- 30. GIANT THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED PANSIES. A superb mixture. Flowers large and of circular form and of great substance. The display of coloring is unsurpassed. A combination of almost every shade of rich, velvety colors; reds are particularly conspicuous; the petals being distinctly marked with three or five large, dark blotches.
- 32. GIANT PARISIAN. The flowers are of enormous size and beautifully marked, mostly fine dark blotches on white and yellow ground; an unusually showy mixture.
- 34. GIANT BRONZE. A fine mixture of all shades of velvety brown, bronze, Havana brown, mahogany and copper shades.
- 45. GIANT APOLLO (Masterpiece type). New bronze, veined and blotched. Strongly frilled petals. A superb Pansy.
- 49. GIANT MERCURY. New. A deep blackish purple, really self-colored, without blotches or spots. The flowers are extraordinary in size and substance, being the largest flowers of all self-colored Pansies.
- 82. ORCHID FLOWERED, Mixed. A dwarf, free bloomer, with a range of delicate colors that do not exist in any other Pansies; a remarkable combination of light rose, shell pink, bluish mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamolais.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters, and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for Autumn planting on graves and for very early bedding, as well as for early cut flowers.

- 14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
 - 15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark blue eye.
 - 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
 - 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
 - 18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.
- 500 seeds 50c., 1000 seeds $1.00, ¼ oz. $2.00, ¼ oz. $3.75, 1 oz. $15.00.
20. PRINCESS. The New Upright Pansy.

This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weatherproof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy, velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 Seeds 20c., 1000 Seeds 35c., ¼ oz. $1.00, ¼ oz. $2.00, 1 oz. $7.50.

FREE OFFER RAINBOW is a mixture of the most beautiful, gorgeous colors, blotched, striped, veined, margined, etc. With every $1.00 worth of Pansy seed I will send, free, 1000 seeds of Rainbow and with other amounts in like proportion.

furniture fully thirty-eight feet from the entrance, back through the rooms. His first thought was of the greenhouses, not far distant, but they, luckily, escaped with a loss of less than 1,000 panes of glass. The store on Cortland street, Manhattan, suffered a loss of two heavy bulk windows of plate glass, exactly one-quarter of an inch thick, which were broken into a thousand pieces. The window in Mr. O'Mara's office was blown to smithereens and would have fallen on Mr. O'Mara's genial crown had he been at his usual post. Fortunately, it was Sunday, and the craft was enjoying the midsummer leisure, or they would have had disastrous experiences. In many places the streets were completely covered with broken glass. All day Sunday and a part of Monday I saw loads of glass gathered and hauled away.

Peth & Duggan, the new New York seed house, had their store window blown in. Mr. Peth agreed that a new window would give them an entirely new outlook.

Robert Leach and William Keyser, of Jersey City, lost considerable glass, especially the former, their greenhouses being in the zone. W. M.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Several of the hottest days on record occurred last week, the temperature going up to 108 degrees in the shade, five feet from the ground, in Montebello. This is most "unusual," but, as everyone knows, we get a lot of "unusual" weather out here. Naturally, with such a temperature, there has been little doing outside of funeral work, but this has kept up and helped to reduce the surplus stock.

Outside of carnations, gladioli and asters, all the flowers have a tired look. Roses are extremely poor and even dahlias and other hardy flowers are of poor texture and wilt easily and quickly. Many well known faces are missing from the stores, their owners having gone to the mountains or the seaside. Others are talking of going. It may be said that the summer dullness is on in full swing.

Various Notes.

Morris Goldenson, in his capacity of special constable, had to take a prisoner to San Quentin the other day, and jokingly says he brought another back in the person of Jack D'Ortignac, an old-timer in the florists' business here and at one time proprietor of the Redondo Floral Co. store on Spring street. He has for the last few years been in business in San Francisco, but now has joined the staff at Wolfskills' & Morris Goldenson's.

C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., of New York, called on the trade last week.

A. D. Peterson, for many years known to horticulturists here and now foreman at Exposition park, is starting on a vacation trip of about six weeks, intending to call on friends in the principal eastern cities.

The L. A. Floral Co. is handling extra fine asters and Fred Sperry reports business as being fairly good for this season.

Frank McCabe, representing the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago, was here last week, showing a fine line of his concern's specialties.

M. L. Germain, president of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., left for a few weeks' vacation August 1.

J. Allen, of Santa Barbara, who recently joined the ranks of the benedicts, is in Los Angeles on a combined business and pleasure trip. He still is with Mrs. Whipple, on State street.

At H. W. Turner's, Montebello, the new rose stock looks fine. The earliest planted beds have made a good growth and have a hard, robust appearance about them that augurs well for fine cut stock later. Plant sales have fallen off here, but there still is much stock being shipped.

The August meeting of the Los Angeles Horticultural Society was held in one of the lecture rooms of the Chamber of Commerce, August 2, with President Felgate in the chair. About 150 members and others were present, making it one of the largest meetings held

We are much pleased with the results of our plant advertisements in The Review; orders have come in freely and from a wide range of territory.

for a long time. The speaker of the evening was Herbert Goudge, who spoke on "Heredity." His notes were along the lines of the Mendelian laws, as applied to plant life, and he made a most interesting speech. From the Arthur Letts place, at Hollywood, Mr. Hunt brought in a collection of shrub and vine flowers. Stigmaphyllon ciliatum, a large solandra and Parkinsonia aculeata were among those shown.

The Market.

Most of the stores report little activity aside from funeral work, but most of them are enjoying a satisfactory business for this season, despite the competition of peddlers, who sell great quantities of more or less inferior stock. ter being off crop, anyway. Both items clean up fairly well, though at easy prices. Outdoor summer flowers still predominate; snapdragon is abundant and large lots of statice and gypsophilas come in every day, as well as scabiosas, sweet sultans, etc. There is a fine cut of zinnias, which are used more than for many years. Many handsome sunflowers are coming in and some florists are making effective use of them.

A new offering within the last fortnight is amaryllis, which already is quite plentiful but is well received. Tritomas are going off crop; at least there are few in the market. The really conspicuous item at present is asters, which are brought in by the ton by the Chinese growers. Their extremely low price, bright appearance and keeping quality gains them an enormous demand, quantities being used in stores and offices which seldom use flowers. The cut of Lilium rubrum and L. auratum is increasing, but these still clean up well. No tigrinum have yet appeared.

The large cut of gladioli is off, but many growers have a good second crop. The prices are rather low. Dahlias still are improving and fine stock of many varieties is shown, bringing fairly good prices. Sweet peas are gradually going out and the trade gives them little attention. Chrysanthemums are expected to be fairly plentiful within a couple of weeks, but so far the trade has given them little consideration, both growers and dealers expressing disapproval over rushing them in so soon, as they merely compete with other stock and spoil the public's appetite for them later on. Offerings of violets are hardly worth mentioning. Orchids are scarce and many more could be sold than are available, though the demand is not really heavy. Gardenias are in about the same position, though the new crop is beginning to appear. Valley is almost entirely out of the market.

Horticultural Society Picnic.

The picnic held July 30 by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was an even greater success than had been expected. Most of those who attended were well pleased. The day was an ideal one; there was just a touch of wind and mist in the city, which meant comfortable warmth after passing the tunnel into Redwood cañon, on the Oakland & Antioch railroad. The affair was one of the best attended that have ever been held. The membership of the society was fairly represented, including the families of many members, and there was a large crowd from the retail stores and growers outside the organization. A number of the florists closed for the day, or part of the day, in order to attend.

Several carloads assembled at the ferry at 9:20 a. m. and were joined in Oakland by the large east side crowd, reaching the grounds about 11 a. m. Some time later a crowd arrived in Frank Pelicano's auto truck, followed by P. Ferrari in his auto. A basket luncheon was eaten at tables under the redwoods and along the hillside, and afterward the younger people were attracted to the large dancing floor, where an orchestra had started up soon after arriving. D. Raymond, chairman of the picnic committee, put in a lively afternoon, seeing that everything went smoothly, and his efforts were highly successful, earning the hearty appreciation of all present. The afternoon passed pleasantly and most of the picnickers stayed until the 7:30 train.

Various Notes.

The California Dahlia Growers' Association now is counting on making its show next month the finest dahlia exhibition ever held on the coast. Arrangements are nearly complete and more than enough exhibits to fill the hall have been offered, the stock being, according to present promise, exceptionally fine. The premium list will be printed next week. Twenty-one cups have been secured as prizes. These are now being shown in the windows of Podesta & Baldocchi, Pelicano, Rossi & Co., the California Seed Co., C. C. Morse & Co. and Shick's, on Clement street. It is desired to encourage the production of new seedlings and, accordingly, while only 3-year-old seedlings are given official recognition, a cup is being offered for the best collection of 1916 seedlings. It is believed that a great lot of new seedlings will be brought out and the Pacific coast undoubtedly will be put on the dahlia map as it never has been before. Whether as a result or a cause of the dahlia show activity, it seems that the public is taking a great deal more interest in these flowers this year than before. Well known varieties are well received and some of the more showy new varieties are getting a great deal of inquiry.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. are featuring a magnificent cut of dahlias grown on F. Pelicano's place. Burgle, Delice, Kitlewell and Van den Daele are among the most conspicuous, but some of the new seedlings shown at the exposition last year are making a fine showing.

The San Francisco Floral Co. opened a wholesale store several weeks ago at 431 Bush street.

The Hallawell Seed Co., handling seeds, plants and nursery stock at 258 Market street, has taken the adjoining store and is combining the two, putting in new fittings and refinishing throughout, in order to handle the increase of business during the fall. The place has grown from one small store, taking on a rear shipping department on Davis street, and later adding a mezzanine floor.

D. Raymond, manager of the Garden City Pottery Co., returned a few days ago from a vacation at Santa Cruz. The fish were not biting, but Mr. Raymond got well sunburned. On his return, he and E. James, president of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, and H. Plath, former president, made an automobile trip, on business and pleasure, through San Mateo county, visiting many of the growers and nurserymen.

J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., returned the first of the week from a vacation trip of nearly two months, much of which he spent on his parents' ranch in Wisconsin, with some time in traveling to the large cities. He feels greatly refreshed and is getting back in the harness with his usual "pep" and energy.

Shibuya & Ishida, the Menlo Park growers, are bringing in a good cut of Lilium rubrum at present and soon will begin cutting from a planting of about 40,000 pompon mums and 50,000 large blooms. They believe the pompons will

.....We were certainly pleased with the results secured from your Seed last year and florists who visited the University greenhouses said they were the finest sweet peas they had ever seen. They made an unusually strong growth and produced great quantities of blooms.

WARNING:—There are or will be advertised many so-called new Winter Spencers. I have seen many new names on the Exhibition tables, but by careful examination all were identical with my older Winter Orchid, years in commerce, excepting the Yarrowa. have a larger sale than ever this year, owing to their great popularity in the east during the last few seasons.

Frederic Bertrand, of Joseph's, is spending a vacation at the Humboldt county place of Charles Willis Ward. He expects to make an eastern trip after leaving there.

Podesta & Baldocchi a few days ago shipped a big pall of orchids and adiantum for a funeral at Los Angeles, which is quite a distance to ship an article of that kind. It just about cleaned the market of orchids.

E. James is sending in some handsome caladiums in 8 and 10-inch pots, also large cockscombs, a number of specimens of which are shown at the Pelicano, Rossi & Co., the Podesta & Baldocchi and other downtown stores.

The Market.

Cool summer weather prevailed last week and so far there has been but little inducement for people to seek the coolness of the beach resorts. Many flower buyers who usually leave town in July and August are staying at home, and business is benefited by their presence. The demand for flowers for social events is a little above the normal and a steady run of funeral work uses a quantity of stock.

Summer flowers never were of better grade. Nearly everywhere gladioli are the most prominent flowers. Francis

CHICKWEED IN LAWN.

Under separate cover I am mailing a weed that has been springing up in the lawns around town and ruining them. Some people here call it chickweed, but to me it looks more like a weed that would be found in or around water. I maintain that it comes through the water mains, as all the water we use around here is collected during the rainy season and stored in reservoirs in the mountains. Am I right in my deduction? What would be the best way to fight the weed? Will you kindly give me the names of one or two good books on landscape gardening? M. C. E.—Cal.

When the specimen reached me it was dry and in a damaged condition, making accurate determination difficult if not impossible. However, the plant is evidently a mouse-eared chickweed, and probably is Cerastium vulgatum, which is quite generally distributed over the country.

When a lawn is composed of true grasses or other monocotyledonous plants, it will be possible to destroy chickweed and similar dicotyledonous plants by spraying with sulphate of iron, green vitriol, used at the rate of twenty pounds to twelve gallons of water. This should be applied as a fine spray, using a spray pump which will furnish considerable pressure. Care should be taken that only such plants as are monocotyledonous are in the mixture making up the lawn proper, as all other plants would be injured by the spray.

As to books on landscape gardening, Prof. F. A. Waugh has written two works on the subject. One of them, entitled "The Landscape Beautiful," contains 336 pages, with forty-nine full-page engravings, and is priced at $2. The other, named "Landscape Gardening," contains 152 pages, illustrated, and is sold for 50 cents. Either book will be sent postpaid by The Review on receipt of the price. T.

Kennydale, Wash.—W. W. Way, whose place is known as Waycroft Gardens, has been in trouble this season because of a newly established creosote refining works in the vicinity; the fumes are thick, yellow, pungent and do great damage to stock. He has lost all his sweet peas as the result of the operations of the new neighbor.

Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Say! That ad's a humdinger for getting the business.—Everett Floral Co., Everett, Wash.

I sold all the Mum cuttings advertised, and you will not hear from me again until I can get some more stock ready. Shall root 100,000 Carnation cuttings for next season, as I know The Review will sell them for me.—Frank Wilhelm, Los Angeles, Cal.

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

ONE of the pioneer nurserymen of Rochester, N. Y., John Charlton, the founder of the Charlton Nursery Co., died last week. A sketch of the decedent's career is given in the obituary column of this issue.

PROPAGATION OF CLEMATIS

Please tell me how to propagate the large blooming clematis, such as the large purple and Jackmanii.

C. S. R.—N. J.

Propagation of clematis can be effected by grafting portions of well ripened wood on the roots of one of the more robust varieties. C. Flammula is the favorite variety for this purpose. Good, healthy portions of the roots should be selected. The work should be done in a greenhouse early in the year. Cuttings cut up to single eyes and placed in small pots in sand or sandy loam in a propagating case also will root. Layering is another, but somewhat slower, method of propagation sometimes resorted to.

NEW APPLE BODY CONVENES.

The first convention of the National Commercial Apple Growers' Association was held August 2 and 3 in the Young Women's Christian Association's building, Fourteenth and Locust streets, St. Louis, Mo. There were 100 in attendance, coming from a dozen different states. The membership extends from New York to Idaho and from Wisconsin to Virginia. The four sessions were most instructive, replete with papers and discussions on important trade subjects. Membership dues were placed at $10.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. M. Dunlap, of Savoy, Ill.; vice-president, W. S. Forgey, of St. Louis, Mo.; secretary and statistician, H. C. Irish, St. Louis; treas-

SCALE ON MAPLES.

I am sending a few leaves from a maple tree on which I have noticed some insects, and I should like to find out what they are. There are thousands of them on the tree and they are on some plum and apple trees also. These insects have been on the trees about four days. Can you suggest a remedy?

C. C. B.—O.

For this scale spray the trees thoroughly, using a fine, misty spray nozzle, with kerosene emulsion, nicotine, Imperial soap spray, Aphine, or any good proprietary soap or soap and oil spray. When the leaves have fallen in the autumn, treat the trees with either lime-sulphur or one of the soluble oil solutions like Scaline or Scalecide, using one part of the soluble oils to fifteen to twenty parts of water. Be sure to wet every portion of the bark and few pests will remain. Be sure to do this on a clear, sunny day and only when the trees are absolutely dormant.

GROUND COVERINGS.

[Extracts from a paper by O. C. Simonds, of Chicago, read at the St. Louis convention of the American Association of Cemetery Superintendents.]

An important element in nearby scenery is the ground cover. We usually think of the ground as covered with grass, and for most places there can be no better cover than a rich, green, velvety lawn. But there is not always sufficient water to keep a lawn fresh and green. Sometimes there are surfaces so steep that it would be difficult and expensive to mow them. Again, there are areas so shaded that it is impossible to cover them with satisfactory turf.

How should such places be treated? How does nature cover them? Shaded ground, like that in woods, is covered with fallen leaves or with shade-loving plants. Steep hillsides, before the plow arrived, were covered with some growth that prevented washing, so that small streams ran clear even after heavy rains. Often there is an undergrowth of shrubs or young trees that makes an effective covering under overhanging trees, and in the open the ground is frequently covered with shrubs and vines.

Let us consider various situations which present some difficulty and enumerate some of the plants which might be used with satisfaction for covering the ground.

Steep Surfaces.

Steep surfaces, such as the sides of ravines, can generally be protected and at the same time made pleasing by using a combination of trees and shrubs in a way similar to that which nature uses in protecting the borders of valleys and water courses. The writer knows of extremely steep surfaces in Iowa and Missouri that are perfectly protected by a growth of native trees, such as oaks, hickories and lindens, and an undergrowth of Indian currant. Other combinations which come to mind are masses of wild crab apples, with a few oaks extending above them; there may be similar combinations with thorn apples instead of crab apples, or there may be a group of thorn apples and wild crab apples. Maple trees, elms, redbuds, flowering dogwoods, sassafras and all the native shrubs offer material with which most beautiful effects can be made. Often an undergrowth of vines or creepers, hepatica, bloodroots, violets, goldenrod, asters and other perennials will enhance the beauty of the entire combination of foliage and flowers.

considerable areas are covered with one kind of tree or shrub. There may be combinations of two or three shrubs or of shrubs and trees that are satisfactory, but a general mixture made up of many species is apt to have a spotted and confusing effect.

The treatment that has been recommended for boundaries is also applicable to the areas at the corners and angles of large lots. A mass of shrubs or a combination of trees and shrubs makes not only the best possible ground cover, but also furnishes a background for the lot. Against such a background a mass of flowers, such as peonies or iris, will extend the ground cover and furnish a pleasing bit of color. In place of peonies and iris, one might have any suitable, hardy perennial, or might use low, creeping plants like the Wichuraiana roses with their hybrids, the running strawberry bush, dewberries, the American yew, prostrate junipers, or any low, attractive plant that can easily be kept within bounds.

In order to make large grounds attractive, it is necessary to have open spaces, some large and some small, but in between these spaces, framing them in or forming their boundaries, there should be foliage so arranged as to hide, at least partially, one open area from another, foliage sometimes reaching only to the height of the eye and again ascending to the top of the tallest tree. These areas of foliage make a ground cover quite distinct from the usual lawn. They make the lawn itself more effective and form the pictures which constitute the charm of any grounds. By the almost infinite number of different kinds of plants that can be used to cover the ground and produce the banks of foliage desired, one can secure the greatest possible variety.

DAVENPORT, R. ISLAND, MOLINE.

The Markets.

Trade last week was good for this time of year. Flowers, with the exception of roses, are scarce and the demand is such as to create a shortage in most lines. Lilies were not to be had last week. Asters are small and of poor quality. Gladioli, too, show the effects of the dry, hot weather, as do all outdoor flowers, and the prospects for the immediate future are not brilliant.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Staack and Mr. and Mrs. John Staack and family, of Moline, are on a motor tour of Wisconsin. They will stop at Chicago on their return.

Henry Gaethje, of Rock Island, has piped his place so that he can irrigate his fields, in the hope that he may save his late asters and gladioli.

William Knees, of Moline, reports business unusually good, most of it being funeral work. W. G.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The torrid wave, which reached its zenith Sunday, July 30, at an official temperature of 102 degrees, was side-tracked by a wet wave, and last week we were burdened with heavy rains every day. The weather has been somewhat cooler, but the rain has made field work almost impossible. This condition is holding back the local aster crop, and as the carnations are just about done for the shortage is acute.

Some roses are being cut from new stock and these are in excellent shape. The supply, however, as yet is small and hardly meets the daily demand. Gladioli are in fine condition and are moving well. Valley is arriving in sufficient quantities to supply the demand, which is quite light at this time.

Stock in general has been so scarce during the last few weeks that orders were necessarily cut and substitutions were made when there was anything to substitute with. Conditions are slowly improving, however, and in a few weeks should be normal again.

Various Notes.

Albert Hare, with the Holton & Hunkel Co., left last week for an auto trip to the extreme northern part of the state. He will be gone about two weeks and has promised to send fish to so many of his friends that he will have to do nothing else but fish, unless he buys his supply.

In a severe electrical storm August 4 lightning visited the new store of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., at 419 Milwaukee street. The lightning did no damage, however, as it came down a wire from the roof, jumped across the store to the telephone and then ran into the ground.

F. H. Holton, who returned July 29 from a state tour with the Shriners, left the next day in his machine for the northern part of the state, accompanied by his family. H. J. S.

Long Beach, N. Y.—Many persons engaged in a novel pastime here recently, when they gathered cases of Dutch rose plants cast up on the shore by the waves. Each case contained fifty plants and there were scores of cases to be had for nothing. It is believed that an incoming ship dumped the plants overboard because they were affected by some disease.

Joseph Heacock Co., Railway Station, Wyncote, Pa.
JENKINTOWN

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The weather last week was cool compared with that of the last weeks of July and a heavy rain August 4 was a great relief to the suffering stock.

Business continues good, although stock is scarce and poor. There are a few carnations left, mostly white. Few asters or gladioli are to be had and the prospects are poor for the earlier varieties of these. Sweet peas are of the past. Of all the cut stock, roses perhaps are the best sellers, especially Russell. Lilies, auratum and rubrum, are quite plentiful. Garden flowers still are abundant and are largely used in window decorations.

Various Notes.

Eli Cross has had plenty of summer stock and reports business good.

July 25 the Ashton building, in which Miss Mary A. Hartnett's store is located, was burned and, though Miss Hartnett's possessions were not completely demolished, they were badly damaged by smoke and water. The loss was covered by insurance. Miss Hartnett has located at the corner of Monroe avenue and Ionia street until the Ashton building is repaired.

Arthur F. Crabb is out of town for a few days. He reports business unusually good for midsummer.

Lewis Kunst says he has all his carnations benched.

Bruin Slot & Sons have had a big crop of tomatoes, which have been money-makers this season.

them have been planted, according to A. T. Pyfer. This number is about evenly divided among the standard varieties and a few of their 2-year-old seedlings. For red, Mr. Pyfer is strong for Herald.

Visitors.

Eugene Dailedouze and wife, of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., spent several days in town this week on their way home from a trip to Alaska. They left New York June 14 and not until they reached Chicago did they meet any hot weather. Of course Mr. Dailedouze has been visiting carnation growers along the route. He says it is plain to be seen the weather has been upsetting the calculations of those hereabouts.

Julius Staack and wife, John Staack and family and Henry Staack, all of J. Staack & Sons, Moline, Ill., stopped in Chicago the first part of the week and visited friends both in and out of the trade. They have been motoring through the Rock river country, in lower Wisconsin and down the lake to Chicago. August 8 they started back to Moline. John Staack says that because of the extreme heat they have been working their greenhouse men from 4 o'clock in the morning till noon, giving them the rest of the day to follow their own devices. Julius Staack, who is over 70 years of age, and his wife, stood the long trip well.

Frank Farney, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, has installed a display of florists' supplies at the Palmer House, intending to spend two weeks working this territory.

S. B. Wertheimer, of New York, has a ribbon store at the Palmer House this week, where he is receiving visits from the customers of Wertheimer Bros.

Members of the trade were visited last week by George Hampton, treasurer of the Joseph G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia. Mr. Hampton arrived in the city in time to hit the end of the record-breaking hot wave.

Tom Best, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and family passed through the city last week on their way to Niagara Falls.

John Furrow, of Guthrie, Okla., left August 7 in company with Phil Foley, of the Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co. They will stop off in St. Joseph, Mo.

Louis G. Venzke, of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, Minn., was a visitor on the market last week. He made most of the trip by water.

NEPHROLEPIS JOHN WANAMAKER

"The Wanamaker Boston Fern"

A "sport" from Nephrolepis Scholzei, with longer, narrower, gracefully drooping fronds. It is not so compact in growth as Scholzei, and therefore does not decay in the center, and is a durable house fern. It is a rapid grower, making an abundance of fronds, and is quite distinct from any other Nephrolepis.

8-in. pots.....$12 and $15 per doz.

11-in. tubs.....$2.50 and $3 each

NEPH. TEDDY, JR., SPORT

We think very well of this fern, it having all the good qualities of its parent, Teddy, Jr. The fronds are of darker green and more undulated.

4 -in. pots.....$25 per 100; $200 per 1000

NEPH. BOSTONIENSIS DWARF

This is a dwarf form of the old Boston Fern, same character form and graceful habit.

2½-in. pots.....$8 per 100; $75 per 1000

NEPHROLEPIS ELEGANTISSIMA IMPROVED

This variety is a greatly improved Elegantissima and shows no tendency to revert to the Boston. This will prove a valuable addition to the crested varieties.

2½-in. pots.....$6 per 100; $50 per 1000

6 -in. pots.....$6 and $9 per doz.

8 -in. pots.....$12 and $15 per doz.

Larger plants.....$2, $2.50, $3 and $3.50 each

NEPHROLEPIS TODEAOIDES

London Fern. A good, strong grower.

2½-in. pots.....$5 per 100; $45 per 1000

8 -in. pots.....$12 per doz.

9-in. and 10-in. tubs.....$24, $30 and $36 per doz.

NEPHROLEPIS SMITHII

The greatly improved Amerpohlii. It is a compact form, much finer than Amerpohlii, and does not break down in the center. The fronds are carried on wiry stems. This variety will have a wonderful sale up to a 6-inch pot, being particularly showy for basket work.

2½-in. pots.....$8 per 100; $75 per 1000

4 -in. pots.....$25 per 100

NEPHROLEPIS ROBUSTA

Place orders at once for Nephrolepis Robusta. The Silver Medal Fern at the National Flower Show, winning over all competition. We claim this variety to be the finest of all crested Nephrolepis, being exceptionally fine in large sizes. It is the strongest grower of all the Nephrolepis Ferns, never reverts, and every plant is symmetrical and salable in all sizes.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

FOR PUMPING THE EXHAUST.

We are rebuilding some houses and will use a 28-horsepower steam boiler of locomotive type. We will sink it two feet below the level of the ground, thus leaving the top of the boiler three and one-half feet above the ground level, with the top of the dome two feet higher. We have a steam pump with a 1½-inch inlet and a 1-inch outlet; it can be operated with twelve pounds of steam. We also have a rotary pump with a 1½-inch inlet and a 1-inch outlet; it can be run with an electric motor. Could we pump the exhaust out of the return tank and back into the boiler with one or both of these, or will it be necessary to buy a return trap? If we can use either of these, it will save the cost of installing a new outfit.
J. M. P.—O.

Either of the pumps mentioned may be used for pumping the return water into the boiler, but of the two we would prefer to use the rotary pump operated by means of an electric motor, as it will then be possible to use low-pressure steam for heating purposes, while if the steam pump is used it will be necessary to maintain at all times sufficient pressure to operate the pump.

CRUDE OIL AS FUEL.

I am thinking of using oil as fuel to heat a range of 8,000 feet of glass. I have a steam boiler. What would it cost to install an oil burner and other necessary apparatus and where can I get them?
J. W. T.—Mont.

To get the best results from crude oil in the heating of greenhouses, a steam jet is desirable for vaporizing the oil, and it is advisable to provide, for furnishing this steam pressure, a boiler which is not connected with the oil-heated system. In order to utilize such a boiler to advantage in connection with a greenhouse range, the area to be heated should be considerably larger than the one described. In fact,

READ WHAT THE USERS SAY:

FIRST LETTER.

Walton, N. Y., Jan. 4, 1916.

Gentlemen: Your New No. 46 Water Tube Steam Boiler is the finest steam boiler we have ever fired, and have fired eleven different makes before. Your boiler keeps steam from 9 p. m. to 6 a. m., without attention on zero nights. Before we had three boilers and could not control temperatures so easily as we can with yours. The little time consumed in cleaning same is wonderful, and we are very well pleased. The water line is steady, and it holds its steam well. If we ever install another boiler, you can rest assured it will be a Kroeschell. If I can be of any assistance to you in showing your boiler to anyone, would be pleased to do so, or, if anyone in your locality wants local reference, I will gladly give same.

SECOND LETTER.

Walton, N. Y., Jan. 10, 1916.

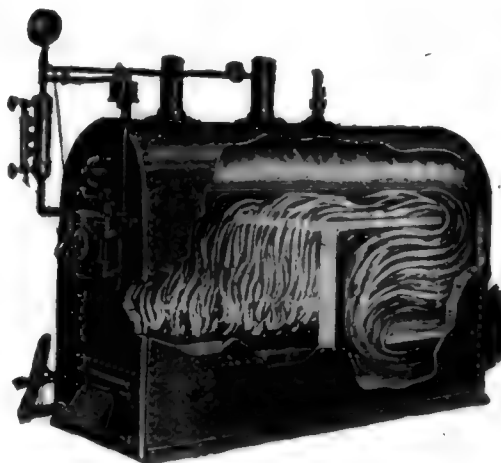

Gentlemen: Since writing you on Jan. 4, the other morning it went down to 4° below zero, and I fired the No. 46 boiler at 11 p. m.; had 10 lbs. of steam on with the draft half open, the houses all registering 48° to 52°, and the No. 4 house 60°. We bricked in our boiler, so we lose no heat in the boiler room; we find it a great saving; any other information cheerfully given.
Yours respectfully,
[Signed]

The Kroeschell

is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell the highest praise.

13,468,320 sq. ft. of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years.

The Kroeschell

is used by hundreds of Florists' Review readers and mighty is their praise. The year of 1915 brought an enormous number of new customers who saw our boilers in operation at other places. We attribute the large sales of this season to the good work the Kroeschell Boiler is doing everywhere.

With the exception of our mammoth 36-inch Burnham, two men with a hammer, a wrench and a screw driver, can set up a Burnham.

Two Burnham Tie Up Facts Worth Tying To

EACH pair of Burnham sections have their own separate tie-up bolts. Long, long ago, we discarded the long tie bolts. Discarded them because of the bothersome blocking and bracing, and tugging and tusseling, to set up a boiler.

Discarded them because of the constant danger of cracking sections in the last wrenching-up to draw the sections tight.

Discarded them because when sections were added to enlarge the boiler, the long bolts must either be spliced out by a blacksmith or entirely new, longer bolts bought.

Discarded them because in case of replacing a section it was next to impossible not to loosen up all the sections.

Burnham short tie bolted boilers are easy to set up; easy to repair; easy to add to; and above all, easy on coal.

We can ship promptly, but the railroads are slow on deliveries. So order ahead of time, if you want your Burnham on time.

it is doubtful whether it would pay to install an oil-heated system in a range containing less than 50,000 square feet of glass, and then the relative cost of oil and coal would need to be considered carefully before deciding upon a change.

In addition to the oil burner and the steam boiler for vaporizing the oil, it will be necessary to furnish a storage tank, and, unless the greenhouses are located near a railway siding, a tank wagon for hauling the oil will also be needed. I do not know of any concerns that make a specialty of gas burners, but it is probable that these can be furnished by several of the firms that advertise greenhouse boilers and heating supplies in The Review.

HOT WATER OR STEAM?

Will you kindly advise me as to the best plan for my heating system? I am now using two sectional hot water boilers, each in a separate cellar. One of them, an 8-section boiler, heats two houses, each 32x120. The other, a 5-section boiler of the same make, heats one house 32x100 and one house 20x100. I am going to build two more houses, each 20x100, and I have got the cellar finished; it is 20x30 and ten feet deep. I intend to install one boiler large enough to heat the six or seven houses. Would you advise me to put in a hot water boiler and hold the present ones in reserve? I can retain them as reserves if I heat with hot water, but I cannot do so if I use steam, as the boilers are at different heights and each in a different cellar.

I intend to put in a steel boiler of about fifty horsepower for steam, or about the same type for hot water. The present houses are piped too heavily for steam, but I need not make any alteration except to take some of the piping out. Would I gain anything by using steam in heating? How about the coal bill? Will a boiler of the size mentioned be large enough to give me plenty of heat in zero weather?

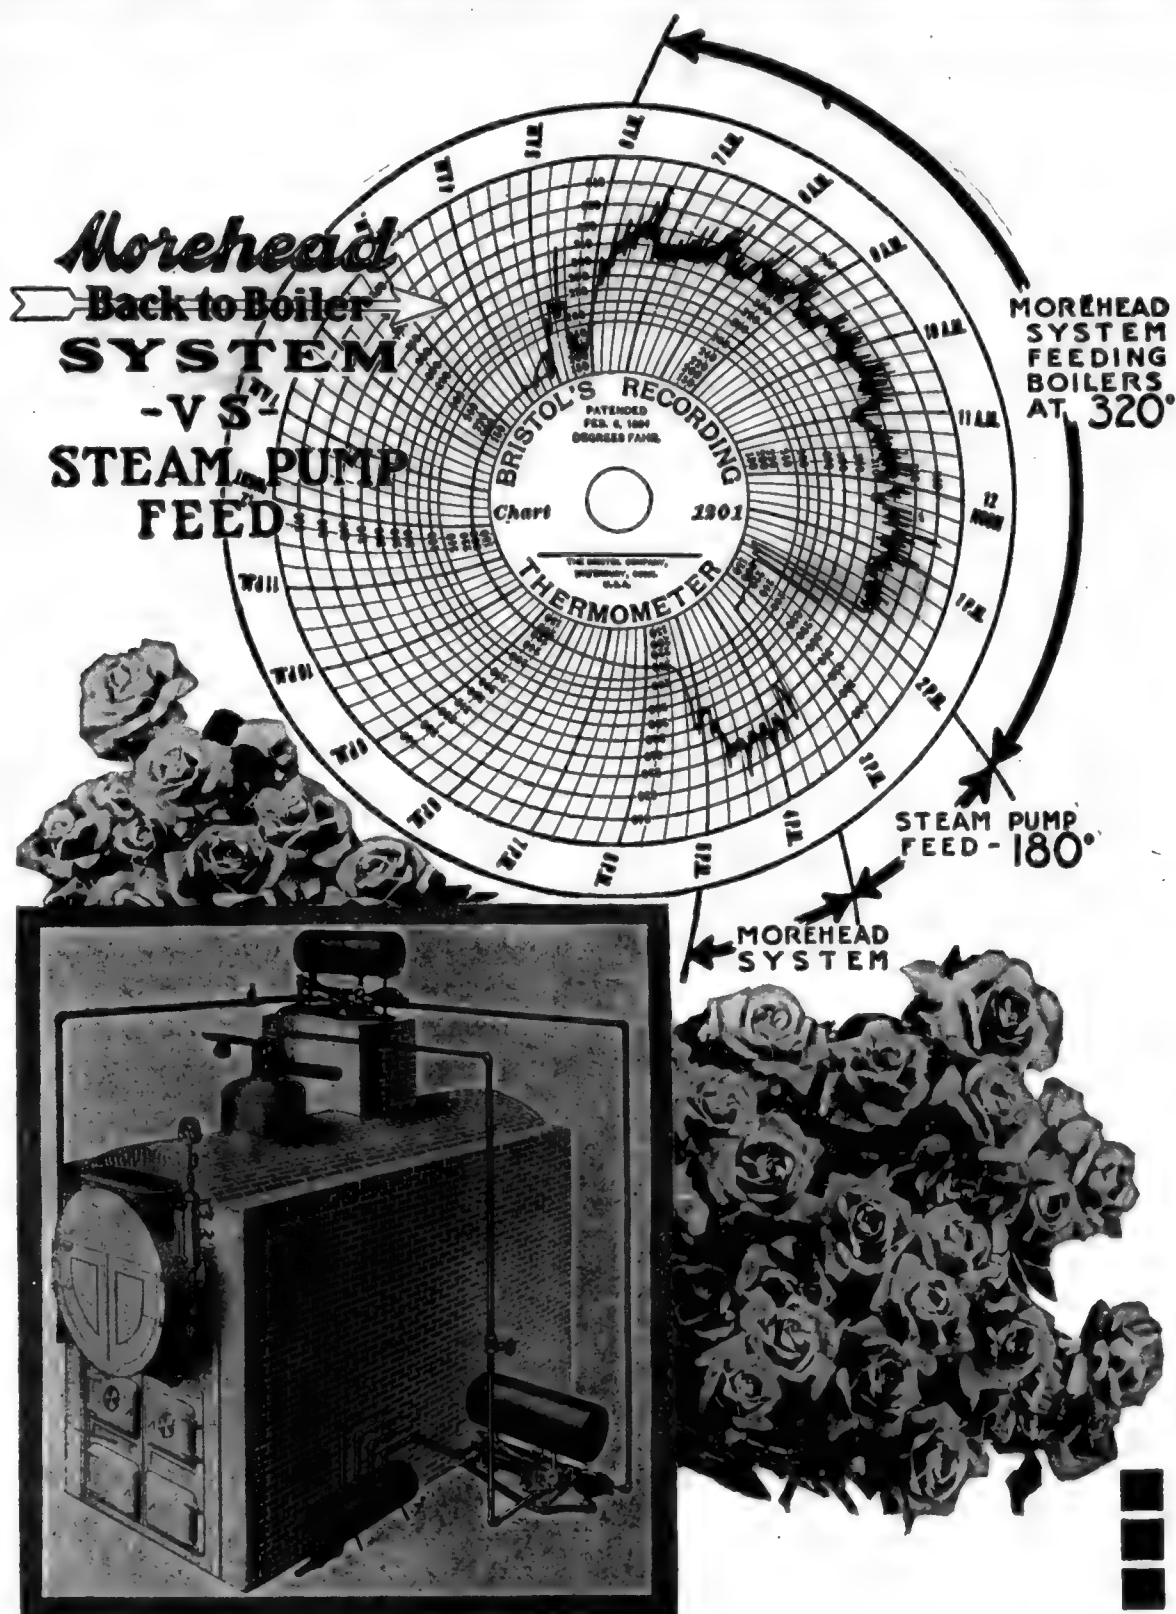

J. G. K.—Md.

If the present boilers are in good condition, it will certainly be a good idea to keep them in reserve as suggested, if you decide to use hot water for heating the new houses. You would probably need two boilers, each rated for about 3,000 square feet of radiation, for the range complete, if heated with hot water. On the other hand, a 50-horsepower steam boiler would be large enough to heat the six houses described, provided the average temperature desired is not greater than 60 degrees at night. You would need practically one-half as much radiation for steam as for hot water, which would make the cost of installing the system considerably less for steam than for hot water. The fuel required, however, is generally considerably less when hot water is used. In either case, if a cheap grade of fuel is to be used, a night fireman will be needed.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The intensely warm weather was checked a few hours during the last two days of the week by rain, a thing badly needed throughout the city and country, as everything in gardens and fields was beginning to burn. The heat of condensation returns from a steam pump system was taken under exactly the same conditions for both pump and Morehead System.

Between 2 and 2:30 p. m. the steam pump was cut into the line in place of the Morehead System.

Oh No!

- we don't want you to think that the above temperature chart represents greenhouse conditions
- because this chart was taken on a high pressure line
- but it brings out graphically the great advantages of the

over a steam pump for steam line drainage and boiler feeding.

Substituted for pumps, the Morehead System will keep all steam pipes clear of condensation and return it to the boiler as pure, hot feed water quicker and on 90% less steam than a steam pump will do it.

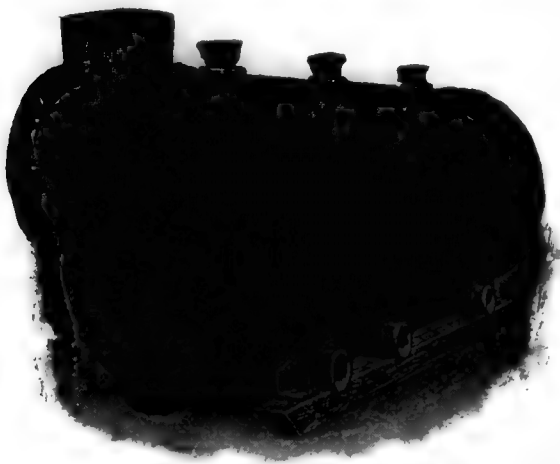

The installation expense is small—the results great. It matters not whether your institution is large or small, the Morehead System will save sufficient to pay for itself in a few months' time. Letters in our files prove this. Let us tell you about it.

Asters are in evidence, but are not arriving in large numbers. They are improving in quality. Sweet peas still are on the market, but good carnations are scarce. Some good roses are obtainable, My Maryland roses especially being plentiful and of fine quality. There is a splendid lot of rubrum and auratum lilies, which, meeting a good demand, sell well. The supply of Easter lilies was not sufficient to meet the big demand. Although the hot weather has played havoc with many of the garden flowers, daisies, coreopsis, bachelor's

The cold season would probably have 150 mornings.

THEN you would have 150 nice TWO DOLLAR BILLS, $300.00.

DO YOU WANT IT? Listen!

Manufacturers of other Greenhouse Boilers admit that $3.50 per day per ten thousand feet of glass heated to 60 degrees in zero weather is a reasonable fuel cost.

WHAT IS YOUR FUEL COST?

WE SAY it ought to be $1.75 per day and can prove that fuel for our boilers costs but this amount.

IF YOU use another boiler and have 11,500 square feet of glass, your cost per day is probably $4.00. Change to our boiler and your cost per day will probably be $2.00, so 150 days will give you the $300.00. Again we say:

buttons and gaillardias were much in evidence last week.

During the dull times most of the florists are preparing for the fall trade. At the greenhouses old stock is being thrown out and new benches being put in. Chrysanthemums, poinsettias, ferns and cyclamens look splendid and a good fall trade seems assured.

Various Notes.

C. W. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was here last week and booked many orders for fall goods.

L. L. May, while still quite ill, is gradually improving.

Business with Oscar E. Amundson is excellent. Gladioli arranged in artistic receptacles made a most pleasing window display.

The Chicago Avenue Floral Co. has a fine lot of cyclamens of splendid size.

The Chicago Avenue Greenhouses has been busy with funeral work. This concern has a splendid trade.

The Eldridge Floral Co. carries a fine stock of asters, lilies and roses. The company reports this its first quiet week of summer trade.

Thomas H. Hall is cutting fine roses. Business is good here. The greenhouses are splendidly located and the stock always is of the best. Great care is exercised by Mr. Hall in all he does, which accounts for the splendid trade.

William F. Holmes had several large funeral orders to fill last week, including many handsome and original make-ups. Mr. Holmes always carries a fine quality of stock.

The Lakewood Cemetery Association is cutting fine rubrum lilies. It expects to cut some splendid gladioli within a few days. A splendid lot of Easter lilies are coming into bloom.

Miss H. B. Whitted reports business good at her two stores. The force turned out some excellent work for the John W. Thomas funeral.

George Mitchell, the Lake street florist, has returned from a splendid vacation.

The nomination of officers at the August meeting of the Cleveland Florists' Club was as follows: For president, S. N. Pentecost; first vice-president, Timothy Smith; second vice-president, H. P. The September Show.

A splendid example of cooperation among florists will be seen at the industrial exposition and fair to be held in Cleveland September 2 to 9. One of the big sections of this show will be a flower display, and the particular feature of that display will be a community exhibit by the Cleveland Florists' Club. A fund for community advertising has been raised by the florists and something novel and impressive in the way of a demonstration of flowers may be looked for.

Timothy Smith, chairman of the flower show committee, has appointed F. C. W. Brown, of the J. M. Gasser Co.; Charles Russell, of the Jones-Russell Co.; Frank Pitzenthaler, of Knoble Bros., to plan and execute this most interesting display. The committee plans to distribute a neat folder calling the attention of the public to the club's progress in Cleveland.

Among those who already have taken space in the flower show tent are B. Hammond Tracy, gladiolus specialist Wenham, Mass.; the Stumpp & Walter Co., bulbs and seeds, New York; the John Scheepers Co., New York; the Cleveland Bird-Lovers' Association; Eagle Wire Works, Liquid Fertilizer Co., and the Garden Soil Co., Cleveland; the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O. The Market.

Business has kept up well, considering the intense heat of the last five weeks, or, to be more explicit, since July 11. We had one shower, but that was not of much account. All stock on the market has suffered so severely from the heat that in many instances it is useless. The roses available are small and open too quickly.

The ice situation has become quite serious, the supply being so limited that hospitals are taken care of first. This means that at times the florists' iceboxes are empty of ice, and, naturally, of stock also.

Various Notes.

The McHugh Floral Co., which has been located at 118 Michigan avenue for the last sixteen years, recently sold the remaining nine months of its lease at the old place and opened a modern store at 105 Grand River avenue.

Fred Breitmeyer, of Mount Clemens, is the proud possessor of a pink sport of Ophelia. Of course, Ophelia is a pink rose, but this sport is a beautiful pink, of about the shade of the Winsor carnation, or a little deeper. Mr. Breitmeyer had a number of blooms of this sport at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange August 5. The flowers were all of uniform color, with fine foliage, and apparently identical with Ophelia, except in color.

Robert Rahaley and family left their summer home in Canada, August 5, for an extended tour through Canada and the east.

Charles H. Plumb has completed the reerection of his garage, making it large enough to accommodate four cars. The old range of houses has been carefully gone over, new gutters installed and repairs made where required. Mr. Plumb is building a pretty bungalow at Lake St. Clair, about forty miles from Detroit. H. S.

St. Peter, Minn.—The greenhouses operated by Emil Samuelson during the last two years have been sold to A. J. Loegering, of New Ulm, who will take possession September 1. The deal includes twenty-eight acres of land, on which Mr. Loegering expects to grow nursery stock.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Miss Hazel Kent, who spent a number of years in the landscape department of Holm & Olson, St. Paul, and more recently associated with the Gurney Seed & Nursery Co., has joined the forces of the M. M. Strong Floral Co. and will have charge of landscape work.

A range of full iron frame curved eave Jacobs' greenhouses of an elaborate and decorative design are now under construction on the estate of J. Insley Blair, at Tuxedo Park, New York.

The specifications by Carrere & Hastings, the architects, called for the very best and most modern equipment. The plant, which is so designed that almost any flower or plant can be grown, will be heated throughout by hot water and steam with vapor system. It will have both hot and cold water irrigation; also a liquid fertilizer system.

Jacobs' construction, material, workmanship, responsibility and price, were the main factors in our securing the contract.

The Market.

The florists' business in Newark is exceptionally quiet. It is only occasionally there is a wedding or social event that requires flowers or plants, and funeral work is less in volume than earlier in the summer.

Gladioli are arriving in large quantities and each week sees a greater variety of them. The quality of the flowers is good and the price reasonable. Asters come next in volume; the blooms are larger and better and the variety greater. The iceboxes carry limited supplies of roses, valley, lilies and a few other flowers needed for fine work. Notwithstanding the extreme dullness, business is good for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

George Penek had a cool-looking window last week. In front was a tank of water, with suitable greens, and goldfishes, live frogs and small turtles. Banked in the rear of the window was a mass of gladioli.

Business is reported just about normal for the summer at the flower department of the Hahne store, on Broad street.

William Death, proprietor of the Colonial Flower Shop, at Springfield Summit, has sold his shop to a new company, the sale taking effect August 1. During the month of August the shop will be closed. It will reopen September 1 under the name of Rose Shop. Mr. Death will remain at Summit for the present. Howard Silcock will be the manager of the new store.

Robert Roper, 70 years old, a florist on Brooklake road, Chatham, recently was found unconscious under a hedge on Main street, suffering from a fractured skull and other injuries inflicted by assailants, who escaped.

R. B. M.

Rock Island, Ill.—The L. Stapp Co., capital $20,000, was incorporated at Springfield July 31, to take over and perpetuate the old established business of Ludwig Stapp. It is a family corporation, the incorporators being L. Stapp, Minnie Stapp and E. H. Stapp.

Evanston, Wyo.—“Figures show,” says Louis B. Westholder, who operates a store at Evanston and another at Rock Springs, “that my spring's business was thirty per cent larger than last year's.” Mr. Westholder handles goldfishes and canaries as a side line and soon expects to erect greenhouses for vegetable forcing. Asters and sweet peas this year are the only outdoor flowers grown at the Westholder place.

How Far Does Your Money Go?

- ❧ Some men spend their hard earned cash and have nothing to show for it. Others spend it and have a lot to show, but nothing that amounts to much. Then there are the kind that spend it and have something worth while to show for it.
- ❧ What do you want when you spend, the most for your money or the best your money can buy? The answer is simple enough. You want the best. Quality, not quantity, is true economy.
- ❧ Now, that is just where we come in. We buy quality and that is what we sell—absolute quality. No French Pastry to look nice and cover up the defects, but just plain, oldfashioned quality.

The Market.

During the last three weeks Nashville has had typical summer weather, with an abundance of rain. In fact, many of the outdoor crops would have been better off with less rain.

There is a general shortage of stock at present, gladioli even being on the short side. Roses are poor and few. Business has been spotted—some days there was almost nothing and other days there were heavy runs. Last week a large funeral produced a good batch of business.

The "city beautiful" work this year has helped business greatly and the trade in any town will find that a movement of this kind means greater sales of seeds and plants. The demand for cut flowers in this city undoubtedly is heavier since this movement began.

Various Notes.

Floyd Bralliar has a sport from Canna Queen Helen, a real novelty, if it holds. It will be remembered that Queen Helen is a green-leaved, yellow-blooming sport from King Humbert. This sport has a part of every leaf deep bronze, and the other part green. The bloom head is partly yellow and partly the old King Humbert. The sport occurred in two separate plants.

T. C. Joy and Harold Joy will attend the S. A. F. convention at Houston next week.

Haury & Sons have been having a heavy cut of roses during the last two or three weeks. They have been able to help some of their brother florists greatly.

Both Oscar and Leo Geny are at their summer homes at present. Mr. Haney is looking after the business during their absence.

Miss Lillian Joy is visiting friends at Flushing, N. Y. Miss Bessie Harrison, one of the girls of the Joy store, joined her there last week.

The McIntyre Floral Co. reports that business is holding up better this summer than last summer. The men are cutting the best asters I have seen thus far this season.

Leslie Littel is importing a nice lot of peonies this season. They are to be planted at his place near the national cemetery. F. B.

Oswego, N. Y.—C. S. Sheldon has built up a nice local retail business in bulbs of his own growing at Shady Shore Gardens, as he calls his place. He has made no attempt at wholesale trade, except on a few of the thirty-three varieties of narcissi that are grown.

...NEWS NOTES...

New Berlin, O.—Although in a rural community, G. L. Nidy, proprietor of the Highland Park Gardens, reports that the demand for flowers and plants last spring was astonishing, the total business done greatly exceeding his expectations. Mr. Nidy is contemplating the opening of a store this fall.

Winnetka, Ill.—The New Trier Horticultural Society will hold its third annual summer show in the community house here August 10. The organization is one of the local private gardeners, with their employers as associate members, and the show will have as judges other gardeners from the north shore suburbs of Chicago.

Collingswood, N. J.—George P. Buck is an extremely active member of the trade. In addition to his interest in the firm of George P. Buck & Son, Camden, he is selling agent for the American-grown bulbs of the Hoxsie Nurseries, Hoxsie, R. I., and for the Holland house of P. De Jager & Sons, Heiloo. While Buck & Son grow nursery stock, seeds and plants of various kinds, they make a specialty of aster seeds, plants and flowers. Mr. Buck spends a great deal of time on the road in the eastern states.

Helena, Mont.—Seldom in these days does a man use virgin gold to pay for his purchases, yet this was the case with a prospector near Helena, who recently sent an order to the State Nursery & Seed Co. The order was for plants and seeds amounting to $48. The man explained that "gold will follow," and the following day a small tin box came by registered mail, containing a gold nugget about the size of a small flower bulb. The precious metal was taken to an assayer, who found it to be worth slightly more than $65. The company filled the order and sent the man his change. "I intend to keep the nugget," said T. E. Mills, president of the company. "It is rarely that we experience such a novel, not to say primitive, mode of business exchange." The "dust" days have passed.

Pottsville, Pa.—Even as the dry goods stores have their annual sales, so W. Guy Payne has his annual clean-up sale of plants. Mr. Payne reserves a single-column space in the daily papers and has his "copy" set up in the same kind of type as that of other news matter, starting out something like this: "June 28, 29 and 30 will be the dates of my clean-up sale. This ad will appear this one issue, so please keep it where you can find it easily and make your selection early. Stock is fine and variety great; all plants out of pots; thirteen to the dozen of one variety. Terms cash. No orders under 25 cents delivered. These prices end at 5:30 Friday eve, as July 1 we commence our summer repairing and planting for the next season. Quantities and prices follow." The result is a quick clearance of surplus stock, at least sales expense. Mr. Payne evidently does not need a waste pile at his range.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

THE S. A. F. VISITS THE SOUTHLAND

Once more the Society of American Florists this week is browsing in pastures green, visiting virgin fields—it is holding its first convention in the "sunny" south, partaking of the proverbial "open-handed" southern hospitality. The attendance is not large, but it is enthusiastic.

HERE is one point of similarity in the 1915 and 1916 conventions of the Society of American Florists: Last year the same as this year the meeting was on new ground; but, whereas last year's convention was largely a pleasure excursion, this year's expedition is one for business pure and simple. Not that the Houston gathering is devoid of its pleasant features, for no man can go south without encountering the chivalrous hospitality for which that section is famous, but this is a gathering of men intent on the accomplishment of a purpose, the pushing along of the development of the society that has enlisted so many loyal workers or the prosecution of private business. Those who have come "just for the ride" are unusually few.

The Attendance.

It is clearly recognized that of recent years the attendance at S. A. F. conventions has been becoming more and more local; no longer do large numbers of buyers go long journeys to attend trade gatherings in August, which is one of the principal reasons for taking the society to the distant parts of the country. If the mountain won't come to Mahomet, then Mahomet must go to the mountain. But the whole great state of Texas at the date of the last S. A. F. report had only eighteen members in that body—which is another reason why it were well the convention be held there, for Texas is the greatest state in the Union, with a trade interest already much larger than the membership of eighteen would indicate, with a purchasing power developing at a rate perhaps unequalled anywhere else in America.

Considering the comparatively few florists in Texas, the great distances even Texas florists had to travel to Houston, and the unfavorable date for a convention in the far southwest, the attendance is gratifying. But best of all is the fact that those present came for business. Advertisers have learned that a trade paper that does not confine its circulation strictly within the trade is of little value, and those who manage the society's affairs have found that an attendance of sight-seers leaves the meeting-room with bare benches and the trades' exhibitors without buyers. The Houston convention was planned with the fewest possible number of distractions.

A Success.

The convention must be called an unqualified success. Vice-president Kerr, in advance of the meeting, had nearly doubled the number of members for his state; there was a further large accession on the opening day; the society has been brought into touch with the interests and viewpoint of the southern members, and it is safe to assume that it will again visit the southern part of the country at no distant day.

The San Francisco meeting last year proved that the society loses nothing in membership by going outside the trade centers of the north and east—the only loss was in revenue from the trades' display. The display at Houston is larger than at

Robert C. Kerr.

(President-elect Society of American Florists.)

San Francisco, but not by any means so large as in preceding years. This was inevitable. Most of those who make large displays, year after year, are located in the east. Their best displays always are made near home, or in a city where the trade interests are large enough so that the exhibits can be sold to local buyers, thereby saving the exhibitors the labor and expense of repacking their stock for shipment. Under the circumstances, that nineteen exhibitors, representative of both coasts and the central cities, should have sent displays must be called a good showing.

The convention garden, although it continues a success, is proving something of a task. It was wonderfully done at Minneapolis, but never since has repaid the great effort put upon it, partly perhaps because a location adjoining the convention hall has not since been available. At Houston there are thirteen trade exhibitors in the garden, all but two of them from outside the state. It is a good showing, distance considered.

The Opening Ceremonies.

The opening ceremonies were more than usually interesting. It was something of an innovation to begin with prayer; Vice-president Kerr introduced Rev. W. S. Jacobs to deliver the invocation immediately after the call to order.

The mayor of Houston, Hon. Ben Campbell, was present in person to extend the greetings of the city and did it as one who has had much practice. He spoke of the strides Houston has made in the last four years, and pointed out that its progress on the aesthetic floricultural side is keeping pace with its progress in utilitarian directions. A. J. Rossi, of San Francisco, was on the program to respond to the mayor, but was detained, so that Wm. F. Gude, who never is at a loss for well rounded phrases, was called on for this pleasant duty. He assured the city that with all its grand showing, the beauty of Houston is only in its infancy.

When Mr. Kerr surrendered the gavel to President MacRorie it was some minutes before the applause subsided and that gentleman was permitted to proceed with the annual address, which appears in full in this issue of The Review. At its conclusion a committee consisting of Frank Stuppy, George W. Hess, J. A. Peterson and E. G. Hill was appointed to consider and report on its recommendations.

Getting down to routine work, the reading of the minutes of the executive board was passed, as they already have been printed. The reports of Secretary Young and Treasurer Hess and the auditors were received and ordered printed. W. F. Gude presented the report of the Washington representative, of the tariff and legislation committee and of the Smith memorial committee, all of which were accepted without discussion. The reports of the state vice-presidents were ordered printed without reading.

Amending the By-laws.

For the committee on amendments to the by-laws, Theodore Wirth presented the recommendations for changes already approved by the board of directors, printed in The Review for April 27 and included in the program sent to members. All these were adopted by a unanimous vote, without change and practically without discussion.

In brief, the first change provides for the selection of the meeting place two years in advance, for the benefit of the convention garden. The second change is to have the directors elected instead of appointed by the president. The next change merely provides a procedure for appointing "affiliation" directors without changing the system. The next change makes the Washington representative a member of the board of directors. The method of balloting at elections is prescribed, dividing the membership list into four parts, so that four sets of tellers can receive ballots at one time and thereby shorten the time members must stand in line. The next amendment provides for standing committees on convention garden, on publicity and on American horticultural products.

R. C. Kerr had given notice that he would move an amendment authorizing the board of directors to change the date of the convention when the meeting is to be held in parts of the country in which August is not the most suitable time. This also was adopted.

Next Meeting Places.

John Young extended the invitation of the New York Florists' Club to hold the 1917 meeting in New York city.

There was no invitation for 1918, which year also was to be provided for under the newly amended by-laws, and R. C. Kerr recommended St. Louis.

As there was no opposition, these selections subsequently were confirmed by formal ballot.

President's Reception.

The annual reception to the president was held in the ballroom of the Rice hotel during the evening of August 15, where the balloting on convention cities also took place. President MacRorie, Vice-president Kerr, the officers and directors shook hands with all the members and the families of the Houston florists. There was music and dancing. Refreshments were served. It was strictly informal.

Wednesday's Session.

The early hours of the second day we left open for the meetings of the allied societies and only a short session held for the consideration of the report of the committee on president's address and to receive the report of the committee on National Flower Show. The president's recommendations were concurred in and the show committee came in for warm congratulations on the great success of the Philadelphia show. The financial statement appears in full in this issue.

The session closed with the nomination of officers, as follows:

Officers Elected.

W. F. Gude, of Washington, nominated Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, for president, and there were many seconds. Other nominations were:

Secretary—John Young, New York.

Treasurer—J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.

Directors—Frank Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.; Geo. W. Hess, Washington, D. C.

The election took place at the session next morning, but there was no contest except for director, two directors to be elected.

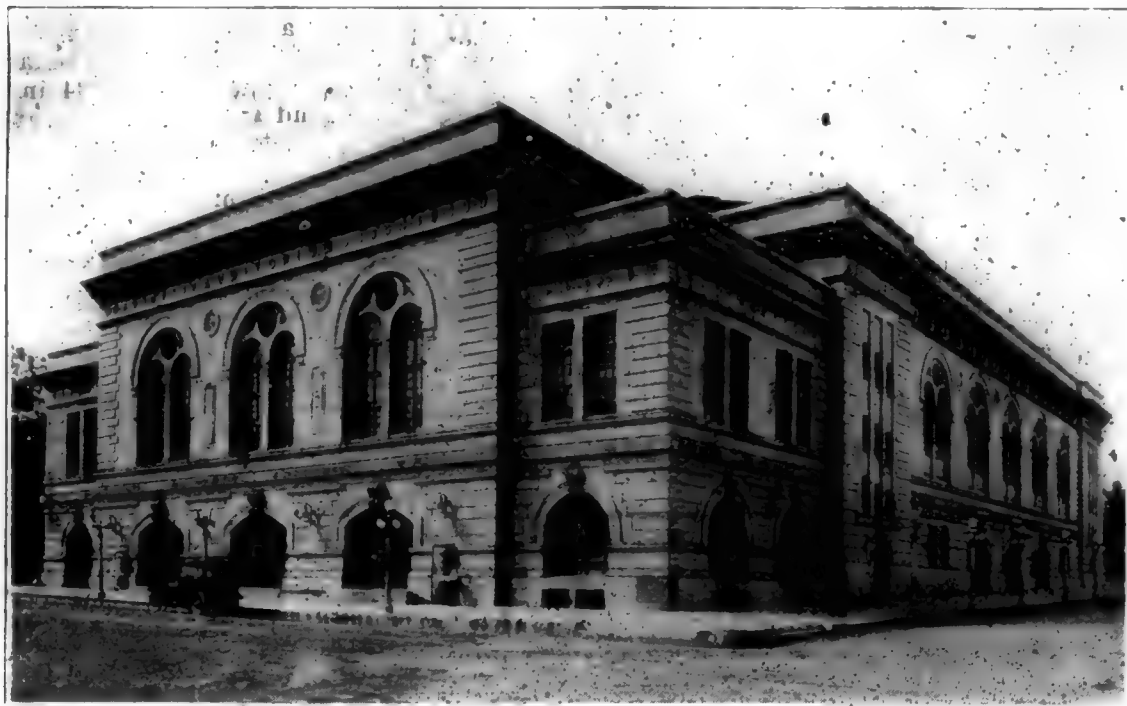

Miscellaneous.

Many members eulogized the late William F. Kasting, than whom no man has worked harder or more intelligently for the society, and a committee was appointed to draft resolutions setting forth the high regard in which he was held. At a subsequent session these were presented and adopted.

Wednesday afternoon was devoted to an automobile ride through the city, to judging the trades' display and to the convention garden. In the evening the garden was formally dedicated, with appropriate ceremonies, after which there was a band concert in Sam Houston park and a special movie show for S. A. F. members at the Queen theater.

Thursday morning the visiting ladies were entertained at a natatorium, followed by luncheon at the Rice roof garden. At noon the S. A. F. members were guests of the Rotary Club at luncheon, also at the hotel roof garden. In the afternoon a trip was made to the San Jacinto battle grounds, by trolley and steamer on the ship canal. There was a barbecue on the battle grounds, and a variety of contests for members.

The convention will close Friday with a trip by trolley to Galveston for a dip in the surf and dinner at the Hotel Galvez.

Convention Notes.

B. F. Barr, Lancaster, Pa., sent word he could not be at the convention, but sent a cartoon of himself, which was displayed by Howard S. Royer, in the H. Bayersdorfer & Co. booth.

The one subject to which every Texan reverts and which was the chief topic of the state organization's convention is the development of home sources of supply—but they were glad to see the outsiders who carried order books—more order books than note books.

There were four conventions in Houston last week and speeding the parting guests somewhat interfered with welcoming the early arrivals—the convention hall had not been emptied when the first men with trades' displays appeared.

It seems to have become established that a president can travel without a bodyguard.

Mrs. John Vallance, president of the Ladies' S. A. F., sent a message of greeting, regretting her inability to be present because of illness. Mrs. W. W. Coles, vice-president, occupied the chair at the brief session of the auxiliary held August 16.

CREDITS AND COLLECTIONS.

In his address to the S. A. F. at the San Francisco convention last year, President Welch spoke of the need for more exact credit information in the trade and of the desirability of a means of making collections at a distance. He recommended that a committee of nine be appointed to consider the whole subject and report in 1916. The committee on president's address and the society concurred. After considerable correspondence President Welch subsequently appointed as the committee:

F. H. Traendly, chairman, New York.
W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
S. S. Pennock, Philadelphia.
N. A. Benson, Denver, Colo.
Fred A. Danker, Albany, N. Y.
Hans Plath, San Francisco, Cal.
George W. Smith, Cleveland, O.
Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass.
F. L. Atkins, Rutherford, N. J.

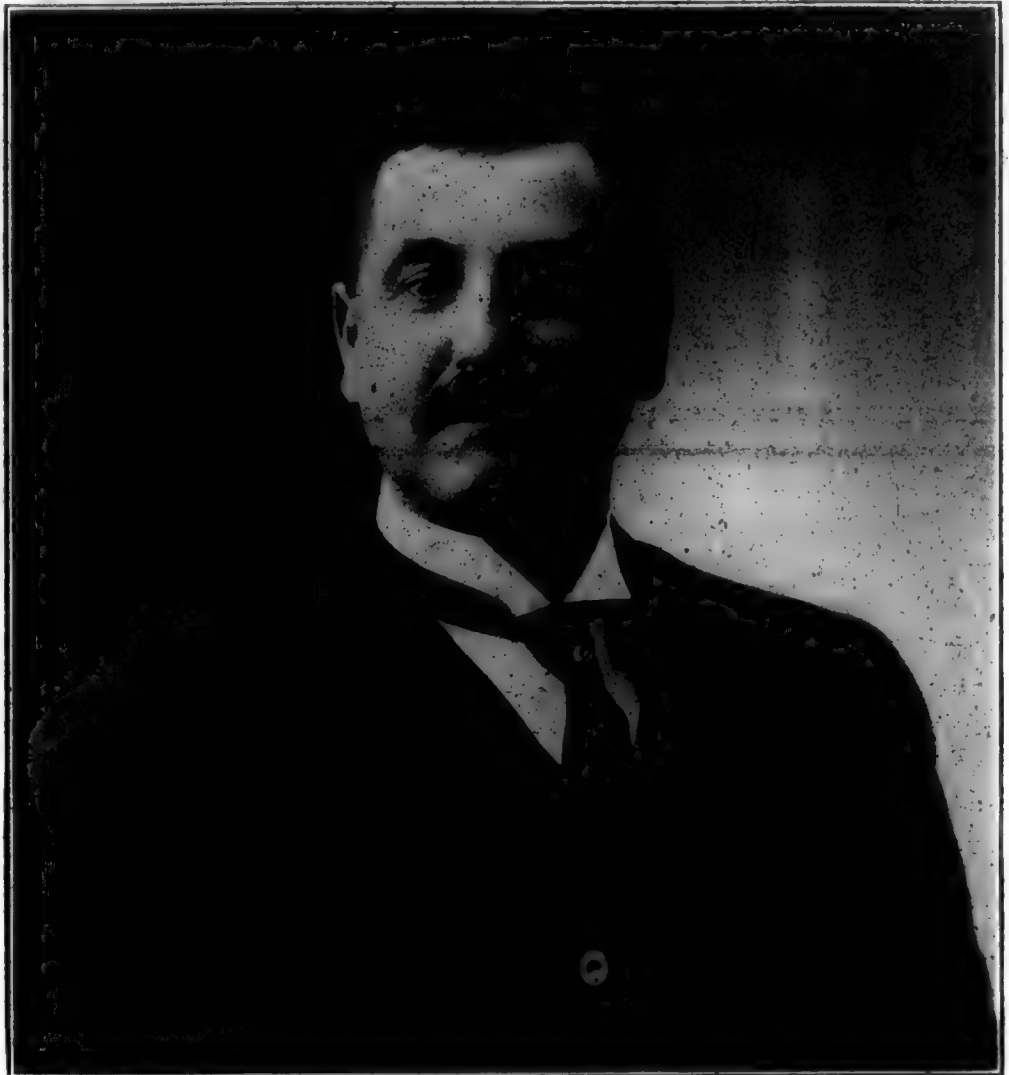

Neither Chairman Traendly nor any member of the committee was present at Houston, but Mr. Traendly sent a letter stating that it had not been possible to get enough of the members of the committee together at a meeting to do anything, so that the committee had no report to make.

FLORISTS' HAIL ASSOCIATION.

At the annual meeting of the Florists' Hail Association, held at Houston, Tex., August 16, Secretary John G. Esler said that the organization has 1,658 members, insures 43,101,590 square feet of greenhouse glass and has, in the year ended August 1, 1916, paid $55,372.74; that since it was formed the association has paid 2,385 losses, involving an expenditure of over $320,000.

At the meeting of members J. J. Hess, of Omaha, and Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, Ind., were elected directors. An amendment to Article 5, Section 7, of the by-laws was adopted. No meeting of the directors was held for the election of officers and the present incumbents hold over until a meeting for election is held.

The report of Treasurer Joseph Heacock showed:

MEMORIAL TO WM. R. SMITH.

William F. Gude presented the following report for the committee having in charge the William R. Smith memorial, of which he is chairman:

Your committee has been rather inactive the last year, on account of matters pending before the national government on measures now under consideration, which might materially affect the form that the memorial to the late William R. Smith should take. Your committee therefore has deemed it best to go slowly with the matter and asks to be continued.

The committee has on deposit with the Munsey Trust Co., Washington, D. C., to the credit of the Wm. R. Smith memorial fund, $1,778.44. Pledges, outstanding, aggregate $625.

The F. T. D.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery had a largely attended meeting at Houston August 16. The report of Treasurer W. L. Rock showed receipts for the year of $3,207.28, with disbursements of $2,004.54, leaving a gain for the year of $1,202.74. Added to last year's balance the organization now has $879.84 in its general fund and $5,158.09 in its guaranty fund, or total cash resources of $6,037.93.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C.

Vice-President—George Asmus, Chicago.

Treasurer—W. L. Rock, Kansas City.

Secretary—Albert Pochelon, Detroit.

The association adjourned to meet in Chicago, October 11, 1916.

Omaha, Neb.—Louis Henderson has consolidated his two stores into one store on Farnam street.

THE CONVENTION GARDEN

CONSIDERING the distance from the recognized trade centers and the lack of local exhibitors, the Houston Convention Garden makes an excellent showing. There are thirteen trade exhibitors from outside, in addition to which the Houston park department has filled a number of beds for the purpose of adding to the pictorial effect.

That the garden has been handled by men who know how is apparent at a glance. Clarence L. Brock, the local superintendent of parks, has had charge. He is thoroughly conversant with soil and climatic conditions and to his skill is due a large part of the beauty of the city, his practices having been adopted by gardeners not connected with him except by the ties of friendship. To the northern eye the Convention Garden is of special interest this year as revealing marked differences of behavior on the part of familiar subjects when grown in a warmer climate.

The garden is in Sam Houston park and was planned by George E. Kessler, of St. Louis, than whom there are few more skillful landscape architects. He is acting in an advisory capacity in the development of the Houston park system, which made his services available in this instance. The location is only a few blocks from Convention hall and the headquarters hotel. The words, "Welcome Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists," well executed with bedding plants, face Dallas avenue, across which is the lawn occupied by cannas, etc. At the rear is the space for winter gardens and the encircling beds.

The Cannas.

The trade exhibits in the garden run largely to cannas; indeed, cannas, water lilies and roses constitute nearly all the displays sent for business purposes, although there is one of tuberose, one of begonias, one of xanthosoma, one of geraniums and one of leptospermum.

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., is perhaps the largest exhibitor in the convention garden. It has ten beds of cannas, each bed containing a different variety. Some of these are the standard sorts, but most of them are the improved varieties raised by Antoine Wintzer, for which he and his house have become famous. Principal of these in the convention display are Loveliness, City of Portland, Juanita, Panama, Jane Addams, New York, Golden Gate and Wintzer's Colossal.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, has a large showing of cannas, including six of the newer varieties of European origin.

The St. Louis Seed Co., St. Louis, Mo., has a large, round bed of Canna King Humbert that shows for itself as well under the southern conditions as it does in the north, where it generally is considered the best standard variety.

Arthur T. Boddington Co., New York city, is represented by several standard varieties of cannas.

Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has a diamond-shaped bed of Canna Firebird that is a blaze of color.

The Aquatics.

Perhaps it is no more than natural that the aquatics should seem a specially interesting part of the garden, but it is noticeable that the visitors gravitate that way and it is said the Houston public has watched the development of the garden with special solicitude for the water lilies.

Henry A. Dreer has a circular pool about twenty feet in diameter, similar to the one that occupied the center of the famous Minneapolis garden, in which there are fifteen varieties of nymphæas. Of these the two that attract the most attention are N. dentata superba and N. dentata magnifica, possibly the largest-flowered of water lilies. The collection contains several of the blue and pink varieties, but the big whites cause more comment. In the center of the pool is a fountain surrounded by aquatic plants.

A more elaborate arrangement is that surrounding the exhibit of the Wm. Tricker Estate, Arlington, N. J. Here are eleven varieties of nymphæas, mostly of Mr. Tricker's own raising, in a pool 10x20 feet, with umbrella plant on three sides and a rockery on the other, with a luxuriant growth of pampas grass, Caladium esculentum and fire of the mount, or summer poinsettia, as it is locally known.

In a third pool, star-shaped, the park department has ten varieties of nymphæas.

The Rose Beds.

The California Rose Co., Pomona, Cal., has a bed of roses that must have been a glory in its season. There are several hundred plants in some fifteen varieties and the growth has been splendid, canes three feet long and more.

The Texas Rose Co., Rockdale, Tex., shows a dozen standard varieties of garden roses acclimated to Texas conditions.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

Carlisle & Son, Alvin, Tex., have a bed of tuberose.

L. H. Read & Co., Deer Park, Ala., has a bed of Xanthosoma Bataviensis, a plant little known in the trade but highly recommended by the exhibitor as an easily grown, strikingly decorative plant. It is allied to the caladium.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco, has a display of Leptospermum lævigatum, a shrub grown in the open in California, where it stands dry seasons well, and sometimes forced in greenhouses in the north and east by those who are expert in flowering heaths and other hard-wooded Cape and Australian plants.

Grohman the Florist, Saginaw, Mich., shows a bed of Begonia Grohmanii, which is the result of selecting and re-selecting a strain of Vernon until a real red type with bronze foliage when grown outdoors has been fixed to come true from seed.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, Fort Wayne, Ind., have a bed of Geranium Mrs. Vesey, a new variety to be disseminated next season. The color is a striking magenta and the plant seems to be of excellent habit.

Among the many good beds planted by Mr. Brock with stock supplied by the park department is one of about twenty-five varieties of crotons bordered by about twenty-five varieties of fancy-leaved caladiums that deserves special mention. There are other park beds of celosia, zinnias, Christmas peppers, Jerusalem cherries, vincas, verbenas, coleus, salvia, etc., that add greatly to the finish of the garden.

THE last year has been a busy one for the Washington representative. While there are no specific duties to be performed by that officer, there are daily calls on him to answer questions, both local and out of town, on all manner of propositions, and he contributes such information as he can to all members of the S. A. F. seeking the same. He is particularly called upon to assist the various committees. There has been much legislation under discussion in Congress during the last year that affects our industry, such as the unfair competition, or anti-dumping, law, the mail censorship, freight embargo; a bill to enlarge the Botanic Garden at Washington, D. C.; a bill making the mountain laurel the national flower of the United States. Other matters also have been brought to the representative's attention, all of which have been dealt with through the proper committees and which will be reported on in another paper.

The rose garden at the Arlington experimental farm is progressing nicely. While it has not advanced so rapidly as we had hoped, it promises to be in fine shape in another year or two. We have to date 687 varieties of roses in this rose test garden, including many from foreign countries—Germany, France, Ireland—and a consignment during the latter part of July from Australia. This is as it should be and we hope that our friends and fellow florists in all parts of the world will continue to send roses to this garden. We ask that anyone having new stock to be tested, or any varieties of roses that are not already planted in the test gardens at Washington, D. C., will contribute such plants to the Department of Agriculture, which will have them properly placed and tested. This particular garden is for the benefit of all the members of the society and in due time it will prove of untold value to all concerned. Your committee urges that, whenever practical, names for all plants, and particularly roses, be confined to two words.

It is pleasing to note that at the national capital the parks and school grounds are being more and more embellished with artistic plantings of flowers and shrubbery, all of which tend to create a love for the beautiful, not only in the residents of Washington, but also in the thousands of visitors who come to the national capital from every section of the country.

A notable step in the right direction was taken May 31 of this year by the introduction in the Senate of a bill to increase the area of the United States Botanic Garden at Washington. The bill provides for adding some twenty acres of ground to the present site of the garden. After thorough consideration by men qualified to know, this would seem to be the proper place for the Botanic Garden. To remove it five or six miles from the present location, where it would be inaccessible to the thousands who visit Washington each year, would be most unwise, yet such a move has been advocated. We hope the bill will pass at this session.

Business in all lines in the national capital during the last year has been generally good, and the reports from all sections of the country indicate that business has improved wonderfully and that brighter days are in store for florists and their profession.

THE TRADES' DISPLAY

THE trades' display presents a marked contrast to the exhibitions one is accustomed to in northern and eastern cities. Of course the show is smaller, for nothing else could be expected at so great a distance from the homes and principal market-place of the large exhibitors, but the point that first strikes the visitor is the absence of the plantsmen. Frequently Philadelphia houses supply the greater part of the exhibition—not one of the Philadelphia plantsmen has made the trip to Texas and the plant growers from other sections who usually put up attractive groups mostly are absent. One big Chicago grower has a large display, but the other plant groups are small and mostly from those not regular attendants.

In all there are twenty exhibitors, as against 108 at the society's high-water mark in Chicago. The supply houses make relatively the best showing; they have come out strongly and seem to be doing an excellent business.

The show never has been staged in a better hall. It is large, light and airy; the display made an especially good general effect and to a large percentage of those present it was the largest showing of trade commodities they had ever seen brought together in one place. The exhibitors were as follows:

Advance Co., Richmond, Ind.

This exhibitor manufactures the Advance ventilating apparatus and a complete line of greenhouse castings, pipe carriers, etc. The display shows the vent lifter in operation and samples of the fittings.

American Bulb Co., Chicago.

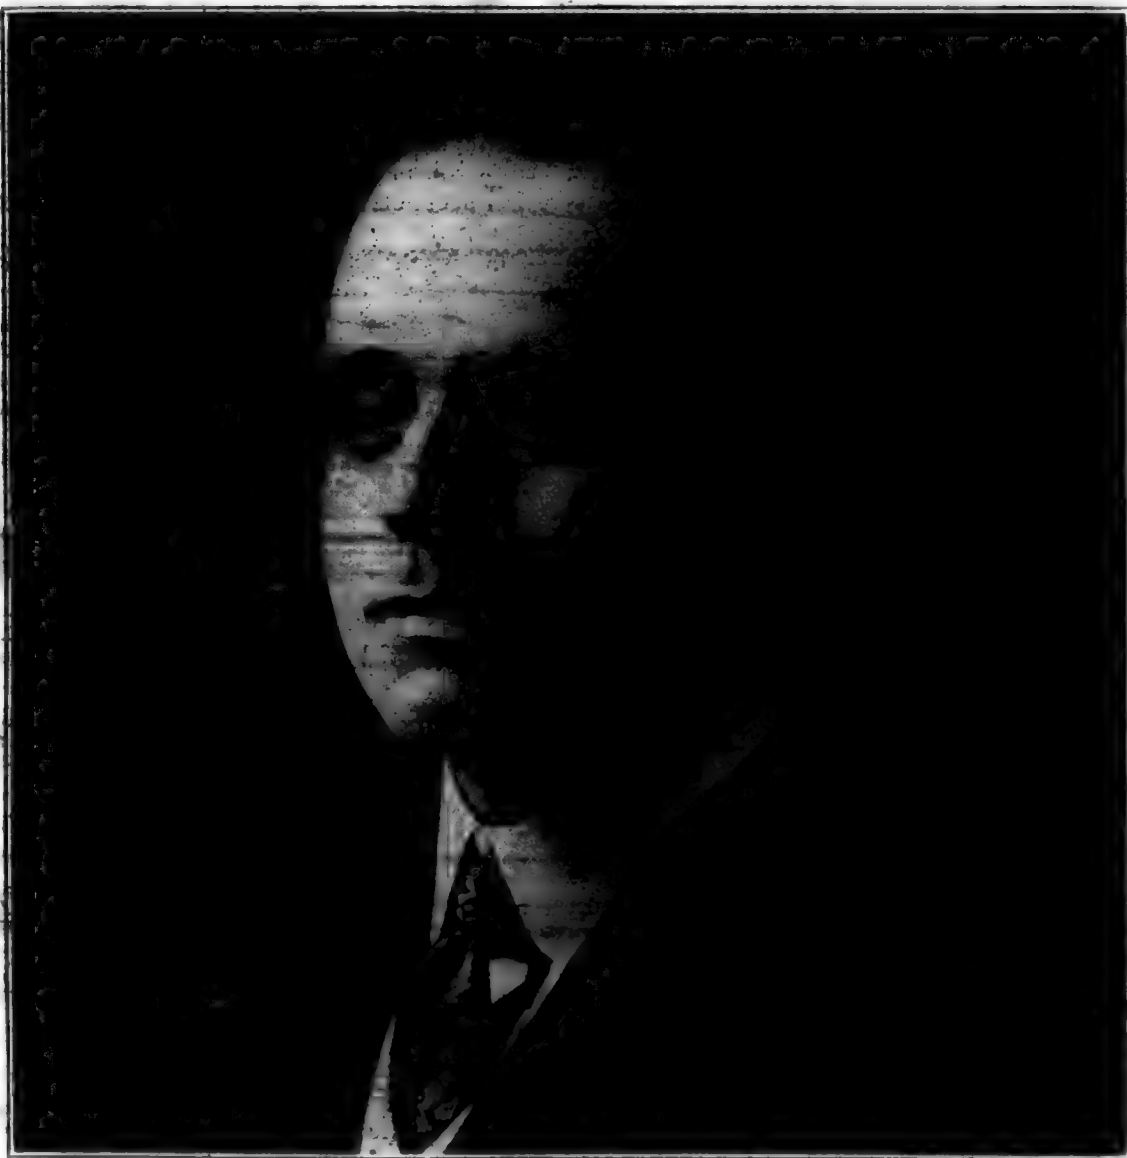

The announcement of the organization of the American Bulb Co. appeared in last week's issue of The Review and it is, perhaps, indicative of the enthusiasm its members are putting into the business that it is making an exhibit at the convention the same week it is opening its headquarters in Chicago. The display represents the accessories department, in charge of Samuel Seligman. A large line of fancy and popular-priced baskets is shown; also a number of new ideas for use in decorating tables and in corsage work, including an agate head pin and a collapsible, folding, fan-shaped canopy.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia.

Distance does not concern this firm; the whole world contributes to its supply and the whole of America is its selling ground; at San Francisco last year Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, was the largest exhibitor. The display last year was largely Japanese goods, on which the firm specialized immediately after the outbreak of the war, but this year the exhibit is largely of German origin, it having recently been possible to obtain, through Rotterdam, shipments long held up; 1,291 cases arrived on one boat and the British government gave a shipping permit covering about three times this number. The samples show a specially large line of German baskets, but a general stock is exhibited.

Burlington Willowware Shops, Burlington, Ia.

This exhibitor manufactures a line of willow baskets in a large variety of unique shapes. The colorings nearly all are dark and the shapes aid in creating the impression of weight. A. F. Longren is in charge.

Clarence L. Brock.

(Superintendent of the Convention Garden.)

One of the Three Water Gardens, that of William Tricker Estate, in the Houston Convention Garden.

R. A. Cluxton, Willis, Tex.

The Cluxton specialty is the Texas bluebell and the display is one of the bright spots in the hall.

Cohen & Hiller, New York.

This is a new ribbon house, the senior partner having traveled in middle western territory for a number of years in the interest of one of the older New York textile concerns that specializes on florists' ribbons. The display consisted of samples of ribbons, chiffons, bouquet holders, etc.

Cottage Gardens Nursery Co., Eureka, Cal.

This is C. W. Ward's Pacific coast establishment, at which he plans to grow a general line of the stock the trade now imports from Belgium and Holland. The exhibit consists of a general line of Pacific coast bulbs.

H. C. Doescher, New Orleans, La.

Great quantities of ferns annually are shipped south by growers north of the Ohio, but that New Orleans is well able to grow this class of stock, not only for local needs, but for the trade, is shown by the exhibit of H. C. Doescher, which consisted entirely of ferns of the Boston type.

J. A. Evans Co., Richmond, Ind.

The J. A. Evans Co., successor to the Quaker City Machine Co., manufactures the Challenge ventilating apparatus and the Evans salt sprayer, also a line of greenhouse hardware. The display shows the ventilating apparatus set up for operation, with samples of other specialties.

C. E. Falls, Kansas City, Mo.

This exhibit consists of advertising literature for florists dealing with the public.

Foley Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago.

This exhibitor has set up a miniature greenhouse, complete in all its parts and embodying the different patented features in its construction. President P. J. Foley is in charge.

Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill.

This exhibitor recently has attracted much attention in the trade by erecting a range of the largest greenhouses in the west as the nucleus of what is expected to be one of the largest cut flower growing establishments in the United States, but the convention exhibit represents only the older department of the business, devoted to the production of ferns and Christmas and Easter flowering plants.

Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago.

This exhibitor shows a large number of illustrations of installations of its apparatus in florists' establishments. The Kroeschell hot water boiler has been known for many years. Of later introduction is the water tube steam boiler and a high pressure fire and water tube boiler of capacities ranging from 100 to 350 horsepower. The Kroeschell ice machine also is illustrated, as many florists recently have been installing it.

Of course Fred Lautenschlager is in charge.

Lord & Burnham Co., New York.

Although this exhibitor's headquarters are in New York city, it has branches all over the country and it is the Philadelphia and Rochester men who are in charge at Houston. The exhibit shows the steel frame construction of greenhouses; the curved eave private conservatory or florists' display house and the angle iron eave commercial house. A large number of splendid photographs show the famous greenhouses the exhibitor has erected in various sections of the country.

J. A. Newsham, New Orleans.

J. A. Newsham has found Phoenix Roebelenii to be specially suited to conditions in the south and the plants in this display indicate that the plant is thoroughly at home at the Magnolia Nursery, as Mr. Newsham calls his place.

J. A. Peterson & Sons, Cincinnati, O.

This firm's specialty is the winter-flowering begonia of the Lorraine type. The exhibit contains three varieties of the exhibitor's own raising and introduction, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Melior and Glory of Cincinnati. The group also contains dracaenas, cyclamen, bird's nest ferns and other decorative plants.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, Ill.

This exhibitor long has been widely known as the largest grower of cut flowers in the United States and now is coming to the front as a leader in pot plants. Florists' supplies also are handled, but the display is confined to the plant department. It includes practically everything in the way of decorative plants and young stock for Christmas and Easter flowering. The showing of kentias is especially strong, some seven carloads of these having recently been received from Belgium.

A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, Ill.

Ever since the Texas florists organized their state association and began holding their conventions, this exhibitor has been attending the gatherings in Texas and is well known to the trade in the southwest. This time the display is the largest ever taken to Texas. It is in charge of H. G. Knowlton and Frank McCabe and shows a large assortment of Chicago-made baskets and pot covers, embracing a number of novelties as well as staple supplies. A conspicuous feature is the motor-driven fountain for table centerpieces or window decoration, which was invented by Edward Galivan, of this house.

M. Rice Co., Philadelphia.

The M. Rice Co., which covers the country from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore., is as much at home in Houston as in its headquarters city. The line has been shown to Texans many times before. The display consists principally of baskets, which are shown in many new shapes and colorings, but there also is a selection of the newer things through the whole line of florists' supplies, the purpose being to show novelties rather than staples.

E. E. Stone, Dickinson, Tex.

This exhibitor shows sprays of Asparagus plumosus, which are produced in quantity at Dickinson.

Wertheimer Bros., New York, N. Y.

Probably no other ribbon house in all America has devoted so much attention to supplying the needs of florists as has this exhibitor; special effort has been put on manufacturing for and selling to florists for many years, the firm now having its own factory in the ribbon section at Paterson, N. J. The line shown includes ribbons, chiffons and the Werbro novelties.

Ground Plan for the Houston Convention Garden.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

It hardly seems a year ago that our great national society sat in convention at San Francisco, Cal. I distinctly recall the genuine pleasure and the pride that I experienced at that time; the pleasure of seeing in the west so many representative members of our national society, and the pride of being honored with a visit by these men who had traveled many thousands of miles to further the interests of our organization. To you, brethren, in this beautiful city of Houston, I bring from California and the west the hearty good wishes of all the craft. Our brothers from the east, the north and the middle west, by their presence bespeak their loyalty. This convention in Houston means a great victory to you, and you should likewise feel a pleasure and a pride in the work that you have accomplished. It has not been a simple matter to instill into the minds of all members the necessity of making our society in every sense a national one, nor was it a simple matter to bring this convention to Houston, but when I look about me and see this wonderful representation, I feel that our efforts have not been in vain. I feel that the south knows how and I feel that the Society of American Florists has acquired an added power, the power of the spirit of the south. We need that spirit, we welcome it and we hope that it will work with us, not only today but every day in the future.

Opens New Chapter.

With the advent of the first convention in the south, the Society of American Florists has opened a new chapter in its history and, of those here assembled in convention, I am sure there is not one member who is not fully convinced that our move to this wonderful southern field was a move in the right direction.

It is my sincere desire that the support from the south shall be unwavering and constant. When I say support I allude partly to a platform of increased membership. This has been an issue of our society for several years and it is no less important today than it has been in the past. It is not so much the idea that any one of us should distinguish himself by bringing in a great number of new members. Every one of us individually should exert himself to influence every eligible person in his district with whom he comes in contact to join our national society. Our members number today about 2,000 and I hope that before another year is over we can boast of a membership of 3,000. The effort of this increase should not rest entirely upon the state vice-presidents, it should be the effort of every member individually.

It should not be necessary for me to expound to you the advantages to be gained by such an increased membership. Our usefulness as a national society increases as our membership increases. I would impress upon you particularly the fact that when this convention is over the work of enlargement in this southern territory should continue with the same unity of purpose with which it started, for in such unity there is strength, and we need that strength to accomplish the work that lies before us and to secure those benefits which can only be accomplished by thorough organization.

A National Body.

Although this is the first convention held in the south, it shall not be the last. As a national society we must necessarily convene from time to time in all parts of the country, without discrimination, and our society should represent every man engaged in horticulture, whether he be from the north, the south, the east or the west.

Reviewing the divers matters that were brought before the executive board at its meeting in March of this year, I wish to say that I am heartily in accord with everything that has been set down and touched upon by my predecessors, but would ask your indulgence while I review some of the matters that have come up during my tenure of office.

The greatest and most successful undertaking in the history of our society was the Philadelphia flower show of 1916. Philadelphia crowned herself with honors at that show. We cannot bestow upon Chairman Asmus and his able committees too much praise for the splendid work they accomplished in staging this exhibition and we cannot overlook the co-operation of our subsidiary societies whose wonderful displays of roses, carnations and sweet peas made the show even more attractive and whose special days brought many thou-

THE SECRETARY ON THE SOCIETY'S ACTIVITIES

It is pleasing to be able to report that in point of membership our society is stronger than a year ago. This condition should incite gratification, the more because our convention of last year was held in a city remotely west, and our gathering this year takes place in a city almost equally remote to the south. Our convention last year was the means of our securing a large and valuable addition to our membership, our rolls at the close of 1915 showing an increase in the state of California alone of 112 members in good standing. There is every reason to believe that the convention of this year will result also in a substantial influx of members.

The following have sent in one or more names for membership from January 1 to July 1, 1916:

The Annual Conventions.

Our conventions continue to hold the interest of the trade at large, and friendly competition for the honor of taking care of a convention is still keen, as may be judged from the fact that there are likely to be several invitations for the 1917 convention.

There is noticeable, however, generally throughout our ranks, a desire to eliminate much of the entertainment which has of recent years characterized our conventions. Our membership is now so large that the attendance at some of our gatherings is much too great to allow the extension of the hospitality which many cities would consider as befitting the occasion, and the expense and work incident thereto are necessarily such as to deter many cities from attempting to assume the role of host. Our hosts in the south have recognized this sentiment and have established a precedent which is worthy of continual observance, by cutting out all extravagant entertainment and arranging a simple yet most enjoyable series of trips and functions, which shall not in any way tend to diminish the attendance at our business sessions, or through expense create a burden the carrying of which might prove embarrassing in many ways.

Proposed Changes in By-Laws.

At the present convention the society is to act upon several changes in our by-laws affecting the policy hitherto followed in the conduct of our affairs. These changes have been thoroughly considered by our executive board and endorsed by that body as tending to the better and more equitable conduct of our work.

It will be noticed that through the affiliation plan now incorporated in our by-laws our executive board is greatly increased in size, lending greater strength to its deliberations and work. It should be the object of many more clubs and societies to so increase their membership in this society as to enable them to obtain seats upon our board, and thus extend the usefulness of our organization and increase the value of its work along horticultural lines.

The establishment of the committees on convention garden, proposed bureau of collections and credits, publicity, and American products may naturally be expected to result in action which should prove highly conducive to the general welfare of the trade. State vice-presidents, by explaining the work expected of these committees, should be able to induce many florists not at present conversant with our work to join our society.

Increasing the Membership.

In this connection I would invite state vice-presidents to cooperate more closely with the secretary's office in the work of extending our membership. While the secretary during this year has sent out numerous appeals to florists in the different states, necessitating considerable expense and much labor, the response has not been as great as expected. The influence of our state representatives should be highly effective in this work, especially when exercised in a personal way, and any assistance the secretary is able to give in furthering it is at all times available. Although, through the growth of the society and the extension of its plans, the work of the secretary's office has been greatly increased, requests from other officers for assistance in their work will have immediate and cheerful attention.

Mothers' Day.

Considerable interest has been shown by our members in the work of the International Mothers' Day Association, which is headed by Miss Anna Jarvis, the originator of Mothers' day, and a substantial fund has been raised for the use of Miss Jarvis in the prosecution of her work. It is to be regretted that the movement to raise a fund had inception with more than one organization, but it may be that the organizations acting as sponsors for the fund may another year arrange matters so that the work of all bodies may be in harmony.

While our trade exhibition this year is most commendable, it has suffered somewhat in its extent owing to distance from eastern markets, with resultant high transportation charges. The great European war, too, is still responsible for the diminution of exhibits of the novelties of foreign manufacture which for many years have helped our displays.

The National Flower Show.

Our National Flower Show, which was inaugurated at Philadelphia last March, proved to be a huge success. Chairman George Asmus, of the National Flower Show committee, in the report which he will make to the convention, will deal with the work incident to the preparations for the show and the results accomplished. The society is to be congratulated upon having for the fourth time successfully organized and carried out an exposition showing the advance of horticulture in America, an exposition eclipsing all predecessors.

PLANS FOR PUBLICITY

In view of the impossibility of holding a majority committee meeting at Philadelphia or, since that time, the chairman wishes to submit the following: J. H. Pepper was engaged, under the supervision of Secretary Young, as per the instructions of the directors of the Society of American Florists. Mr. Pepper wrote and disseminated numerous articles for Mothers' day, Memorial day and for special features, such as new roses, carnations and other meritorious commodities. These were distributed to the leading papers of the country and responses from the editors showed that a great many of them were being used.

It soon became evident to the chairman of the committee that, as the matter of publicity was such a big undertaking, it was better to go slowly and not waste any funds of the parent organization. Mr. Pepper submitted numerous plans for national advertising, but as many of them were necessarily expensive, it was deemed best to submit the whole thing to the committee once more for maturity. The start that has been made by our national body is certainly along good lines. There cannot be too much publicity or too much thought given this important topic, but the amount spent must compare with the returns gained therefrom.

Of course every particular line of business thinks it ought to be exploited directly, but is it not true that if any one line is exploited, the others are sure to benefit in proportion? Many retailers, in particular, have expressed a desire for national advertising and are willing to contribute to a fund for this purpose. Mr. Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, is at this time endeavoring to raise a special fund for advertising. Would it not be best for the S. A. F. to co-operate with the Florists' Telegraph Delivery and each of them devote a certain amount, say $1,500 to $2,000, for a common purpose?

There is much doubt as to the advisability of direct advertising, as the expense is too great, but an unlimited amount of good can be accomplished by a central bureau, such as has been undertaken in a small way, which would coöperate with the florists' clubs of the country, with the individuals of the S. A. F. and with the editors of the leading papers for indirect advertising.

The chairman, at the request of President Welch, undertook the work simply for a start. He mentioned at that time that he would only undertake it for a limited period and, as it is impossible for him to devote the proper amount of attention, he begs leave to have someone else appointed in his place as chairman, but is perfectly willing to aid in a smaller way as a member of the committee.

The amount spent, $190, is well accounted for in the matter of publicity received and accounted for by Mr. Pepper.

WORK FOR HOME PRODUCTION.

This is the report of H. P. Knoble, chairman of the committee on development of American products, read at the Houston convention August 15, 1916.

It is almost impossible for me to make an extensive report at this particular time, owing to the nature of the work to be undertaken.

I have corresponded considerably with the agricultural authorities at Washington, trying to secure their coöperation. They at the present time are doing good work in spreading this before the people who might be interested. Upon the occasion of a recent visit to Boston, in consultation with Mr. Shea and Prof. E. H. Wilson, I went into this situation in detail, spending the best part of one-half day going over its many phases.

The problem that seems to confront the American producer, particularly at this time, is American labor, which, at its high price, must compete with foreign labor.

I am given to understand that C. W. Ward is making extensive experiments for the development of American products, particularly as regards the azalea, and I am also given to understand that numerous Pacific coast horticultural establishments are making extensive experiments on hybrid tea roses. Only recently C. H. Totty told me that he now is experimenting to see whether these roses will be as efficient as the imported stock, since he maintains that through their system of irrigation the roots obtain unusually long lengths, and he is under the impression that if these roots are curtailed it might affect the plants.

So, then, in reality, the only report we can make is some progress.

SCHOOL GARDENS

THE first suggestion for the American florists to interest themselves in school gardening was made by Robert Farquhar, of Boston, at the S. A. F. convention in Washington, D. C., in August, 1892.

The practical value of this work has become recognized the country over, because it is the means of inculcating into the habits of youth industrial application of mind and bodily vigor, with the result of home benefit.

At the convention of the National Educational Association, held in New York city in July last, special sessions were held by the School Garden Association of America, devoted to the reports from school workers in this line. The United States commissioner of education, Mr. Claxton, was present, and representatives from Quebec and Ontario and from the chief centers of population in the United States. On one of the programs allusion was made to the suggestive work of the Society of American Florists. Your committee during the last year has carried out the plan of sending, as usual, a nicely illustrated circular letter to each of the departments of education in the states and territories, and to the school authorities of cities and towns wherever a member of the Society of American Florists is located.

This much is certain, that an interest in this work locally is good business for the flower and seed trade. If the idea among the children is encouraged, it will grow until the United States will become a nation of pretty homes. One thing none of us should forget, and that is the value of initiative, for it is the characteristic that laid the foundation of Americanism. The florist in his home town can, with spare material, set an example of pretty home surroundings that no other tradesman can so well do, and these examples point the way and create a demand for flowers, seeds and shrubs. The many letters which have come to hand from these efforts relative to home gardening for children prove beyond question the general interest this work has, and it carries with it the truth, "On earth peace and good will toward men."

THE BIGGEST SHOW

THE full measure of the success of the National Flower Show at Philadelphia is revealed for the first time in the report of George Asmus, chairman of the committee, presented to the S. A. F. at the Houston convention.

The show cost $49,876.19. The total receipts were $62,273.16, leaving a balance of $12,376.97, from which still is to be deducted the cost of dies and medals.

Chairman Asmus, in his report, paid tribute to the coöperating societies, to exhibitors, to guarantors and to those who donated special prizes, mentioning each by name. In addition, he said in part:

To one outside the circle of those actually engaged in the work of inaugurating a national flower show, the labor involved in the staging of such a show can hardly be realized. While your committee conducts its work as a directing body, much of the detail must be accomplished by the local organization; and, as chairman of your committee, I have felt myself particularly fortunate in having been able to assist in effecting an organization in Philadelphia whose work was a most important factor in the success of the show. I should feel that I were remiss did I not particularize in regard to this work.

To William Kleinheinz, chairman of the committee on exhibits, our thanks are extended for the work performed by his committee in the securing of exhibits in the competitive classes and for his personal effort in this direction.

We are gratefully mindful of the fact that W. F. Therkildson, chairman of the committee on publicity, was instrumental in obtaining for us publicity for the show of a high order and extensive character. Mr. Therkildson's work in this connection is worthy of the society's highest commendation.

The work of Louis Burk, as chairman of the committee on concessions, was most thorough and the arrangements made by this committee were both admirable and profitable.

Robert Craig, as chairman of the committee at large, with his committee, cared for many things without the province of other committees and helped materially the work of the organization.

The committee on lectures, of which J. Otto Thilow was chairman, instituted and directed a program of lectures on horticultural subjects which was an important and popular feature of the show and, consequently, a source of much gratification to those interested in the success of the show.

Samuel S. Pennock gave unstintingly of his time to attend to his duties as chairman of the committee on printing.

Much important work devolved upon the committee on lease, contracts and hall, of which Adolph Farenwald was chairman, all of which was carried out with a zeal much appreciated by our organization.

The committee on trade tickets, whose chairman was E. J. Fancourt, gave service which was long and continuous. The work of this committee was most important and was accomplished in a most skillful manner.

Wm. P. Craig, as chairman of the committee on special premiums, was instrumental in the addition of many donations to our list of special prizes.

The committee on information was a somewhat new feature of our show organization and we must congratulate Fred Cowperthwaite, chairman, on his having proved the necessity for a bureau such as was established, and for the good results accomplished.

Chas. Henry Fox, chairman of the advertising committee, which ultimately merged with the publicity committee, with his committee rendered admirable service in matters concerning the advertising of the show.

The committee in charge of decorations, John P. Habermehl, chairman, through the skill displayed in the decorations installed, met thoroughly the expectations of the National Flower Show committee.

The committee on special features, of which Chas. H. Grakelow was chairman, did excellent work. It is to be greatly regretted that some important features arranged by this committee were, owing to unexpected lack of room, impossible of accomplishment.

Franklin Barrett, as chairman of the committee on aquariums, was instrumental in the staging of an aquarium exhibit which was a highly attractive feature of the show.

The nursery interests were looked after by the nurserymen's committee, of which Wm. Warner Harper was chairman. The work of this committee was, it is to be regretted, limited by space accommodation.

Leo Niessen, chairman of the committee on music, deserves great credit for the musical features provided.

Arthur A. Niessen, as secretary of the local executive committee, is also to be congratulated on the successful carrying out of all the detailed work of that office.

The National Flower Show are also deeply grateful for the valuable services rendered by Daniel C. Donoghue, one of the leading attorneys of Philadelphia. Mr. Donoghue has a wide acquaintance with the florists of Philadelphia and vicinity and is greatly interested in the work of all florists. Mr. Donoghue did not render any bill for his services and our committee would recommend that the society show its appreciation of his work by appointing him attorney for the society.

TARIFF AND LEGISLATION

YOUR committee to which is entrusted the matter of legislation affecting our society begs to submit the following report:

Many matters have been brought to our attention affecting the different branches of our profession. Early in the year the matter of postage on catalogues and circulars was taken up, on the request of several of the large mail-order seed houses. The request made was not for a reduction in postage, but simply for permission to mail circulars and catalogues at the pound rate, irrespective of zone.

The bill was introduced in the United States Senate to bring relief to the members requesting this change, but after conferring with the powers that be, it was found that to have this permission granted might materially affect other lines of business, as well as our own, adversely, and we therefore decided not to press the matter.

Mail Censorship.

During the spring months a serious condition menaced the interests of importing florists by reason of the British censorship of the mails. The consular invoices and bills of lading were removed by the censors from the ships bringing the goods, and without the documents these perishable shipments could not be released or removed from the docks. As cables were suppressed and no relief from this intolerable condition was in sight, your committee interviewed the State Department officials, also the British embassy, with the result that arrangements were made whereby such important documents would in future be placed in a separate mail bag and would not be removed by the British censors with ordinary mail.

Freight Embargo.

As a result of the withholding of shipping documents by the censors, large shipments of perishable freight accumulated on the docks at the ports of entry, causing a tremendous freight congestion. In the effort to relieve this blockade, the railroads embargoed all outgoing and incoming freight from the terminals, which made it impossible to forward freight after it was released by the receipt of the delayed shipping documents. In this crisis, your committee interviewed railroad officials, and, as a result of its action, the railroads were ordered to lift the blockade as applied to shipments of Holland and Belgian plants, which were then arriving in large volume.

Your committee is able to report that in most instances permits have been given by the British and German governments to Belgian shippers, and that unless some unforeseen difficulty develops, the fall shipments of azaleas, etc., will arrive from Belgium on schedule time from Rotterdam.

A National Flower.

The following joint resolution, to officially recognize a floral emblem for the United States, was introduced in the House of Representatives June 1, 1916:

WHEREAS, The United States of America have no national flower, and the adoption of the mountain laurel would open up a wide field of interest for artists in many lines of creative and original work; it is in bloom on three of our greatest national holidays—Independence day, Decoration day and Flag day; its flowers are red and white, two of the colors in our flag, the red for courage, the white for purity; and the leaves, combining as they do yellow for wisdom and blue for truth, blended together, forming the green fruitfulness, are surely typical of our country; the seed pod on opening forms a perfect five-pointed star; the flower is wonderfully formed, like a chalice, with five delicately curved edges, the blossoms clustered together like the constellation of the states, and would mean "The Union forever;" now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, By the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that on and after the approval of this resolution the official and recognized floral emblem of the United States of America shall be the flower commonly known as the mountain laurel.

This resolution, if enacted into law, would make the mountain laurel the national flower of the United States of America. We immediately requested the introducer of the resolution not to push the bill until this organization could pass upon it. We were assured that every opportunity would be afforded this organization to file its recommendation in the matter. We also asked the horticultural press to give this matter wide publicity, and to request suggestions for or against the resolution. In every instance, except one, the replies were in favor of the mountain laurel as the national flower. We might further state that as far back as 1881 the mountain laurel was advanced as a national flower, but no official action has been taken. We therefore ask for an endorsement of the joint resolution above referred to, and that your committee be instructed to cooperate with our legislators at Washington along said lines.

To Enlarge the Botanic Garden.

We also ask the endorsement of this association of Senate Bill No. 6227, to increase the area of the United States Botanic Garden, Washington, D. C. The bill on file provides for the taking in of East Seaton park and West Seaton park, bounded by Third and Sixth streets and Maine and Missouri avenues.

If the above bill becomes a law, we shall in time have a botanical garden worthy of the national capital of the United States.

Anti-Dumping Law.

There is now before Congress a so-called unfair-competition or anti-dumping law, to prohibit the sale in the United States of foreign goods at prices substantially below the prices prevailing in the country of origin.

The enactment of this law would materially benefit the legitimate florist and dealer, who, as a rule, buy their goods at a fair market price and expect to pay for them, inasmuch as the bill before Congress prohibits the dumping on American markets of goods to be sold at public auction, particularly surplus bulbs and nursery stock which are annually offered in the United States. Your committee, therefore, has done what it could in personal interviews and has sent copies of the following letter, over the signature of the chairman of your committee, to the members of the finance committee having the matter in charge:

As national representative of the Society of American Florists, I wish to endorse Title VII, "Unfair Competition," contained in the so-called "General Revenue Bill," now under consideration by your committee, and to urge that Title VII be favorably recommended to and adopted by the Senate in its present form.

In this provision we see protection from unfair competition of a type not generally known, where foreign producers of the various kinds of nursery stock, bulbs in particular, sell to growers in the United States on individual orders at ruling market prices, only to later "dump" into the auction houses the same class of merchandise at much lower prices. There then arises in respect to these a competition, unfair and detrimental to our interests.

THE DEATH ROLL

SINCE last year's convention we have lost through death:

Edwin Lonsdale (life), Sept. 1, 1915.
W. Atlee Burpee (life), Nov. 26, 1915.
William Murphy, Sept. 27, 1915.
Frederick W. Bruenig, Feb. 25, 1916.
Albert McCullough (pioneer), Jan. 13, 1916.
Robert Haentze (life), May 5, 1916.
Max Rudolph, Feb. 22, 1916.
Conrad Bergstermann, Feb. 20, 1916.
William Young, Nov. 11, 1915.
Jos. H. Cunningham, March 4, 1916.
August Krueger (life), March 3, 1916.
Wm. F. Kasting (life), June 15, 1916.
Walter P. Stokes (life), July 1, 1916.
Wm. Tricker, July 11, 1916.
John W. Poehlmann, July 14, 1916.

It is with profound regret that in this list I have to chronicle the death of three more than ordinarily prominent members of our trade: Edwin Lonsdale, W. Atlee Burpee and William F. Kasting.

From the report of John Young, secretary of the S. A. F., presented at the Houston convention, August 15, 1916.

Mr. Lonsdale was a past president of our society, and for one year served as its secretary. He was a pioneer member, and keenly interested in our organization. His services were at all times available in any work of the society in which his knowledge and skill were of use, and he gave them unstintingly, officially or otherwise. His willingness to help a fellow member whenever possible to solve horticultural problems was heartily appreciated, and he will be greatly missed by many of us who have sought his counsel.

Mr. Burpee was a life member, his membership dating from 1886, the second year of the society's existence. He took a great interest in the society's affairs, and gave evidence of his interest by his earnest support of everything tending to advance our work. He was one of the most widely known members of our organization, and his delightful personality endeared him to all who came in contact with him.

In the death of Mr. Kasting, our late highly esteemed treasurer, our society sustains a great loss. His sudden demise, June 15, came as a shock to us all. Few there are in the society who did not know him, and expressions of sorrow at the time he was called away were general. His interest in the affairs of our society was most intense in character, and his counsel was sought in all our plans and projects. He was a life member, and served as president in 1906. His efficient services as our treasurer for several years have played an important part in our advancement, and his business sagacity was ever a protection to us against unwise investment. We shall miss him for his companionship and his business acumen, both of which we could ill afford to lose.

THE following list contains the names of all those who had made their presence known up to the hour of adjournment August 16. Bergen, N. Y.—Roy St. John, who has been a market gardener and grower of celery, asparagus, cabbage and cauliflower plants, is planning to build a greenhouse and start in the florists' business this season.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—William F. Snyder has developed a new tomato especially adapted to greenhouse culture, but also excellent for outdoor use, which he thinks will become the most popular market sort in this country. It is a large, smooth variety, almost solid, and it has been difficult to work up stock of seeds on this account, but Mr. Snyder hopes to put it on the market next season.

TEXANS HOLD THEIR MEETING

THE Texas State Florists' Society held its annual meeting at Houston Aug. 14, the day preceding the opening of the S. A. F. convention, and had the largest attendance in years, with three brisk business sessions devoted to the discussion in plain language of the intimate problems that perplex the trade in the Lone Star state. Nearly the whole discussion turned on the distance Texans are from market and the difficulties they encounter in obtaining the stock they need to meet the rapidly increasing demand. In his address A. F. Koehle, of Sherman, urged that a corporation be organized under the auspices of the association to conduct a commission house in Texas, and H. O. Hannah, also of Sherman, in his address discussed the need of more growers for wholesale in Texas, while even President Kerr, in his speech opening the convention, referred to the desire of Texans for a home source of supply.

Essays Read.

The following were the essays read and the titles show clearly the trend of thought in that section of the trade:

"Better Freight Rates for Texas Florists"—W. J. Baker, Fort Worth.

"Importance of Membership in the S. A. F."—Henry Greve, Dallas.

"Progress That Is Being Made Toward Securing an Experimental Range of Glass"—Prof. E. J. Kyle, College Station.

"The Difficulties of Retailers with Wholesalers on Shipments of Cut Flowers Unfit for Use and How to Overcome Them."—A. F. Koehle, Sherman.

"Practical Use of Our Wild Flowers."—C. E. Papworth, Fort Worth.

"The Need of More Wholesale Glass in Texas."—H. O. Hannah, Sherman.

"What the Ladies Are Doing for the Florist World."—Mrs. Annie Wolfe Bregance, Waco.

"The Outlook for Texas Florists for the Coming Year, with Some Suggestions on What to Expect."—Otto Lang, Dallas.

Elections.

Henry Greve, of Dallas, nominated Thomas Wolfe, of Waco, and his election to the presidency was unanimous. F. G. Suchy, of San Antonio, was elected vice-president and L. J. Tackett, of Fort Worth, was reelected secretary and treasurer. His annual report showed cash at the begin-

The directors, new and hold-over, are E. E. Stone, Dickinson; Bird Forrest, Waxahachie; H. B. Beck, Austin; A. F. Koehle, Sherman; H. O. Hannah, Sherman; J. E. McAdams, Fort Worth.

C. L. Brock, of Houston, was selected as press representative and F. W. Hensel, of College Station, as educational director.

It was voted to hold the 1916 fall show in Dallas and the 1917 convention in San Antonio.

Miscellaneous.

E. J. Kyle, of College Station, reported that a contract will be let within a few days for the experimental work the society is anxious to have done in the interest of the trade.

Reports by members representing florists' clubs throughout the state showed special interest at Dallas, San Antonio, Austin and Houston, with other cities waking up and getting to work.

The president was authorized to appoint a committee to cooperate with the Texas State Nurserymen's Association and other interested bodies with the view of securing inspection legislation national in its scope, to put an end to the harrassments resulting from the present chaotic condition of state regulation. This was as the result of the report of the legislative committee, to the effect that the present system is working many hardships on the trade.

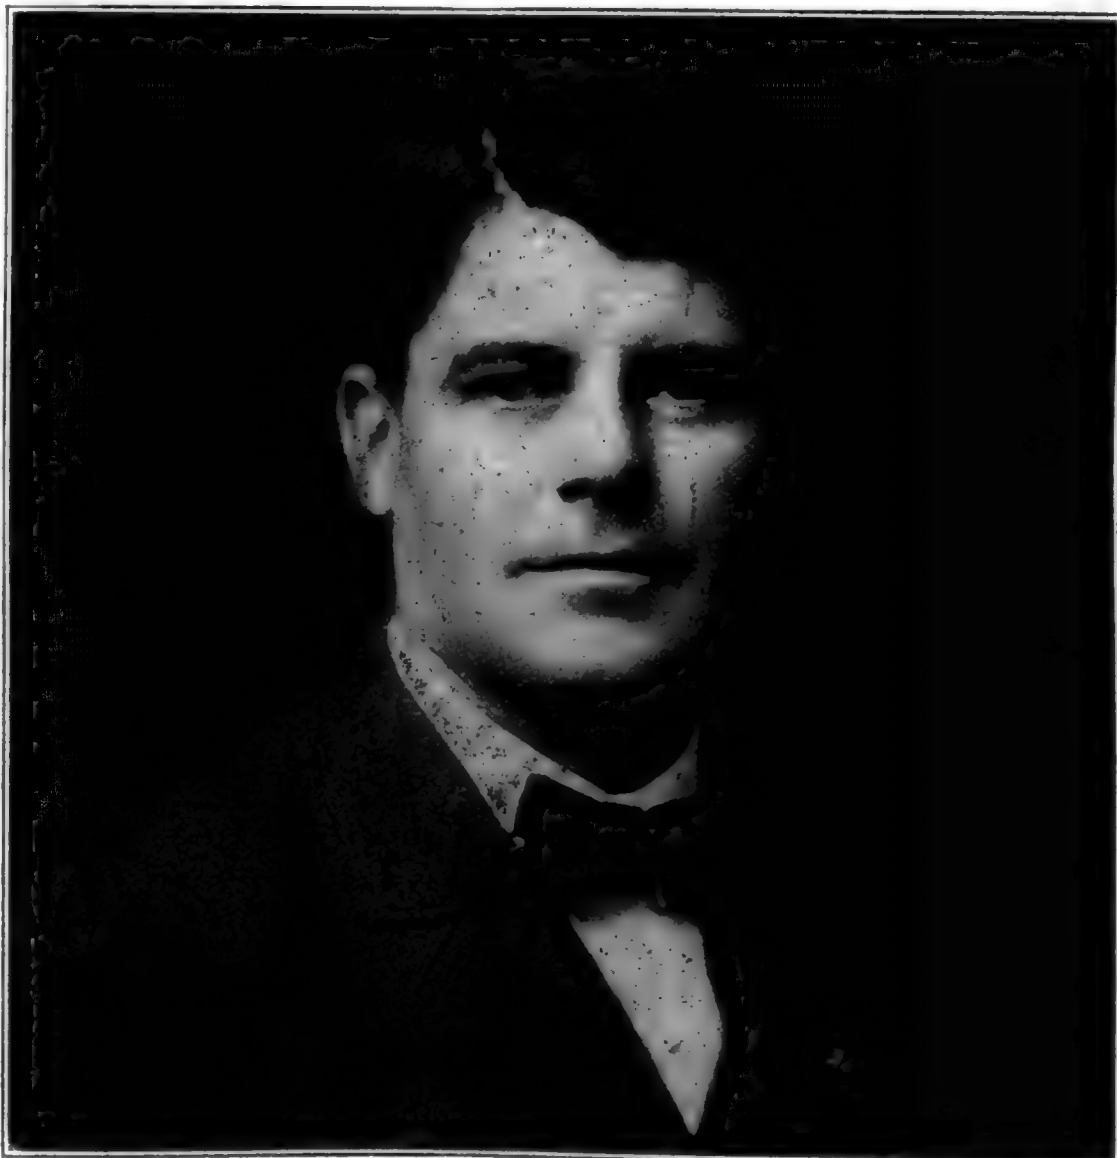

The committee on resolutions thanked President Kerr for his untiring efforts and the bringing of two great conventions to Houston at one time; also thanks were given the secretary, the Houston authorities and the railroads for their coöperation.

Discussions.

Members brought up the matter of high express rates and emphasis was put on the point that shippers can largely reduce these by proper packing. An instance was cited in which 2,000 plants valued at 15 cents each were packed in eleven cases, five of which arrived in a badly damaged condition. Mrs. Darbee, of San Francisco, spoke of shipping California cut flowers to Texas and W. F. Gude, of Washington, said he had had the pleasure of opening a shipment of mums Mrs. Darbee sent to President Wilson; they opened in splendid condition.

P. J. Foley, of Chicago, spoke of the increase in the price of glass and urged that legislation is needed to control it.

President MacRorie, of the S. A. F., W. F. Gude and Thomas Wolfe.

(President-elect Texas State Florists' Association.)

George W. Hess, of Washington, and J. J. Hess, treasurer of the S. A. F., each gave brief addresses, congratulating the Texas society on the progress it is making and urging affiliation with the S. A. F.

THE GLADIOLUS

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

Holds Annual Meeting.

The exhibition and convention of the American Gladiolus Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, August 11 to 13, in connection with the summer show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The season in the east has been a most peculiar one, there having been an excess of dark and wet days, with sunshine far below the normal. As a consequence, gladioli, which had to be planted later than usual owing to the wet condition of the ground in spring, are flowering much later than usual and for the vicinity of Boston two weeks later would have suited the growers better. However, there was a really wonderful display of flowers of high quality, which filled the main exhibition and lecture halls.

The Business Meeting.

The annual meeting of the society was held August 12, when there was an excellent attendance of enthusiastic specialists. President C. F. Fairbanks occupied the chair.

There was a long discussion over what constitutes an amateur and a committee of three was appointed to report on the amateurs' standing in the society. The committee appointed was Madison C. Cooper, Arthur Cowee and I. S. Hendrickson.

S. E. Spencer and others spoke on the desirability of securing more members. Maurice Fuld suggested sending out quarterly bulletins, which met with general favor. Messrs. Chamberlain, Mortimer, Cooper and Fairbanks were appointed to see about the preparation and printing of these bulletins.

President Fairbanks resigned, but the society unanimously voted not to permit it and Mr. Fairbanks, amid applause, accepted office for another year. Secretary Henry Youell, of Syracuse, and Treasurer A. E. Kunderd, of Goshen, Ind., also were reelected.

Cleveland was favored by Messrs. Fuld and Cowee for next year's meeting. The claims of Hartford, Conn., and other cities also were urged. Finally it was voted to leave the selection of the next meeting place in the hands of the executive committee.

Prof. A. C. Beal, being called upon, spoke of the trials of gladioli at Cornell. He said that this year only about thirty varieties are being tested, that four bulletins on gladioli are being issued at Cornell, the first on "The History and Evolution of the Gladiolus"; the second, "Culture"; third, "Varieties"; fourth, "Diseases." It is hoped that these can be issued so that they can be paged consecutively. The bulletins can be obtained through any resident in New York state and a copy will be mailed to each member of the American Gladiolus Society.

Arthur Cowee spoke on the duty on imported gladiolus bulbs and said it was noteworthy that serious diseases of this popular bulb had been introduced from Holland. He felt that the American Gladiolus Society should be ready, in view of the fact that a change of administration is possible, with tariff recommendations. Other members favored leaving this matter to be dealt with by the tariff and legislative committee of the S. A. F. and a motion to this effect was adopted.

The Exhibition.

It is doubtful if the American

Gladiolus Society ever had a larger or more representative display of flowers than on this occasion. New varieties were numerous and some of these showed striking advances in size, color and texture. The wonderful advance made in the primulinus hybrids was noteworthy. These were undoubtedly the most talked of and admired flowers staged. They are so much more graceful and decorative than the larger-flowered but stiffer gladioli that they appealed to the public instantly. The society should endeavor to manage the artistic staging of gladioli. Stereotyped rows of vases containing single spikes, or large vases containing twenty-five or more, soon pall. Far more attention to artistic arrangement should be given and retail florists should have a chance to show how they can stage these flowers most effectively.

There was a large attendance of the public and florists with notebooks were busy taking the names of varieties which appealed to them. Many spikes were shown from bulbs which had cost $5 each. In some cases as much as $25 per bulb has been paid for novelties. Some of these do not compare with older varieties, but occasional ones are extremely fine. The following boiled down list contains the names of some of the most striking, beautiful and desirable of the newer varieties:

Muriel, a beautiful pink lavender; Mme. Mounet Sully (Lemoine), creamy white, dull carmine center, fine; new primulinus hybrids, raised by Kunderd, showing flowers of wonderful size and in beautiful colors; Mary Fennell (Kunderd), a beautiful pink lavender; White Ivory (Kunderd), pure white, lavender streaks; Mrs. A. E. Kunderd (Kunderd), beautiful delicate pink; Tango, Mrs. Moulton and Mrs. Watt, three new forms of bright, rich crimson; Evelyn Kirtland, an Ohio seedling, delicate salmon with a darker suffusion; Gretchen Zang, another good Ohio variety; Daisy Rand (Kunderd); Mrs. Dr. Norton (Kunderd), as shown by L. Merton Gage, a variety of rare beauty, awarded the first-class certificate of the American Gladiolus Society; Goliath, fine new dark violet; Heliotrope (Lemoine), a glorified Baron Hulot; Prince of Wales (Kelway), lovely salmon pink; there is said to be another Prince of Wales, of Dutch origin, quite distinct; El Capitan, white with Competition among amateurs was light. C. F. Fairbanks had the best display for growers with over 1,000 bulbs. Madison C. Cooper was second. There was little competition in the classes for amateur growers with less than 1,000 bulbs.

The most noteworthy displays were the non-competitive ones. C. F. Fairbanks secured the gold medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for his large and artistic group, which included about 100 large vases or baskets. The Brooklands Gardens, S. E. Spencer, owner, had a large group of magnificent spikes, among which Peace, Mrs. F. Pendleton, Glory of Nordwijk, Scarsdale, primulinus hybrids, Empress of India, Niagara, Panama and King Arthur were particularly fine.

Eugene N. Fischer received a certificate for the new seedling, Henry C. Goehl. A fine collection came from the Chautauqua Flower Fields, Mayville, N. Y.; also from Raymond W. Swett, Saxonville, Mass.; C. W. Brown & Son and L. Merton Gage, Natick, Mass. The vase of Mrs. Dr. Norton in the latter's collection was one of the most admired in the show. John Lewis Childs, Inc., received honorable mention for Evelyn Kirtland and C. W. Brown & Sons, for Evaline. The Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, Mass., had a nice table of primulinus hybrids.

In other classes of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society the Blue Hill Nurseries took first for best collection of herbaceous phloxes; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second. Weld Garden was first for six tuberous begonias. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine collection of herbaceous plants and R. & J. Farquhar & Co. loaned quantities of evergreens in tubs for decorating halls and vestibules. There were fine displays of seasonable fruits and vegetables.

POINSETTIAS DAMPING OFF.

Will you kindly let me know the cause of the enclosed poinsettias dying off in the stem? They were in perfect condition when in 2-inch pots, but three days after being repotted into 3-inch pots they were affected in this way. The soil used was three barrow loads of loam, two loads of cow manure, a 6-inch pot of blood and a little sand.

S. T.—Pa.

The plants were completely rotten on arrival, which is to be expected during the most torrid part of the year. Your compost was hardly suitable for poinsettias, and the mere addition of dried blood was sufficient to account for the plants dying off. Dried blood is a powerful and rather quick-acting fertilizer. It is one I never have dared to use in potting compost. Possibly some vigorous-habited plants might stand it, but certainly not poinsettias. It is useful as a light top-dressing. You also used far too much cow manure in your soil. There are few even of the most vigorous pot plants which need more than one-third of manure in the soil.

A more suitable compost for your poinsettias would be one consisting of Competition among amateurs was light. C. F. Fairbanks had the best display for growers with over 1,000 bulbs. Madison C. Cooper was second. There was little competition in the classes for amateur growers with less than 1,000 bulbs.

The most noteworthy displays were the non-competitive ones. C. F. Fairbanks secured the gold medal of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for his large and artistic group, which included about 100 large vases or baskets. The Brooklands Gardens, S. E. Spencer, owner, had a large group of magnificent spikes, among which Peace, Mrs. F. Pendleton, Glory of Nordwijk, Seardsdale, primulinus hybrids, Empress of India, Niagara, Panama and King Arthur were particularly fine.

Eugene N. Fischer received a certificate for the new seedling, Henry C. Goehl. A fine collection came from the Chautauqua Flower Fields, Mayville, N. Y.; also from Raymond W. Swett, Saxonville, Mass.; C. W. Brown & Son and L. Merton Gage, Natick, Mass. The vase of Mrs. Dr. Norton in the latter's collection was one of the most admired in the show. John Lewis Childs, Inc., received honorable mention for Evelyn Kirtland and C. W. Brown & Sons, for Evaline. The Blue Hill Nurseries, South Braintree, Mass., had a nice table of primulinus hybrids.

In other classes of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society the Blue Hill Nurseries took first for best collection of herbaceous phloxes; T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co., second. Weld Garden was first for six tuberous begonias. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine collection of herbaceous plants and R. & J. Farquhar & Co. loaned quantities of evergreens in tubs for decorating halls and vestibules. There were fine displays of seasonable fruits and vegetable tables.

POINSETTIAS DAMPING OFF.

Will you kindly let me know the cause of the enclosed poinsettias dying off in the stem? They were in perfect condition when in 2-inch pots, but three days after being repotted into 3-inch pots they were affected in this way. The soil used was three barrow loads of loam, two loads of cow manure, a 6-inch pot of blood and a little sand.

S. T.—Pa.

The plants were completely rotten on arrival, which is to be expected during the most torrid part of the year. Your compost was hardly suitable for poinsettias, and the mere addition of dried blood was sufficient to account for the plants dying off. Dried blood is a powerful and rather quick-acting fertilizer. It is one I never have dared to use in potting compost. Possibly some vigorous-habited plants might stand it, but certainly not poinsettias. It is useful as a light top-dressing. You also used far too much cow manure in your soil. There are few even of the most vigorous pot plants which need more than one-third of manure in the soil.

A more suitable compost for your poinsettias would be one consisting of three parts loam, one part cow manure, well dried and screened, and one part leaf-mold for plants in the 3-inch pot stage. At later pottings you can leave out the leaf-mold unless your soil is naturally quite heavy, in which case a little coarse sand might be added with advantage. C. W.

DEPRECIATION AND FAILURE.

What do you know about the cost of doing business in your place? And what do you know about the cost to produce each of the various items you grow? How does the selling price compare with the cost plus the overhead?

"The subject of costs may not be an entertaining one," Robert E. Belt, of the Federal Trade Commission, told the seedsmen at their recent Chicago convention, "but it is one which should be of great interest to all business men because it relates to information which is essential to the successful conduct of a business."

"Formerly little attention was paid by business men to the question of costs. The necessity for a knowledge of costs and their analysis was not so great, as the margins of profit were larger. But today margins of profit in most lines are much narrower than formerly and the necessity for the most efficient management and the closest analysis is felt as never before."

It exactly fits the case of the average florist.

Mr. Belt laid particular stress on the necessity for including every item of cost in the accounting, putting special emphasis on depreciation. "The Federal Trade Commission," he said, "has under way a study of depreciation. One thing that the commission is urging on every business man is the absolute necessity of making proper provision for depreciation and making it monthly."

"Statistics show that the percentage of business men who do not provide for depreciation is large, running over fifty per cent, and this is one of the causes that has a great influence on our heavy business death rate. Nearly every business man is perfectly willing to include in his costs all items for which he pays out actual money, but he is inclined to overlook those which do not require a visible outlay, and depreciation is one of those. Although it unquestionably exists, a great number of merchants and manufacturers do not charge any depreciation and give as a reason that they keep their property in first-class condition and it does not depreciate. This is one of the most fallacious ideas in business today. Every machine, building and apparatus, like every man, has a certain period of life and no matter how much care you take of the machine or how much medicine you give the man, death is bound to come.

"It is evident that where profits are divided without adequate provision being made for depreciation, they are really taken from capital, and when the plant is finally worn out the owner is forced to raise more capital, not for the purpose of enlarging his plant, but actually to put it back in the same condition as when he began operations."

"Many business men hesitate to charge off depreciation because of the mistaken idea that by so doing they are really spending money. Nothing could be farther from the truth. You have not lost one penny by making an adequate charge for depreciation; on the contrary, you have strengthened your business and you are playing fair with yourself and with your competitor."

"If we can arouse the American business man to the fact that depreciation does exist, that it is an element of cost, and that he should put it in cost, the time will come when our industries will be far stronger financially."

DOUBLE GYPSOPHILA.

Will you kindly give me some instructions regarding the growing of the double perennial gypsophila? Does its name, meaning "gypsum-lover" or "lime-lover," indicate that the soil where it is grown should be generously mixed with lime? Should seed or plants be planted for best results? What soil and location, and what amount of sunshine and drainage should be provided? I have had rather poor results in attempting to raise these plants. If the plants are used, should they be set out in the fall or spring? When should seed be sown? I have yet to find a small white flower that will satisfy the retail florists for design work. The achilleas have dark centers. The Artemisia lactiflora is, as Sherman Duffy calls it, a "sick astilbe." The euphorbia is poisonous to some persons. The boltonia does not flower symmetrically. The feverfew reverts to the green-centered type and its odor is unpleasant. The sweet alyssum demands cool weather. The double gypsophila is largely sent here from Colorado, but I should like to grow it myself. S. E. R.—Kan.

Double gypsophila, like its single companion, is an easy doer. It is not at all fussy as to soil, but if your land is at all acid it would be well to sweeten it with lime. It likes a deep, well drained and well manured soil, with full sunshine. If it is to be in the shade it will do less satisfactorily. It is usually propagated by grafting in greenhouses and for this reason it is still a comparatively scarce plant. The largest stocks of it are held in Holland and England. I would suggest that you try raising some from seed. You can purchase seeds which are guaranteed to give a fair proportion of double flowers. Two years ago I was fortunate enough to get about forty per cent of all seedlings raised to come double.

A useful plant for you to grow would be Gypsophila elegans, an annual variety. This succeeds well in flats on shelves in a carnation temperature for early crops, and it can be sown several times outdoors during the season. Euphorbia corollata is a good perennial. I think you cannot have tried the best form of Achillea Ptarmica. If you will secure plants, not seeds, of the form Perry's White, your customers will not be able to complain of any dark centers. The disagreeable smell of feverfew should be enough to condemn it as a flower for any sort of design.

A few useful white-flowering perennials for you to grow, in addition to those already named, would be: Delphinium Chinensis alba, Clematis recta, Pyrethrum uliginosum; Chrysanthemum maximum King Edward VII and Polar Star; Lysimachia clethroides, Physostegia Virginiana alba; such phloxes as F. G. Von Lassburg, Le Cygne and Mrs. Jenkins, and the climbing everlasting pea, Lathyrus latifolius albus. C. W.

ALTERNANTHERAS DYING.

I am enclosing a few alternanthera plants, so as to ascertain, if possible, the cause of the trouble which I have had with them during the last two weeks. These plants were set out May 20 and made a satisfactory growth at the start. Two weeks ago I noticed a few had wilted. As they are planted in a mill yard and close to a pickling plant, where acids are used in baths for the purpose of cleaning sheet iron, I was inclined to think that perhaps some of this deleterious material had been scattered on the bed, causing all the trouble. So I gave no further attention to the matter except to replace the affected plants with new ones, but I still find the same condition in different parts of the bed. At first the plants were looked after by the laborers at the mill, but I took over the care of them July 10, when I found that the bed had been cultivated only twice during the season, instead of receiving such attention at least as often as once a week. Then I thought that this neglect might be the cause, or at least a contributory cause.

The plants wilt and die in ones and twos at different places in the bed. I hardly think the cause is a fungous disease, as it would affect more of the plants. Whatever the origin of the trouble may be, I have never been so mystified in all my thirty-five years of experience in carpet bedding, and I shall be thankful to you for any information.

W. H.—Pa.

I could tell nothing from the plants received by mail, as they were completely dried up. While it is barely possible that some substance may have been thrown on the plants, I think that climatic conditions are more likely to have been responsible. Spells of hot, damp and comparatively sunless weather, such as prevailed in the east during the greater part of July, have caused a great deal of fungoid disease, not only on alternantheras, but on many other plants. With clearer weather I think the trouble will disappear. Of course it is a decided advantage to keep the soil stirred in flower beds. This insures a better growth of the plants, aerating the soil and helping it to retain the necessary moisture.

CANADIANS HOLD SESSION.

No More "Gadding About" Wanted.

The nineteenth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, held at Berlin, Ont., August 8 to 10, was not altogether what might be termed an unqualified success, but, taking the peculiar times in which we live into account, the results were quite on a par with those obtained at the usual gatherings.

Montreal was chosen as the place of next year's convention, and George Robinson struck a note of wisdom and understanding when he suggested that, if these conventions are to be a success in the future, there must be less entertaining and gadding about and more helpful talk and solid business accomplished. In the course of his remarks he mentioned that the expenses incurred at the time of the last convention in Montreal, five years ago, amounted to nearly $1,000. As it was generally felt that during this awful war it would be inexpedient and unbecoming for any organization to anticipate such entertainment as was then provided, more time probably will be set apart at the next convention for thorough discussions on the questions that crop up. The interests of the trade generally should benefit by a change in the method of procedure.

About the same number of members and visitors from all parts of the Dominion attended the convention, which was opened by the mayor of Berlin.

Trade Exhibits Few.

President F. W. Adams delivered his annual address, and after the reports from the various committees E. J. Hayward, of Montreal, read his own paper on "Commercial Ferns." Mr. Hayward is well known as a successful grower of ferns and his paper was so complete and thorough that it might well be read again on some future occasion. After the first session an automobile sight-seeing trip was given the visitors, who returned later to the meeting place to hear a lecture on "Success with a Home Garden," by George H. Baldwin, of Toronto, and a paper on the "Commercial Culture of Peonies and Dahlias," by H. Tattle.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

JAMES A. FRASER.

STILL young at the age of 60, having the energy and enthusiasm of youth combined with the experience of maturer years—a man of that description should be a valuable factor in any organization, and James A. Fraser, whom the Canadian Horticultural Association recently secured as president, seems to be just that sort of man. He is of Scotch parentage and was born at Prescott, Ont., where he has long been in business. Besides conducting greenhouses and distinguishing himself as a prize-winner at flower shows, he also owns and operates a farm. For many years he has been one of the most influential members of the local school board and the board of managers of the county fair. He is prominent, also, in several fraternal orders. No, those are not all of his activities; he also holds a government position in the fishery department.

Wise, and one on gladioli, by John A. Campbell, were scheduled for Wednesday's session, as well as a report on trade exhibits. Unfortunately, the latter were conspicuous by their insignificance, and if future conventions are hopeful of encouraging concerns to send their samples long distances it would be well for them to understand that no concern can be expected to do this merely for the fun of the thing. Several New York houses sent their representatives out of their way so that they might attend this convention, but, if reports be true, it is doubtful if they will visit other than the larger cities again.

Officers Elected.

The convention concluded on the morning of August 10 with an excellent paper on rose culture, read by Julius Luck, of Montreal, and in the afternoon the conventionists visited the Ontario Agricultural College, at Guelph.

The following officers were elected: President, James Fraser, of Prescott, Ont.; first vice-president, E. J. Hayward, of Montreal; second vice-president, F. Dicks, of London, Ont.; secretary-treasurer, J. Luck, of Montreal; executive committee, C. H. Janzen, of Berlin, Ont.; E. F. Collins, of Toronto; F. Wise, of Peterboro, Ont.; E. B. Hamilton, of London, Ont.; Luke Williams, of Ottawa, Ont.; George Douglas, of Toronto; William Hunt and C. A. Smith.

Louisville, Ky.—Preliminary plans for a joint meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana and the Kentucky Society of Florists, to be held in October, were worked out at the recent meeting of the Kentucky society at Summer's park. Acceptance of the invitation of the Kentuckians to the Hoosiers was made known at the meeting.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week was exceedingly dull, hot and enervating. There was little stock and less business. However, toward the closing days of the week there was a slight improvement. The promise of the opening season already is in the air; one conservative wholesaler says he has little hope of a boom before the holidays, while others think the fall season will open about the time the straw hats are called in, September 15.

Nearly all the roses arriving are new ones, short-stemmed and weak-stemmed, 50 cents per hundred being a fair average price for these. The few long-stemmed ones—Hoosier Beauty, Ophelia, Double Killarney, Russell, Sunburst, Mock, Stanley, etc.—are quickly taken. A few new American Beauties are arriving. The cooler weather has been helpful, but the dog days are yet to come. In another week or two there should be a sufficiency of roses of all kinds. The shipments of carnations have practically ceased. It will be several weeks before reliable quotations may be expected.

The average price of longiflorum lilies is $4 per hundred; a few are held at $5—exceptionally good flowers. Valley is down again to $4 and under, with a light demand. There are not many gardenias as yet. Orchids still are limited in quantity and high in price, a few of the selected bringing $1 each. The prices of the lower grades range from $1 down to 25 cents. Dahlias are already bidding for a share of the patronage; some large, fine flowers were selling August 12 at $5 per hundred. There are few first-class asters. Nineteenths of the arrivals are barely salable, and prices are unworthy of publication. The best of the asters sell at $2 to $3 per hundred.

There now is a great abundance of Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora and goldenrod. The other outdoor flowers do not cut much of a figure. Last, but not least, we have the gladioli—there must be millions of them. They are coming from all points of the compass in an ever increasing flood. Hard it is to dispose of them; thousands have been sold at 25 cents per hundred.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club, the opening session of the season, will be held at the club's rooms in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, September 11.

Traendly & Schenck's new greenhouses at Rowayton, Conn., have been completed. There are two, each 62x500 feet, and an iron-frame boiler house, 40x50 feet. Mr. Traendly and family are at their summer home at Rowayton.

Wm. E. F. White, who some weeks ago was appointed manager of the Greater New York Florists' Association, 162 Livingston street, Brooklyn, has purchased the business and will continue it in his name, at the same address.

A visit to the Rose Hill Nurseries at New Rochelle found H. A. Siebrecht at the helm and busy as ever. Nearly all the big range now is devoted to roses and carnations, with Ophelia as the leading specialty. Many acres are devoted to the nursery, which is full of specimen evergreens.

J. Austin Shaw.

In the customhouse papers of the French steamer Harpagus, which arrived at New York August 5, from Marseilles, the M. Rice Co., of Philadelphia, and A. Herrmann, of New York, are listed as consignees of nine and fifty-seven cases of immortelles, respectively.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The talk of the week was the large quantity of gladioli coming into the market and the low prices that prevailed. The price of gladioli was left to the buyer and it is said that some of the offers were only a little more than a cent in large quantities.

The intense heat continues and flowers of all kinds are burning and shriveling to such an extent that it is extremely difficult in some lines to get blooms worthy of sale. The blooms are becoming smaller and the stems are shorter. Prices are far below normal, but should a customer care to pay a good price for good stock his order could hardly be filled. It now is impossible to get any quantity of good roses or carnations.

Roses and carnations are being supplanted by good summer flowers, such as dahlias, larkspurs, altheas, buddleias and others of this type. These are all extra fine this season, because of the wet weather, where grown on high ground. On the other hand, this same wet weather has played havoc with the asters, for with the hot weather that has prevailed for some weeks it now is impossible to get really good asters at any price. The correspondent last week viewed a field of asters, an acre in extent, which were so badly diseased that they were worthless.

Various Notes.

William F. Gude, of the Gude Bros. Co., has purchased a 7-passenger automobile. His brother, Adolph Gude, has also purchased a new car, his being a 7-passenger 6-cylinder make.

Fred H. Kramer spent the week at Atlantic City with Mrs. Kramer and their daughter, Frieda. The two latter have been at the seashore during the summer.

Charles Scarborough, of the Gude Bros. Co., accompanied by Mrs. Scarborough, journeyed to Philadelphia in an automobile he recently purchased. They will spend their vacation at the home of Mr. Scarborough's parents, but will spend some time at Atlantic City before returning here.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gottenkenny and their two children are enjoying an extended vacation at Piney Point, Md. Alan Murdock has purchased a sombrero, a six-shooter and a fishing outfit and has gone to Dubois, Md., for a vacation in the wilds.

Leapley & Meyer, of G street, northwest, are bringing in some good ferns, including Bostons, Whitmani and Scottii. This firm had set out several thousand asters, but, like others in this locality, their crop is a failure and they doubt if they can save 300.

F. H. Riegelmeier and family are here from Pittsburgh, Pa., after having stopped over in Philadelphia en route from Atlantic City. They are on an extended motor trip.

George Gouldman, with George H. Shaffer, now is at Frederick, Md., on the last leg of his vacation.

To let signs recently appeared in the display window of the Freeman flower store at 610 Thirteenth street, northwest, indicating the probable retirement from the business of Mrs. J. R. Freeman, widow of the founder. It is said that the greenhouses also may be rented. Since the death of their father, Louis and Joseph Freeman have been running the business for their mother. It is the intention of Louis Freeman and Harry Payne, who for a number of years has looked after the store, to enter into a partnership and engage in the flower business in the same neighborhood, following the closing of this store and the securing of a suitable location. NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Newark's retailers now experience the usual midsummer dullness, but during the last ten days some of them have had more funeral work than usual at this time of the year, which will help to augment the total August sales. Asters were a little scarce last week. Roses are sufficient for the limited demand, but they do not keep well. Of gladioli there is a great abundance and they are reasonable in price. There are enough other varieties of flowers to fill in, but they are not too plentiful and the quality of some of them is poor.

Various Notes.

The S. A. Rogers Nursery Co. had a good summer window in the form of a fern garden. Down the middle was a gravel walk leading to a gate in the white fence at the back. The sides of the walk were banked with Boston ferns and other and larger ferns filled the rest of the window.

A. Gahr reports that July business was slow, but that August has opened up unusually well.

Joseph D. Kroehl, Jr., has recovered from his severe attack of rheumatism, but he does not spend much time at the store except when there is a rush. Most of his time is spent at the greenhouses on his farm at Union. The outdoor work seems to agree with him.

Charles Luthy had unusually good business during the last of July and the first days of August, but things now are quiet again.

The branch store of A. Deisler & Son has been closed since the first of August and will remain closed until the early part of September. All business will be transacted at the main store, 31 Holland street.

J. J. McLaughlin, of McLaughlin & Murphy, is spending his vacation at Manasquan, on the New Jersey coast.

The outing of the Essex County Florists' Club, Thursday, August 3, was a big success. The weather was all that could be desired and there was an attendance of more than 100, including a number of wholesalers from New York. The outing was held at Berkeley Heights. Members owning their own automobiles went in those. For others machines were provided. The members assembled at Lincoln park and arrived at their destination in time for a late breakfast. A late dinner was served in the afternoon. There were athletic events of various kinds and a baseball game. R. B. M.

LANCASTER, Pa.

Club Meeting.

Thursday, August 10, the Lancaster County Florists' Club held its monthly meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. There was a good attendance. Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, Pa., had covered the exhibition tables of the hall with vases of the newer varieties of gladioli, possibly the finest collection of blooms ever shown in the county. His vases of Schwabin, Pride of Lancaster and Pink Perfection were of the highest type. Mr. Landis ranks with the best gladiolus growers in the country.

The flower show committee, which is arranging a flower show to be held November 9 to 11, in the Auditorium, reported progress.

A large number of the county florists are arranging to visit the R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. range at White Marsh, Md., when the dahlias are in their glory, the latter part of September. Anyone interested should write to Albert M. Herr for information relative to joining the party.

I. Rosnosky, of the Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor at the meeting and made a few happy remarks. T. J. Nolan, of the King Construction Co., also was present. The next meeting of the club will be held September 21.

Various Notes.

E. J. McCallum and G. W. Marshall, of the McCallum Co., Pittsburgh, called on a number of the florists last week. They were driving a handsome new car and were delighted with the "Garden Spot County of the U. S."

Announcement has been made of the wedding of Miss Vernoll La Park, daughter of George La Park, florist and seedsman of La Park, Pa., to Mr. Frank L. Whitson, of New York. The wedding occurred at Los Angeles, Cal., July 1.

Some of the carnation growers have finished planting in, while others are on the way.

Paul Murphy, manager of the B. F. Barr & Co. store, spent a pleasant vacation with friends in Youngstown, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Herr and son, Irwin, are enthusiastic anglers and spend many days on the Susquehanna river reeling in the gamy black bass.

E. S. Rutt, of Elizabethtown, is another successful angler.

Many of the growers of early mums in this section report unusually severe attacks by the tarnished plant-bug.

VEGETABLE GROWERS CONVENE.

The annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America will be held at the La Salle hotel, Chicago, September 26 to 29. The program includes an extensive trade exhibit, round table discussions and addresses by leading gardeners, truck farmers, greenhouse men and representatives of various colleges, experiment stations and the Department of Agriculture. Marketing, soil fertility, heating, packing, spraying and other subjects will be covered on the program, which is being prepared and soon will be announced.

An invitation to attend the convention is extended to everyone interested in the work of the association. Indications predict the largest and most enthusiastic convention ever held. Reservations at the La Salle should be made early by members of the association and others who expect to attend.

Additional information regarding the convention and a copy of the program may be secured by writing James B. Foley, secretary, Chicago convention committee, 3100 South Spaulding avenue, Chicago.

Cambridge, Mass.—Robbins Bros. have had a mosaic tile flooring laid in their show window.

Somerville, Mass.—R. C. Harris, alderman and florist, recently donated 10,000 carnations to be sold for a soldiers' relief fund.

Woburn, Mass.—Two large greenhouses have been erected on Wyman street for Gordon Fisher, of Quincy, and G. B. Arnold, of Stoneham.

Newton Highlands, Mass.—E. H. Corey, Jr., has erected a garage for an automobile truck, to be used in connection with his store on Floral street.

Providence, R. I.—The Rhode Island Horticultural Society will hold an exhibition of dahlias, asters, gladioli, fruits and vegetables in the ball room of the Narragansett hotel, September 12 and 13. The premium list may be obtained by addressing E. K. Thomas, secretary, Kingston, R. I.

Winthrop, Mass.—H. W. Crockford now has been a year in his own store—a year of good business from start to finish.

Andover, Mass.—Plans are nearly completed for the annual exhibition of flowers, fruit and vegetables in the town hall, September 8 and 9. The Andover Florists' and Gardeners' Club is coöperating with two civic associations in the event.

Wenham, Mass.—The great fields of blooming gladioli of B. Hammond Tracy—Cedar Acres gladioli—August 9 were opened to the public for the benefit of the American Ambulance Hospital at Neuilly, France. In the show rooms of the large concrete storehouse cut blooms were offered for sale. The spikes were exhibited in fancy jars, tall slender vases, hampers and baskets—the work of Mrs. Tracy. The affair undoubtedly netted a goodly sum for this war philanthropy.

THE prices of wire and of pipe were given another boost last week, of $2 per ton.

THERE is a general tendency toward closer scrutiny of credits in the trade and an insistence on more prompt payment.

SOME of the largest manufacturers of paper boxes state that their output for the next three or four months is sold, while it is the practice of others to accept orders only subject to delivery at the factory's pleasure and at the prices then prevailing. Boxes will cost double last year's prices.

THE new rose, Lillian Moore, which won the prize of $1,000 at the San Francisco exposition last year, recently has been exhibited at British shows by Hugh Dickson, Ltd., the originator. It is described as an improved Mrs. Aaron Ward. It is to be disseminated in the United States next year by C. H. Totty.

U. S. WILL PAY DAMAGES.

The postal regulations covering indemnity on account of injury to articles contained in registered, insured, and C. O. D. parcels in the United States mails have been amended by Postmaster-General Burleson so as to cover cases where articles are not rendered worthless, reparation to be made for "the actual, usual, direct and necessary cost of repairs required to place them in serviceable condition."

Up to the time of the promulgation of this regulation, indemnity has been restricted to articles which have been irreparably damaged.

Claims for damages under this amendment must be made by the consignor of the mail matter through the postmaster at the office from which it was sent, as prescribed by the postmaster-general in the regulations. Indemnity for injury or loss of domestic registered mail matter is restricted to its value, not exceeding $50 for first-class matter, and not exceeding $25 for third-class matter, and subject to a number of conditions prescribed by the postmaster-general. C. L. L.

THE COVER ILLUSTRATION.

The illustration decorating the cover of this issue of The Review is a portrait of Mrs. L. Helen Fowler, manager for W. B. Shaw, grower of water lilies, at Washington, D. C., with a basket of the new hybrid lily, Nymphaea Rose Arey, arranged by Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington. The color of the flower is a brilliant coral pink and the size of the expanded bloom is five and one-half to six and one-half inches.

THREE OF A KIND.

The general shortage of plants this season is resulting in even better returns than usual for those who print their Classified ads in The Review; all the buyers are searching these liners for offers of the stock they need—and they need almost everything more than they usually do. This is the way it works out:

Please discontinue our ad of poinsettias, as it has cleaned us out of them.—George Bros. & Co., New Kensington, Pa., August 10, 1916.

Please discontinue our ad of carnation plants, as they are all sold, thank you.—Harry Hoffmann Floral Co., Jacksonville, Ill., August 10, 1916.

Please discontinue my ads, as I am all sold out, thanks to The Review.—W. A. Ballou, Wheaton, Ill., August 10, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the "cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

NO MORE "HOSPITALITIES."

Suddenly the trade bodies nearly all have come to the view of the American Carnation Society, which several years ago eliminated "hospitalities" from the program of its annual conventions. Last spring the American Seed Trade Association intimated to the local members that no entertainment was wanted at its June convention, and the American Association of Nurserymen did the same thing a week later. Now comes the report from the annual convention of Canadian florists, held last week, that entertainment features are to be omitted in the future, while at Houston President MacRorie recommended to the Society of American Florists that strict attention to business be the rule for subsequent conventions of that largest of our trade bodies.

It is not a new idea, but it has been difficult to repress the florists of the convention city, who wanted to give their friends a good time. The entertainment features grew until they eclipsed the real purpose of the convention and the best interests of the trade suffered; attendance fell off, because of the prominence given features that, when kept in their proper proportions, no doubt were an attraction. No longer do serious-minded men and women go hundreds of miles to a convention that is mostly picnic—they want a real business meeting, one from which they can gather knowledge of real value in their business. Of recent years the national flower shows have offered more of business value than have the August conventions and it is to this fact the difference in attendance is due.

CROPS AND PRICES.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture last week issued one of the most discouraging crop reports of recent years; it showed great deterioration in nearly all grain crops as the result of the dry, hot weather in July. The August 1 forecast compared with the final production of last season is as follows:

	Aug. 1, 1916	Last year
Corn	2,780,000,000 bu.	3,054,535,000 bu.
All wheat...	654,000,000 bu.	1,011,505,000 bu.
Oats	1,270,000,000 bu.	1,540,362,000 bu.
Barley	195,000,000 bu.	237,009,000 bu.
Potatoes ..	364,000,000 bu.	359,103,000 bu.
Apples	71,600,000 bbls.	76,670,000 bbls.

The official comparison of prices is interesting: The first price given below is the average on August 1 this year, and the second the average on August 1 last year: Wheat, 107 and 106.5 cents per bushel; corn, 79.4 and 78.9 cents; oats, 40.1 and 45.4 cents; potatoes, 95.4 and 56.3 cents; hay, $10.70 and $11.02 per ton; cotton, 12.6 and 8.1 cents per pound; eggs, 20.7 and 17.0 cents per dozen.

With the above information, florists who know the farming community in their vicinity can estimate with accuracy the amount of money that will be in circulation this winter.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Newark, N. J.—A five per cent dividend to the creditors of H. C. Strobell & Co., bankrupt florists at 895 Broad street, has been declared by Referee Porter. The claims aggregate $13,000. R. B. M.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The return of cool weather is of incalculable value to growers and, of course, it has a tendency to speed up demand. As a result the unusually good business for this time of the year that has blest the Chicago market this summer continues to hold sway. Not that business is large, for that cannot be with the meager supply available. But business has been active enough to take care of all salable stock that has come to the market, and that is all that can be asked. The funeral of Dr. John B. Murphy exhausted the available supply of orchids early in the week and sent the price of them soaring. Other flowers were brought into requisition, with the result that practically everything of first-class grade was far on the short side of the market by August 15.

The demand for good Beauties has been far in excess of the supply, and the supply is improving, both in quality and in quantity. The demand for other roses, too, has been quite active. The supply of really good stock, particularly in the greater lengths, has been deplorably short. Russell leads in popularity, with Milady, Ophelia and Sunburst jostling one another for honors, nor has Killarney been without a strong following.

In such a time as this, valley could be nowhere but on the far short side of the market. The supply of Easter lilies is diminishing and demand is only

You Can Get Good Lilies Here

WE HAVE probably the largest (certainly the steadiest) supply of Giganteum Lilies to be found anywhere in the west. We NEVER are out, and just now, when good lilies are scarce elsewhere, we are supplying all who come, including many other wholesalers. The price is $8.00 to $10.00 per 100. Fine stock, cut tight for shipping.

GLADIOLI

Following last week's rain, we have a fine cut of Gladioli—all the old favorites, like America, King and Augusta, and novelties you seldom can find elsewhere, like Myrtle, Mrs. Pendleton, etc. You will like our Glads.

NEW BEAUTIES

For many years the best liked flowers of summer have been the short and medium Beauties, the first cut from young plants. And again we have a large crop. Much the best roses now in market, following the hot weather. Excellent values at 4c, 6c, 8c, 10c, 12c to 16c.

THE BEST ROSES

We offer a large cut of such Roses as Mrs. Russell, Milady, Sunburst, Ophelia, Ward, Brilliant, etc. We have the largest supply of Roses in this market, the largest in America.

GOOD ASTERS

In spite of the dry weather, that has ruined many a crop, we offer good Asters—long stems, large, full flowers, grown under irrigation; all colors. We shall be glad to have you try them, for we know you will want more.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

We can supply all the Valley you need—on telegraph order if need be, but why not arrange for regular shipments, so YOU will always have some on hand?

sporadic. There are a few daisies on the market, but they are scarcely worth reckoning with. Snapdragons are to be had, but they do not amount to much. Gladioli are more plentiful and, though demand is good, prices are inclined to sag. Gradually the supply of garden flowers is growing smaller and there is little to boast of in the way of quality. But they move and that is the essential thing. Asters, though still far short of a normal supply, constitute the backbone of the market. They are always salable and the quality, in spite of recent adverse conditions, is fairly good. There are few carnations.

Greens are plentiful, and though they move, the moving is slow of accomplishment.

Various Notes.

Chicago is well represented at the S. A. F. convention this week, considering the distance to Houston. The special through sleeper that left Sunday midnight carried only seven: August Lange and wife, Thomas McAllister, M. C. Gunterberg, M. Barker and George Asmus, of Chicago, and Thomas Long, of Western Springs. The party was joined by W. H. Sievers and wife, of Buffalo. A day or two ahead went Samuel Seligman and Robert Newcomb to represent the new American Bulb Co. Fred Lautenschlager went August 11. A. F. Poehlmann followed August 14. H. G. Knowlton, Frank McCabe and C. E. Pruner were on the ground several days in advance.

Last week's rain and the cool weather was a boon to the carnation growers. It permitted pushing replant-

The most surprising feature of the business year, according to John Michelsen, is the way the demand keeps up this summer. He says it will be much the biggest August in the history of the E. C. Amling Co.

While most of the growers have planted all the Ophelia they could procure, Emil Reichling has not increased the space given it at Peter Reinberg's. His judgment is that Ophelia is more popular today than it will be one year from today.

Neither hot weather nor cool can abate for one moment the zeal and energy of Anton Then and his sturdy sons. During the extreme heat of the last month they have been busy building new benches in all their houses, overhauling the heating system, painting the houses inside and out, as well as carrying on the usual business of planting and the unusual business of putting a prize-winning carnation, the Thenanthos, on the market. They now have 15,000 of this variety benched and they are in excellent condition. Over 10,000 cyclamens are also looking fresh in spite of the recent heat. The next thing on the program is the laying of 400 feet of cement walk along the south end of the range. This, however, will be but a trifle for these hustlers.

Not until the hazy days of autumn do the woods and fields hold enough attractions for N. J. Wietor, of Wietor Bros., to take him from the city for more than a day or two. When everyone else has returned, he may take a real outing.

Miss Sadie Palinsky, one of the proprietors of the W. L. Palinsky establishment, 2865 Palmer avenue, has gone to Oquawka, Ill., for a month's rest.

There were simultaneous arrivals of lily bulbs from Formosa and Paper Whites and Romans from France at Winterson's Seed Store, August 14.

With as little noise as possible, John Kruchten will slip into the city this week end and give the market a once-over and then motor back to Sister Lakes, Mich., for another outing. In his absence Henry Kruchten is managing affairs.

For the next two weeks H. B. Kennicott, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., will have his hands fully occupied, as Ernest Frank, the head bookkeeper, has gone to Fruitvale, Mich., for a vacation.

Report comes from the region of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., that Miss O. A. Tonner is indulging herself in almost every known form of summer outdoor recreation. Next week she expects to return to the city and give her sister, Anna Tonner, a chance at the open country. Miss L. A. Tonner says that the scarcity of good rose stock has resulted in a particularly brisk demand for garden flowers.

Harry Manheim, of the Hoerber Bros. sales department, has been singularly unfortunate during his vacation period, which began last week. While on his way home early in the week he was struck by a street car and his head severely cut and bruised. And as though this were not enough, within the same week his little boy was run over by an automobile, breaking a leg, but, most fortunately, not otherwise injuring him. Mr. Manheim has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade.

The cool weather has brought J. Friedl and his wife, 3538 West Twenty-sixth street, back to the city. In their absence, Joe Papacek operated the store.

Speaking of summer roses, Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says Russell is undoubtedly the best hot weather rose ever introduced into commerce. With regard to the much mooted question as to whether Ophelia is a successful summer rose or not, he says that though it may pop open, as so

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cool weather following the extreme heat has cut down the supply of flowers to an extent that causes greater activity than is usual in mid-August. There are other causes besides the cool weather: The after crop is scant and rather poor; there are fewer roses than usual, owing to the heavy replanting; there are not so many gladioli. These causes combined to make the supply a little short of the demand at times.

Gladioli are the principal flowers in the market. Easter lilies come next; then roses, My Maryland furnishing perhaps two-fifths of the flowers. Catleyas are good, but not plentiful, and valley continues scarce. There are lots of white flowers now, reinforced by hydrangeas.

The Cause of Mildew.

James G. Scott tells me of an interesting talk given on this subject by Randall Glymp before the Germantown Horticultural Society. In speaking of this talk Mr. Scott summarized it as "too much ventilation." Upon being told that "bad ventilation" would be nearer the mark, Mr. Scott came back with an exact account of what actually had been said. It is so good that I venture to give it here, verbatim:

"Do not keep the houses too hot during dark weather. It will not help you to get any more flowers, but will help you to get mildew, if the plants get the slightest cold draft. My method is to keep all the air on I can, and the foliage naturally will grow harder and be able to stand the draft. The way mildew starts as a rule is by allowing the house to get too warm and then opening the ventilators up at once. Then the cold strikes the plants and it is all up.

"I find that sulphur is the best remedy for mildew at all times, winter or summer. If I happen to need it in the summer I apply it with a thin bag, by giving the bag a slight jerk. Sulphur is too heavy to apply with a bellows. In winter I paint it on the heating pipes. Do this when the least bit of ventilation is on and it will surely take effect. If steam is used for heating, be careful not to get too much on your pipes. It will burn the foliage and also spoil the color of pink and red roses."

Various Notes.

Fred Cowperthwaite has accepted a position with the King Construction Co.

He will assist William J. Muth in the Philadelphia district, with office at 307 Harrison building. Mr. Cowperthwaite will commence his new work August 21.

William Fox, of Parkerford, Pa., was in town this week. Mr. Fox is a carnation grower of note. Some time ago the firm name was Fox & Rosen.

Charles Hartley, of Wyndmoor, Pa., devotes his greenhouses to growing fine snapdragons. Salpiglossis and lemon verbenas are summer crops.

The Market.

Wholesale cut flower market conditions did not improve any last week, but there was considerably more stock at the wholesale houses. The retailers say it has been a dull summer so far in all lines, except in funeral work, which really is the only thing that gives them something to do. The wholesalers report conditions as being poorer this season than in many previous years. Asters and gladioli completely dominate the market. Asters are in excellent demand, the best of them bringing $3 per hundred. All colors command attention because of the scarcity of carnations. Of these the field stock has been almost burned by the dry, hot weather of the last three weeks. Gladiolus spikes have held up in price better this summer than in any of the previous summers. Extra fancy stock is holding up to $4 per hun-

FLOWERS are FLOWERS

—BUT there is a difference. When it comes to measuring them up from a perfect standard, there are but few; the same is true of baskets. We don't claim that our baskets are the most perfect on the market, but we do ask your judgment, if you have used Neidinger's baskets, as to whether you have ever bought a more practical line, with that rich appearance, for as little money as you have from us.

A great many florists never ask the man who fills the basket if he has any preference for this or that basket, consequently he is not aware of the fact that there is a difference. Then again, some florists have gotten into the old rut of buying from one or two certain people. He does not know that he is probably paying a higher price for his baskets than his competitor, whom he thinks is selling very cheaply; but if he only knew that this same competitor was probably making more profits on his baskets than he was on his, because the competitor was buying newer and more up-to-date baskets at a lower price than he, then the wise florist would look around elsewhere.

Don't fail to see the line our men have on the road. All our baskets contain the non-leaking pan.

dred, while $3 would be the average. Easter lilies seem to be quite plentiful of late and bring about 8 cents. Roses are arriving in fair lots, the bulk being quite short-stemmed. These should average about $2 per hundred. There is little long stock in the market. Valley is quite scarce. The greens market is excellent at all times and the demand is large.

Florists' Club Meeting.

The St. Louis Florists' Club held its meeting August 11, in St. Louis county, on the lawn of the summer home of John D. Davis, where the members were entertained by Stephen Beer, the private gardener. The attendance numbered fifty-five. President Jules Bourdet opened the meeting, with all the officers present. All the committees made final reports.

Robert Newcomb, of Chicago, made application for membership. The change in the by-laws was read for the third time and carried by a full vote.

The election of officers took place next and resulted as follows: President, Jules Bourdet; vice-president, August Hummert; secretary, J. J. Windler; treasurer, W. C. Smith; trustee, F. A. Windler. The trustees were instructed to entertain the Chicago party who would spend a few hours in St. Louis on the morning of August 14, on their way to Houston, Tex., to attend the S. A. F. convention. W. A. Rowe invited the members to attend the growers' picnic August 24. The club ordered a $5 prize for this affair. The next meeting of the club will take place on the grounds of the Sanders Nursery, September 14, when the new officers will be installed.

The local daily papers said last week: "It has become known that John T. Milliken, millionaire chemical manufacturer and former oil magnate, is the largest stockholder in the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., a new concern, for whose occupancy a building is nearing completion at 1410 Pine street. He will be represented by his secretary, Frank P. Maid, who is secretary and treasurer of the flower company. At his beautiful country home at Crescent, Mo., there are greenhouses with approximately 100,000 feet of glass roof, devoted entirely to roses. These flowers will be sold through the new company, which will have its formal opening September 5. Other varieties of flowers will be obtained from other sources, Milliken's interest in flowers being almost entirely confined to roses. The president of the new concern is David Geddis, former manager of the floral section of a local department store, and the vice-president is J. J. Beneke, who was in the flower business at 1216 Olive street for forty years prior to his retirement April 15 last to join the new company. The new concern will make a total of six wholesale flower establishments on Pine between Thirteenth and Fifteenth streets."

The Market.

Last week proved a satisfactory one for sales of cut flowers. Unfavorable weather, with frequent rains, spoiled many outdoor flowers and clean-ups for the season have been in marked contrast with those of a year ago. The predominant flowers now are asters, gladioli and lilies. Asters improved in price toward the end of last week and are still selling quite well. Good flowers make $1 to $2 per hundred, with seconds a little lower. The only variety seen as yet is Queen of the Market. Gladioli are steadily increasing in numbers and it is hard to quote any price on them; some make $1, others thrice that price. Halley, America and Francis King are the leaders so far.

The supply of roses is limited, many growers sending in nothing at all. Good flowers are soon bought at $6 to $10 per hundred, smaller ones going at 50 cents and up per hundred. There is a moderate supply of Beauties, with the best unchanged at $20 to $25 per hundred. A few small carnations still come in, but they compare unfavorably with asters. The new crop is due about September 1. Sweet peas are poor and scarce; the constant rains have been too much for them. There are plenty of longiflorum, auratum and speciosum lilies. Cattleyas are scarce. Lily of the valley remains about the same; also gardenias. Sweet sultans, physostegias, gypsophilas, aconitums, coreopsis, cosmos and a small assortment of other annuals or perennials are seen. The asparagus trade is dull, people using gypsophila in its place in a large measure.

During a terrific thunder storm August 8, hail did serious damage to many growers in Reading and Wakefield. The hailstones were as large as three inches in diameter and almost wrecked a number of greenhouses, besides breaking hundreds of plate glass and other windows. John W. Foote had about one-half of his glass broken and he and his assistants, who were busy planting carnations at the time, had to take refuge below the benches to escape the showers of broken glass. John Cox, F. E. Emery, J. W. Webster and John Winston all lost a lot of glass.

Harry A. Benwell, son of T. J. Benwell, of A. H. Hews & Co., who has been at the Mexican border as correspondent, and Captain Harold J. Patten, son of M. A. Patten, of Tewksbury, are among those who have arrived home this week from Texas.

Visitors last week included Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.; M. Fuld and W. A. Sperling, New York; T. A. Havemeyer, I. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.; A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, O.; Frank Morton, Portland, Me.; H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H.; H. Youell, Syracuse, N. Y.; Prof. A. C. Beal, Ithaca, N. Y.; Madison C. Cooper, Calicum, N. Y.; Jacob Thomann, Rochester, N. Y.; E. M. Smith, East Hartford, Conn.

A. G. Pembroke, of the Boston Flower Exchange, is away on a fortnight's vacation. George H. Noyes, of the same market, is spending his vacation with Mrs. Noyes and family at Ipswich Little Neck, Ipswich, Mass.

Henry M. Robinson is enjoying a vacation at Green Harbor, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Chadwick, of Houlton, Me., were callers last week. Mr. Chadwick has an excellent florists' business in Maine's greatest potato-producing section, Aroostook county. He says the quality of flowers in the Boston markets is much superior to that seen in New York.

R. E. Lassman, Boston's octogenarian florist, is still hale and hearty. He told me August 12 that he puts in a good day's work daily and that he never felt better, although now 86 years of age. His son, with whom he lives, has accepted a position in Philadelphia and Mr. Lassman feels he must go with him. His friends here, who are numerous, will miss seeing his ever genial face.

The Boston Rose Co. is receiving fine shipments of summer Beauty roses from Scarborough, N. Y. At present they are not receiving any flowers from the Montgomery Co., but shipments will recommence in a few days.

At Welch's, 280 Devonshire street, business so far in August has shown a distinct improvement over July.

Philip L. Carbone is beginning to receive large consignments of Italian ware. Mr. Carbone was in Europe from February to July 1, and made extensive purchases, which include many novelties.

William H. Elliott is spending his annual vacation far from the beaten tracks of man, in the wilds of Maine.

B. Hammond Tracy, of Wenham, had a fete at his gladiolus farm August 10, which was largely attended by society people. In spite of somewhat unfavorable weather, a large sum was realized for a war-relief fund.

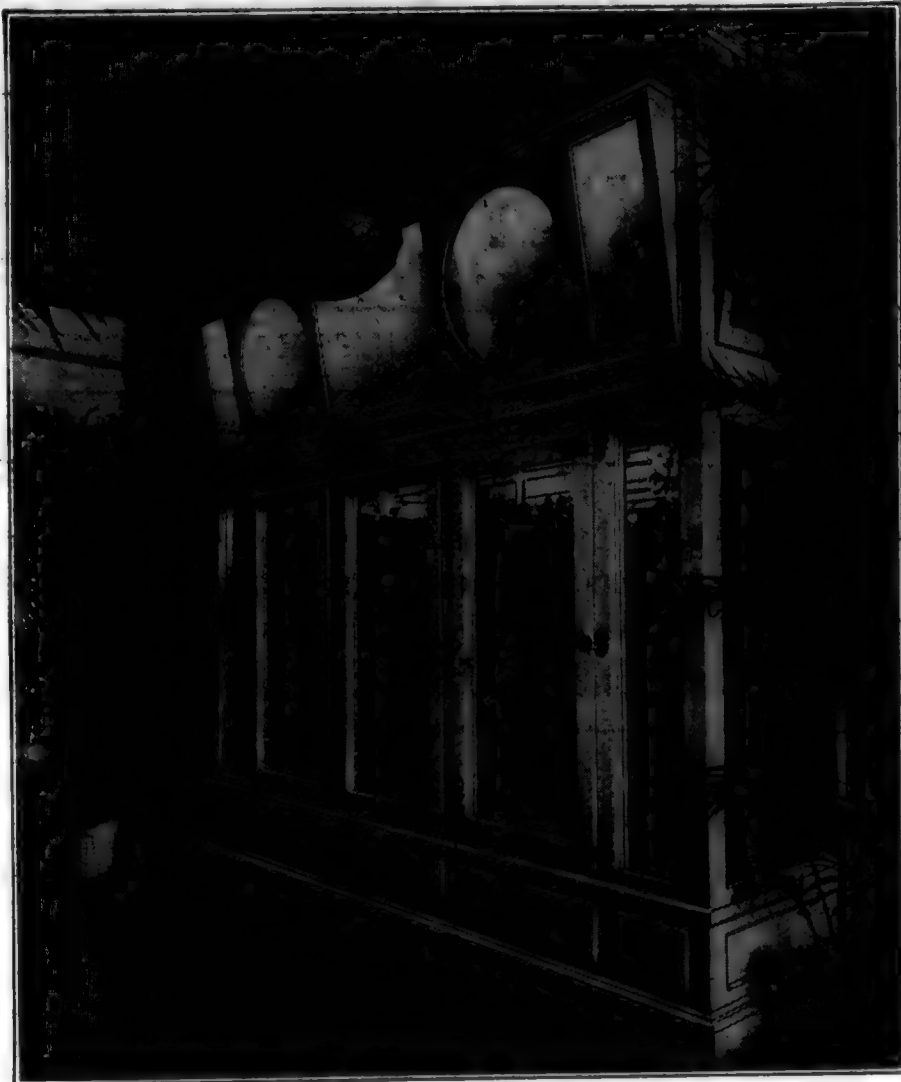

Florists' windows need some unusual attraction to rivet the public's attention in hot weather, but Penn's duck farm, which has now been running for a month, draws a bigger crowd than any other store on busy Tremont street. I have passed the store at least a dozen times and the front of the duck window has always been crowded.

The Market.

Asters now are the feature of the market, dividing honors with the stately spikes of gladioli, which are daily becoming more popular. The first crop of field asters was practically spoiled by the frequent rains, but the blooms sands of visitors through the gates who had already visited the show. The total gate receipts, representing over 100,000 paid admissions, are an indication of how wonderful the displays were. I know that this show will pass into history as the greatest flower show ever held on the American continent. Taking the exhibition from every point of view, I think that we must agree that the exhibits were far ahead of anything that has ever before been attempted.

The Convention Date.

At this point I wish to touch upon the advisability of holding our conventions on concurrent dates with the national flower shows; that is to say, I believe that every second year our annual conventions could be held in March or in April, or at such a time as we decide to have our national flower show. The old idea that it would be impossible to secure a good attendance at our conventions at any other date than August has not proved itself to be a fact. I observed with keen interest at the national flower show in Philadelphia that a great many representative men of our profession from all parts of the United States and Canada were present. It is just this material that is wanted at our national conventions. To me the national flower show had more of the convention spirit than many of the conventions that I have attended. At this show we all concentrated our thoughts on the work that is common among us and when we left we all felt that we had learned a great deal that would help us in the future. I believe that the spring is the logical time for our national shows. A great factor in making a national show a success in the spring time is the fact that all humanity awakens with a keen appreciation of the beautiful, after a long season when life has been practically dormant. Just as the flowers burst forth to welcome the sunshine of the spring, so the spirit of human nature bursts forth with a keen appreciation and eager desire to see and enjoy the beauties of nature.

There are many matters of interest that appertain to our work that are called to our attention at national flower shows. These matters could be taken up while we are in convention and I believe that the immediate benefits that would be derived by discussion, and through the comparison of notes, would be of far more benefit to us than the social programs which of late years have been characterizing our August conventions. There are undoubtedly from six to eight large cities in the United States where the national flower shows could be held and where they would be successful. With this number of cities to draw on, a number of years would naturally elapse before we would complete our circuit and no one city would ever be burdened with a succession of shows. In the smaller cities, where we could convene on alternate years, it should be the privilege of the host city to set the date for the convention, for when a man invites a guest to his home he aims to have it at its best; so the convention city should also have that privilege.

Before I leave the matter of conventions I want to say that I have noted in past years that there has been a decided tendency to indulge in extended social programs. This of course has been pleasant and duly appreciated, but it seems that we are in a measure losing the purpose for which we assemble. Our conventions are primarily for trade benefits and much of the time that is given to entertainment could be utilized for better purposes. Many of the smaller cities that would be glad to have a convention hesitate because of the expense of entertaining our members and this condition should not exist, for our purpose as a national society is the promotion of the great work that lies before us. I would, therefore, urge the board of directors to carefully weigh these matters: First, the joint sessions of the national flower show and the annual convention on every second year; second, the elimination of elaborate entertainment at annual conventions, and a strict adherence to matters that will be of trade benefit.

Convention Gardens.

Another instructive feature of our conventions is the Convention Garden. The merits of such displays have been well outlined by my predecessors, Theodore Wirth and Patrick Welch, and I heartily agree with them in their views.

Still another phase of our work toward which I would direct your attention is the promotion of an interest in children's gardens. We all know that the love of flowers is indicative of the highest form of civilization and it is the mission of every member of the Society of American Florists to help to instill the love of flowers and plant life in the hearts of the young. I do not think that we fully realize the extent of the influence toward the moral uplift and æsthetic development that is due to the love and appreciation of flowers and I would, therefore, urge that the society give its fullest support toward the promotion of the school gardens.

I hope that every member of the Society of American Florists has read with interest the excellent report of our school gardens committee of 1915. This committee must have stimulated a great interest in school gardens

It is, therefore, also an individual duty of the members of the Society of American Florists to aid in the promotion of school gardening by wisely administering encouragement and interest in the work of our children, for in the end this work of beautification is our chief vocation.

Permanent Secretaryship.

I would ask you to review with me also a matter that for the past months has been of considerable concern to me. I have noted that as our society grows the administrative work also assumes larger proportions. I believe that we are now large enough to have a secretary who devotes his entire time toward the furtherance of our interests. I believe that such a man should have no other business enterprises to occupy his mind. I would recommend that we make the office of secretary one with sufficient remuneration to keep a man who can devote his entire time toward the promotion of our interests. There will be no lack of work for such a man. He will be constantly occupied, promoting the interests of the society. Should the convention and national flower show fall on concurrent dates, our secretary would have the twofold duty of attending to matters appertaining to both the convention and the flower show. I wish, therefore, that the society would consider very carefully the expediency of adopting the above suggestion. This office should not be a temporary one and there should be some way of establishing its permanency. We all know that the work accomplished by our society is just as much, if not more, due to the efforts of the secretary as it is to the president or the board of directors, as the man holding this office acts as a helmsman and should be fully qualified to handle these affairs, and his mind should be on our work at all times. It seems to me that if this were the case, the long dormant period that our society passes through from the date of one convention to the date of another would become a period of activity and promotion. To be a successful society we must always be active. I do not wish my remarks to be construed as in any manner criticizing our present secretary. He has discharged the duties of his office with the greatest efficiency and fidelity. We have been fortunate to have had the services of so able a man as the present incumbent, John Young. I simply believe that it would be to the interest of all of us that this official, whoever he may be, should be in a position to devote his undivided attention to the society.

Mothers' Day.

At the last executive meeting of our society it was decided that a collection be made from our members from different parts of the country. The moneys obtained were to be used by Miss Jarvis for the furtherance of her good work—the promotion of Mothers' day. This act, I believe, was a good one, for Mothers' day has become universally recognized throughout the country and it is up to the florists to continue to advertise and promote the work that has been so well begun. However, while I myself approved such contributions to Miss Jarvis, I do not believe that such a method of securing funds for this work is effective or businesslike. As soon as the fund so accrued is depleted, the work will naturally discontinue and we, as a society, are here to perpetuate Mothers' day. I would, therefore, recommend that the Society of American Florists appoint a permanent committee, whose duty it will be to constantly stimulate interest in Mothers' day, and I would suggest that this committee look into the matter of securing a permanent fund to promote this work. As regards a suitable flower, emblematic of Mothers' day, I will say that considerable discussion was given to this matter at the convention in San Francisco. It was the consensus of opinion that the Society of American Florists should advocate the use of the white flower for the mother who has passed away and flowers of any color for the mother living.

Our Late Treasurer.

Before closing I wish to say a word of praise for the dear brother whom we have been unfortunate enough to lose in the last year. On Thursday, June 15, our beloved treasurer, William F. Kasting, was taken from us. Our society lost one of its most ardent champions and we all lost a very dear friend. It is not necessary for me to review all the good work that Mr. Kasting performed, as his work was made known to all of us. Although he had many duties to perform, he never begrudged the Society of American Florists his time or his services. Earnest, conscientious, foresighted, outspoken as an opponent, a character with a strong sense of the courage of his convictions, loyal as a friend and generous, Mr. Kasting's memory will always remain dear to every member of our society.

In conclusion, as president of this society, I want to thank the various committees who have worked with me during the year in carrying out their duties, and I want to thank every individual member who has shown an interest in our work, and who has given his support to our institution. There is no more charming art or occupation than that of horticulture; there is no vocation more conducive to human welfare than our own. Let us, therefore, unite our efforts toward making the Society of American Florists a greater and more glorious institution.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week we had some good rains, for which the growers were most grateful. The bulk of the outdoor stock has been badly scorched and the blossoms are inferior. Not only are the flowers small and short-stemmed, but there also is a scarcity of them. Asters, usually good at this time, are exceptionally poor, with many yellow centers, which render them unsalable. Carnations can hardly be called a substitute; they are small and the outer petals are badly burned. Gladioli are about the only good outdoor flowers now, and even they are scarce. Some good Rochester
White, Niagara, America and Mrs.
Francis King gladioli are arriving daily and much of the stock goes into funeral work. Gladioli are becoming more popular and sell well. The supply of roses is good and the daily shipments arrive in first-class condition. The quality is not quite up to the standard, but, considering all things, they are good enough. Some good Russell, Ward, Sunburst, Ophelia, My Maryland and Francis Scott Key roses are ready sellers.

Valley is not overplentiful and sweet peas can hardly be found. Candytuft and alyssum are not at all good. Golden Glow and yellow daisies move slowly.
Annual larkspurs and bachelor's buttons come in handy for baskets and vase work. Greens, with the exception of smilax, are plentiful. Little is

Various Notes.

Mrs. George L. Lick, of Cohocton, N. Y., is sending to some of the stores fine sweet peas, which sell easily.

Visitors to the trade last week were T. T. Fryer, of the Tajimi Co., New York; F. W. Pike, of the Kinney & Levan Co., Cleveland, O.; R. E. Blackshaw, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

George T. Boucher has purchased the entire stock of the Crosman Seed Store, of which the late W. T. Logan was proprietor. The Crosman business will be discontinued.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Vick are spending their vacation at Shazie landing, near Plattsburg, N. Y.

Charles Fry has leased his greenhouses for a year to another grower, who will continue to grow carnations.

Thomas Sullivan, with George B. Hart, is away on his vacation. He planned to take a trip on the Great Lakes.

George Cramer has been selected by the Rochester exposition committee to stage the flowers and designs at the exposition, which is to be held September 4 to 9.

Paul Campas has returned to the city much improved in health. He has closed his stand at the Four Corners until the fall.

Joseph Murphy is at Manitou beach for a while, enjoying the lake breezes and fishing.

George Pringle, of Salter's East Main street store, has returned from a Canadian trip. He made stops at Montreal, Quebec and Cape Cod, visiting friends in each place.

Mrs. M. J. Hallaner, of the Edwin C. Kaelber store, is away on a two weeks' vacation.

Jacob Thomann & Sons report business as rather slow. They have sustained a serious loss with their Rochester White gladioli. The early planting was done under much difficulty and the heavy rains badly rotted the bulbs, resulting in a poor early crop.

The condition of Fred Vick remains about the same, not varying one way or the other. We earnestly wish for his speedy recovery.

James Vick's Sons were much pleased with the recent rains and they say that the crops are much better. The hot, dry spell injured the plants and held them back considerably. The early asters are in bloom, but the late ones are not showing any buds. They have a greater acreage this year and a wonderful display is promised in the near future. This concern is only too willing to have visitors go over their farm, and thousands indulge this privilege annually.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been quieter during the last two weeks. Stock has been scarce, especially outdoor stock, which has suffered greatly during the extremely hot weather. Those who were unable to give plenty of water lost their crops.
Gladioli were scarce last week, but are more plentiful at this writing. Asters are few and those that arrive bring a good price. The aster crops around here are about a total failure and many of the growers declare they will not try them again. Snapdragons are about done for and there is little prospect for other outdoor flowers. The new crops of carnations surely will be welcomed when they come.

Many of the growers have finished planting, and it will not be long before they start cutting shorts. Roses are holding up nicely and the stock is good.
At times there is hardly enough to go the rounds, but as a rule the supply is about equal to the demand. Beauties are scarce, with the demand light. The rose stock is coming along nicely for the winter crops and mums are looking well. The plantings will average about the same as last season's.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Spokane, Wash.—The store of the Hoyt Bros. Co., on Post street, is being remodeled at a cost of $2,000. The removal of an elevator shaft and partitions will give the Hoyt store 170 square feet additional space.

San Rafael, Cal.—A well dressed middle-aged man, with red-rimmed eyes, recently purchased a wreath from Richard Lohrmann for $9, tendering in payment a check for $21. Mr. Lohrmann gave the stranger $12 in change. A day later the check proved a forgery. Beware of the "weeping" forger!

Hillsboro, Ore.—Outdoor crops in this section of Oregon are most satisfactory, according to W. H. Morton, manager of the Hillsboro Plant & Flower Garden, who recently returned from a vacation in the neighborhood of Mount Hood, where appetizing brook trout and bear meat are spread before the strenuous vacationist.

Tacoma, Wash.—At a recent meeting of the Tacoma Dahlia Society plans were completed and committees named for the sixth annual dahlia show of the society, to be held September 8 and 9. The dates were changed a week ahead of the dates named at a previous meeting because they were found to conflict with those of the western Washington fair. Good prizes are offered in the professional classes.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Another week of dull business, with flowers of summer quality, has to be chronicled. There is little to add to or subtract from what has been already said, unless it is that the indoor roses are even poorer and thinner than at last report. But the retailers are doing their utmost to draw trade by showy and tasteful windows and attractive stores. Mention should be made of a new giant centaurea of a pale lavender hue, which is decidedly a winner. In plants we have a few gloxinias and some pretty little stock of Chatelaine begonias, besides the usual run of palms and ferns. Light blue delphiniums and the showy Minnie Burgle and Golden West dahlias are making a pretty display. Asters are a little better and gladioli are still in the running. Liliun rubrum also makes a good showing.

Various Notes.

Albert Beverley, of the Mission Oak Nursery, Santa Barbara, made a flying trip to this city last week, driving from the northern city. He brought news of the death of Stanley Davis, gardener on the Moore estate, at Montecito. He also reports business as fairly good in Santa Barbara.

Hunter Graham, of the force of J. W. Wolters, has just returned from his vacation, spent in San Diego, whither he braved the dangers of the exposition trail in his machine.

George Walther, of Chicago, joined his family here last week and they were all enjoying a visit to the beach here as guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. Hills, when their youngest daughter, a little tot of truly narrow escape. Mr. Walther intends to return to Chicago this week.

W. Wern is evidently enjoying a fine vacation, as indicated by photographs of the beautiful northern country through which he is driving, which he is mailing home to his friends. They make us feel envious.

George Smith is breaking out in a fresh place—this time as a raiser of new gladioli. A seedling shown in the store is a truly magnificent thing, with a ground color a shade lighter than that of America and deep scarlet blotches. When asked about a name for it he said, "Wait until after the presidential election."

In last week's note on the monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society I neglected to mention the excellent paper on "Baby Roses," by J. Whitehead, of the H. W. Turner force at Montebello. As might have been expected from so practical a grower, this paper was full of meat and was much enjoyed by all. Mr. Whitehead, it should be noted, was the discoverer of the rose September Morn, he having found the sport in one of his benches of Prima Donna. From an extremely small and apparently hopeless piece of wood, three plants of this now famous rose were raised and these were the ancestors of the many thousands of plants of the variety afterward disseminated from Montebello.

Harry Sealey, of Lowell, Ariz., has been in the city on a visit and he recounts the fact that, with a friend, he was standing within a short distance of the bomb that was exploded during the preparedness parade in San Francisco, but both of them, fortunately, escaped without injury.

Business is described by the L. A. Floral Co. as excellent for the season. Miss Sperry, sister of Fred Sperry, manager of this firm, is going east this week on a visit.

The cool summer has been fine for the foothill gardens and a short visit to the Bradbury place, at Duarte, was exceedingly interesting. In the stove house John Robertson has made a great improvement in the plants. Large, old, leggy specimens of choice philodendrons, ficuses, anthuriums and other plants have been cut off and lowered and are making splendid progress. Choice ferns, fancy-leaved caladiums, dracaenas, etc., all show the care that has been bestowed on them by this clever gardener and the whole place is greatly improved. A notable feature here is the great clumps, ten feet or more across, of the stag-horn fern, or platycerium, which grows in the eucalyptus trees here like immense bushes of mistletoe. A shady position and the moist atmosphere caused by near-by sprinklers presumably produce the vigorous growth.

Frank Lichtenberg manages to get some of the best of the funeral work all the time and has again had several of the blankets to make that Bert Bateman handles so well. J. Gordon is settling down here and getting quite at home in the new location.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

Asters continue to overshadow practically everything else in the market, as there is an enormous cut, consisting largely of good stock. The flowers find favor for their actual merit, and also for their cheapness. While their competition hurts other stock for the moment, the fact that more people are getting the habit of buying flowers is some consolation. The worst feature is the quantity that is sold by peddlers.

In general, August is keeping up its reputation as one of the dullest months of the year, with counter trade nothing extra and only a few funerals to break the monotony. Dahlias are fine and becoming more plentiful all the time. Some stores are featuring them prominently, but it is hard to place them among the really popular items as cut flowers. Gladioli still are in liberal supply, but they receive little attention. Liliun tigrinum is beginning to come in and a few growers are showing a large cut of rubrum, which has fallen rather sharply in price, though sales are fairly large. Sweet peas and carnations are practically off crop and they find a limited sale. Zinnias are a rather prominent feature, with an abundance of fine stock, and scabiosas remain fairly popular. Otherwise little may be said of the outdoor summer stock, except that it is plentiful and cheap. A great deal of statice has been cured for winter use.

Roses are limited as to both supply and demand, the few growers who still have a good cut finding the movement rather slow, though Russell still has a good sale. The cut of mums is increasing right along and Monrovia, Golden Glow and October Frost are included in current offerings. There is little demand as yet and they look incongruous beside the summer stock. A little valley is seen, but there are practically no orchids or gardenias. Pot stock includes plenty of good primulas and some exceptionally fine begonias and cockscomb.

Horticultural Society Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held on the evening of August 5, with most of the officers and a good crowd of members present. J. E. Webb, secretary of the Richard Diener Co., was admitted to membership. D. Raymond, reporting for the field day committee, announced arrangements for a visit to the Garden City Pottery Co. plant at San Jose, September 10, and said that the company would serve refreshments, all members and their families being invited. The offer was accepted with a vote of thanks. Reporting for the picnic committee, Mr. Raymond stated that the event was most successful, both socially and financially, all expenses being covered, though he did not have a detailed report. He was given a vote of thanks for his efforts in engineering the affair and Ex-president H. Plath made a short speech of congratulation on the occasion, which was heartily concurred in.

Reporting for the flower show committee, Mr. Plath said it had been decided to hold a dahlia show in conjunction with the California Dahlia Society—not the Dahlia Growers' Association—and that application had been made for a hall in the municipal auditorium, for October 3 and 4. A. J. Rossi, who had been asked to look into the matter of the exposition medal awards, explained the delay in giving out the medals and said the distribution will soon be made. It was found necessary to elect a new trustee of the society. A special election will be held at the next meeting.

The evening's exhibits were notable. Richard Diener had thirty vases of seedling gladioli, all developed during the last three years. The flowers were not at their best, however, and were only awarded eighty-five points. He also exhibited, not for competition, a new hybrid petunia with a large and finely colored bloom. F. Pelicano had a vase of two blooms and two buds of his prize-winning exposition seedling dahlia, not yet named, flame-colored and eight to nine inches in diameter, which took ninety-five points. F. Burns, of San Rafael, showed blooms of Flamingo and H. Mairs dahlias, with four new 1916 seedlings, some of them showing good qualities, which were awarded eighty-five points.

Various Notes.

hibit of F. Pelicano's dahlias in their window last week, with several of the cups to be awarded at the California Dahlia Growers' Association show as part of the attraction. Many standard varieties were shown, with the exposition seedling as the central attraction. This seedling is considered one of the finest that have lately appeared, these particular blooms being over ten inches in diameter, of a fine bronze and flame color and with a strong, healthy stem. The exhibit kept a crowd in front of the store all day. James Keegan has returned from a vacation in southern California, where he took in the San Diego exposition and made a jaunt over to Tia Juana. They do say that he tried to join the Mescal Club, and came near getting shot.

Another recent visitor to Tia Juana was L. Piccetti, manager of the seed and flower department of the Emporium, who was ahead several hundred pesos at one time during his stay—but they wouldn't let him get away with it. After a fortnight in Los Angeles and San Diego, he spent another two weeks on the way home, visiting every store and nursery of importance from San Francisco south along the coast. He says the bay district "has got 'em all skinned."

C. Kooyman is getting a nice house of American Beauties started in preparation for the busy season. He is busily shipping freesia bulbs, for which he has taken all the orders he can handle.

A number of local florists were among the guests August 6 at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Avansino, at Fairfax, the occasion being their eleventh wedding anniversary.

Avansino Bros., formerly largely interested in the Fairmont Floral Co., who sold out some time ago to the MacRorie-McLaren Co., plan to open a new store about the middle of September at 182 Geary street, opposite the City of Paris department store. They are sparing no expense in fitting the quarters up and expect to have an establishment second to none. They have both been in the business many years and with their popularity a successful business is fairly assured.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in a fair cut of the new Tipperary rose, but J. A. Axell says they are doing better with Ward, which seems to be preferred by the local trade.

Daniel MacRorie, president of the S. A. F., left the first of the week for the convention at Houston.

H. Loudon, a gardener for the MacRorie-McLaren Co., was probably fatally injured at San Mateo August 8, when his bicycle collided with an oil truck, a wheel of which passed over his chest.

D. Traversaro, with Pelicano, Rossi & Co., states that the marriage announcement recently made for him by overzealous friends was partially in error and has caused him some embarrassment. While he admits having definite aspirations in that direction, he says the great event is not likely to take place for a long time. S. H. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The heat wave that prevailed at eastern and southern points reached Portland the middle of last week, but no severe temperatures were reported. The demand for flowers for funerals has kept up well and business generally is about normal.

The Society Picnic.

Members of the Portland Floral Society, with their families, employees and friends, to the number of nearly 150, visited Schnoerr's park Sunday, August 6, and enjoyed the picnic arranged by the society's committee. Refreshments were furnished to all who came without family baskets. There were music and dancing in the pavilion.

Big boys, little boys, old boys, women and girls competed for prizes offered for the swiftest runners. Initiation ceremonies were held by the "Society of the Yellow Dog" and several new members were enrolled. The day was cool and perfect for complete enjoyment of such an outing.

E. J. Steele was skillful when throwing the horseshoes.

A. I. Gale won the old boys' race.

Clyde Lester, of Walla Walla, Wash., was a visitor.

Mrs. L. W. Scott and Mrs. Dossche brought extra large baskets and fed quite a crowd.

..... We were certainly pleased with the results secured from your Seed last year and florists who visited the University greenhouses said they were the finest sweet peas they had ever seen. They made an unusually strong growth and produced great quantities of blooms.

I have received over 1000 such testimonials inside of ten months.

WARNING:—There are or will be advertised many so-called new Winter Spencers. I have seen many new names on the Exhibition tables, but by careful examination all were identical with my older Winter Orchid, years in commerce, excepting the Yarrowa. pump, containing an air chamber and connected with an engine and pump jack, at the lower spring, to pump water to the cistern. I mean one of those pumps which are run either by hand or by some other form of power.

Can I attach a pipe line from the lower spring to the line at the greenhouse and thus pump water to the cistern? Would there be force enough from a small engine to water directly from the pump at the lower spring, by shutting the line leading to the cistern? In case there is enough of a water supply from the upper spring, can I locate an engine and pump at the greenhouse to give more force in watering, so as to save time? I want a continuous pressure. What kind of small pump would give best results?

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Formosa lily bulbs so far inspected are of unusually good quality this year.

THE Paper Whites are proving to be largely twelve to thirteen centimeter, but the quality other than size seems to be good.

DURING the 1915 fiscal year grass and other seeds to the value of $22,420 were imported from Glasgow, Scotland, against $20,875 in 1914, according to a report of the U. S. consul there.

A. H. SMITH, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, leaves for Mackinac, Mich., August 19, for a three weeks' rest at the Grand hotel. He will be accompanied by his wife.

WITH Holland bulbs shut out by the government, the trade in England concludes that, except for hyacinths, Great Britain can produce all the bulbs that are needed there. Can not America do as much?

CANNERS' costs are higher this season than ever before, and crops are backward, but most packers expect prices to be correspondingly high. Conditions seem to indicate that next winter there will be an unusually good demand for seeds of canners' varieties.

WHEN the British government prohibited bringing Dutch bulbs into England this season it put certain Englishmen in trouble, for they own bulb-growing establishments in Holland. But the authorities have stated positively that these bulbs shall stay out along with the others.

THE men who offered low prices on French bulbs to secure an order for Dutch stock, in some cases now are having the courtesy to notify the customer that the Paper Whites can not be shipped; but in most instances they say not a word, leaving the buyer to guess where he is at.

THERE was only a small crop and a stiff market for pickles last season, but at the recent Chicago convention of the National Pickle Packers' Association no increase in acreage could be reported, as the increase in northern Indiana and southern Wisconsin is offset by decreases in northern Wisconsin and Michigan. William Ballinger, of Keokuk, Ia., was elected president of the association.

THE 1917 catalogues will cost more than any previous editions. The greatest increase is on paper, which has doubled in price and on the whole is not so good quality, but halftones are much higher and electrotypes and all other printing costs are up. The trade can count on the 1917 books costing fifty per cent more than in 1916. It is an item of tens of thousands of dollars to the big houses.

REPORT comes from S. F. Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who has been making a tour through the western and coast country, looking over the seed crops, that in some sections the bean crops are not as good as they might be. The chief trouble seems to be lack of water. Though by no means heavy, the Montana pea crop is good.

THE government's experiments in bulb growing in the state of Washington now have been carried on for a number of years. It seems to have been demonstrated that first-class stock can be grown, but that there are commercial possibilities has not been made apparent. Why has no one gone into the business for profit?

be considered unfit for seeding purposes when they contain fifty per cent or more of live pure seed."

This amendment, of so great interest to seedsmen and the purchasers of seeds, was suddenly offered by the Senate committee on agriculture and forestry to the Senate while considering the agricultural appropriation bill. The Senate agricultural committee adopted this amendment without notice or the granting of any hearing to those interested in this important matter. There was no opportunity given to object to this amendment in the Senate, except by raising the point of order against the provision as new legislation, and, of course, such proceeding was impossible. Prompt and strenuous opposition to this inconsiderate action of the Senate was made to the conferees of the Senate and House, but these eight gentlemen decided the case.

BERMUDA ONION SEED.

Secretary of Agriculture Houston has interested himself in the Bermuda onion seed situation, and August 3 announced that Bermuda onion seed of better quality than that of the last few seasons should be available for American growers this year, according to reports made by consular agents in the Canary Islands a month in advance of the harvest, which is now in progress. Practically the entire supply of seed of this type of onion used in the United States is grown on these islands.

One of the unusual features of the present crop, it was stated in the report, is a decided increase in the amount of seed of the choice, expensive wax or white onion. The crop of canary or yellow onion seed had suffered greatly, however, because of the winter droughts, and showed a loss estimated at from forty to fifty per cent. The less sought red seed also suffered, but to a smaller degree than the yellow.

The crop of Canary Island onion seed of all varieties for 1915 practically was exhausted, it is declared, and farmers therefore will run less risk of receiving seed in which old stock has been mixed. It is suggested, however, that American buyers should be careful to deal with firms known to be reliable.

Factors in determining the price of onion seed this season, in addition to the condition of the crop already mentioned, include a decrease in the demand from Argentina and Cuba and an increase in freight rates. The seed will probably reach the United States over freight routes somewhat different from those made use of in the past. Delays in transshipment by way of England last year have led to abandonment of that route to a considerable extent. The bulk of the crop, it is thought, will be routed by way of Porto Rico to New Orleans or via Havana to New York. Altogether it seemed probable at the time the report was made that the cost of Bermuda onion seed in America should be somewhat lower this year.

The secretary's information confirms that which has previously appeared in The Review.

FRENCH BULB RECEIPTS.

As reported in last week's Review, the first imports of the 1916 crop of French bulbs arrived at New York August 2 on board two steamers from Marseilles, the manifests of the two vessels showing that 2,343 cases constituted the initial shipments of the year. Three days later the steamer Harpagus, from Marseilles, arrived and discharged 3,583 cases, bringing the total for the week and to date to 5,926. French bulbs usually come in three or four large batches, followed for a month or so by small, occasional shipments. The Harpagus shipment was consigned as follows, according to its manifest on file at the New York customhouse:

ADULTERATED REDTOP.

In a report approved by the department July 31, W. A. Taylor, chief of the bureau of plant industry, says:

"Seed of redbot was secured during the calendar year 1915 in the open market, in accordance with the following paragraph in the act of Congress making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture:

Where such samples (seeds of grasses, clover, or alfalfa and lawn grass seeds secured in the open market) are found to be adulterated or misbranded, the results of the tests shall be published, together with the names of the persons by whom the seeds were offered for sale.

"In carrying out the provisions of this act, 620 samples of redbot seed were secured and analyses made under the direction of E. Brown, botanist in charge of the seed laboratory, bureau of plant industry, and publication is here made of the analyses of the samples found to be adulterated or misbranded, together with the names of the seedsmen by whom they were sold or offered for sale.

"Of the 620 samples obtained as redbot seed, 193, or over thirty-one per cent, were found to be adulterated or misbranded through being mixtures of redbot and timothy seed. When redbot seed was last collected, in 1913, less than twenty per cent of the samples were found to be adulterated or misbranded. During the spring of 1915 there was a difference of 25 cents or more per pound between the price of the best grades of redbot and timothy seed. This unusual difference in price, no doubt, accounts largely for the increased proportion of adulterated or misbranded redbot seed sold in 1915 as compared with that sold in 1913."

The table appended contains the names of some of the best known houses in the trade, including several that have

Thank goodness! I was rid of the bore for a while—he began making love to another girl. Friendship is one of the greatest blessings in this world, and we all need our good friends. A sympathetic, sincere friend under some circumstances, and a jolly, light-hearted friend, is the best medicine in the world for our dreary hearts at times.

And if any girl on earth loves her friends, I certainly do; but what a world of difference between friends and acquaintances! I will show you later on a few trying experiences of the business girl with such bores as the Nuisance.

M. B. FAXON, Seedsman, Foxborough, Massachusetts

president of the American Seed Trade Association is published as having sold redtop that contained only 25.46 per cent of genuine seed, with 16.65 per cent of timothy, 4.16 per cent of other seeds and 53.75 per cent of dirt and chaff, while the house of another ex-president supplied a sample containing 64.32 per cent of redtop, 13.04 per cent of timothy, 4.31 per cent of other seeds and 13.33 per cent of dirt and chaff. Among lesser known dealers the percentage of dirt and chaff rose as high as 74.71 and one concern had as little as 19.69 per cent of genuine seed in its sample.

No one who knows these men will doubt that they were wholly unaware of the character of the seed they were selling; it is merely a case of buying at too low a price and not testing the stock before shipment. But carelessness will be costly. The U. S. Department of Agriculture will test any sample and no seedsman can afford to neglect the opportunity to find out what he is buying and selling.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

The seedsmen of Providence, R. I., report a good season. Manager W. R. Brown, of the Providence Seed Co., believes that the supply of flower seeds that failed to arrive in time for this year will be doubly appreciated next season.

Willis S. Pino observes a gratifying increase in counter trade, the backbone of the business.

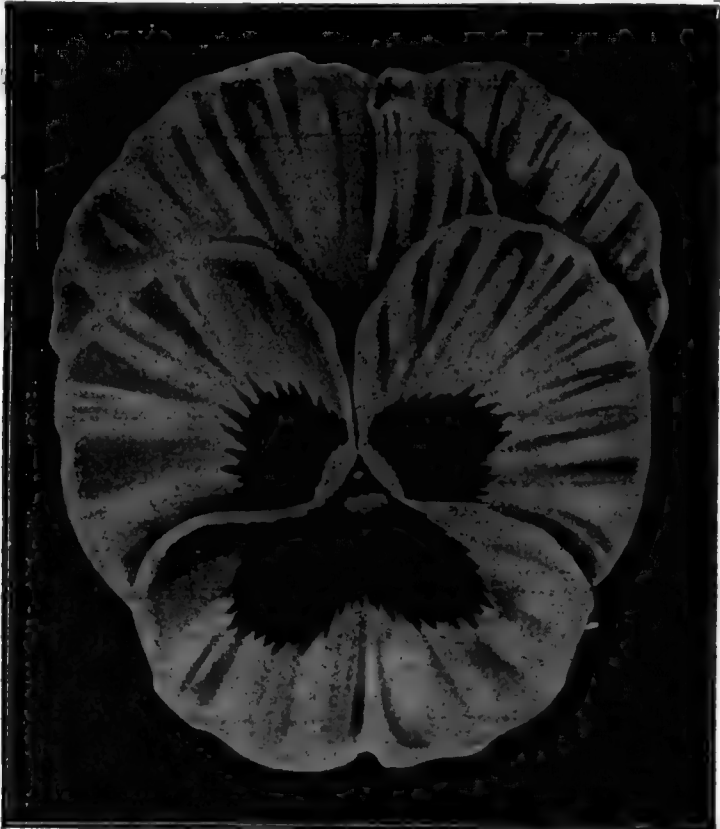

W. E. Barrett & Co. say the recent improvements made by the city have greatly benefited their business.

New Early Flowering Giant Pansies

Or Winter Blooming

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe Winters; and to bloom right on into the Summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for Autumn planting on graves, and for very early bedding, as well as for early cut flowers.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
 15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark blue eye.
 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
 18. MIXED.

The above four colors, with other shades and variations.
 Each color separate or mixed.

CHICAGO NOTES.

ness at Leavenworth, Kan., was in town last week. He has been engaged by the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., to represent its interests among the trade in the east. His family has been moved to Chicago.

Loyd E. Shirley, vice-president and general manager, of the Garland Mfg. Co., Des Plaines, Ill., reports an order for twelve more houses for Davis & Steiner for their Streator, Ill., establishment. Orders also are going through for greenhouses for Mrs. J. L. Hough- tling, Winnetka, Ill., and the Fahren- krug Nurseries and J. Gordon, of Chi- cago. Large orders have recently been received from the Joy Floral Co., Nash- ville, Tenn.; Levant Cole, Battle Creek, Mich., and the Las Vegas Floral Co., Las Vegas, N. M.

A trip to Lake Geneva, Wis., to spend the week end with his wife was enjoyed by Manager Philip C. Schupp, of the J. A. Budlong wholesale house.

Among those of the Poehlmann Bros. Co. who believe in taking late vaca- tions are Eric Paselk, of Morton Grove, who has gone motoring with his family, and James C. Butler, the city cashier, who has gone camping in the northern woods for two weeks.

With the departure of M. C. Gun- terberg for the S. A. F. convention, John Sinner, of Sinner Bros., has little choice as to what he will do, for neces- sity decrees that he remain in the store no matter how tempting work in the greenhouses may appear.

Visitors.

Charles Keller, of Detroit, arrived August 14, in quest of Mrs. Keller, who has been visiting relatives here for three weeks. They are former Chi- cagoans who are prospering in the auto- mobile town.

RAINBOW (many bright colors) FREESIAS

Our crop of bulbs grown in California now is ready for delivery, and the bulbs are of exceptional quality, ranging in size from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. The mixture offered includes several shades of yellow, orange, lavender and pink, all harmonizing with each other when bunched together.

Rainbow Freesias are great money-makers for all florists, whether they grow for their own retail trade or for the wholesale market. Splendid sellers at top prices. Moreover, the habit of plant is branching, each bulb giving two to three flower spikes with stems long enough for all floral purposes.

$5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000; $187.50 for 5000.

(Note.—Because of the branching habit, Rainbow freesia will give twice to three times as many flowers per bulb as will Purity or refracta alba.)

Every jobber and catalogue house that has a trade calling for high-class novelties should write at once for terms on Rainbow. Freesia bulb growers write for prices on planting stock (bulblets).

By October you will have cut the early mums and vacant space will be accumulating. August is THE month in which to start snap seedlings to follow mums. So get busy and its flower market, piloted by Miss Marguerite McNulty, of the Peter Reinberg office. Next week they will terminate a pleasant visit and return to the south.

A visitor on the market this week was A. Hare, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., Milwaukee.

Members of the trade were visited this week by Mr. Forber, of Forber & Bird, Davenport, Ia.

Miss B. Carlson, of the Mullanphy Florists, St. Louis, Mo., visited the market this week.

A visitor in the market this week was Robert Blake, of the Mrs. J. B. Freeman establishment, Toledo, O.

Tom Best, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., and family passed through the city this week on their way home from a trip to Niagara Falls.

A. Priggooris, of the Alpha Floral Co., Lansing, Mich., is spending a few days in the city, visiting friends on the market.

MUNCIE, IND.

Frank and Harry Fleeger, of the Williams & Clark Floral Co., and E. G. Baker, of Miller's Greenhouses, have returned from a week's fishing at James lake.

Two of Muncie's florists had exhibits at the Muncie fair, August 8 to 11. Miller's Greenhouses took first premium for decorative plants and first for cut flowers, and the South Side Greenhouses took second for decorative plants.

Simon Humfeld, one of Muncie's veteran florists, spends quite a bit of his time riding around in his car.

Business of late has not been rushing, but funeral work will keep things moving.

The Riverside Floral Co. has been cutting a fine lot of asters. This company has benched all its young carnation plants.

The Williams & Clark Floral Co. is refilling its benches for carnations and mums.

F.

Albion, N. Y.—R. Mulberry, superintendent of the Burt Olney Canning Co., states that the concern has gone out of the flower business "for the present" and intends using its greenhouses for other purposes.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and General Manager, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

THE nursery trade will have to pay more for its burlap next season; prices are rising steadily.

J. WILKINSON ELLIOTT, of the Elliott Nursery Co., Pittsburgh, is visiting his sources of supply in Holland.

WILLIAM PITKIN is president of the Rochester Exposition, which holds its annual industrial and agricultural fair this year September 4 to 9.

A GENERAL nursery business has been organized at Portland, Me., under the title of Jordan-Blanchard Nursery Co., and has been incorporated at $10,000. The following are given as the incorporators: Harold Jordan, C. A. Jordan, A. F. Jordan, C. W. Barber, S. W. Jordan, H. C. Blanchard and C. S. Blanchard.

A NUMBER of nurserymen took part in the recent thirtieth annual meeting of the Texas State Horticultural Society, at College Station. Papers were read by E. W. Kirkpatrick, J. M. Ramsey and John S. Kerr. Mr. Kerr was elected a member of the executive committee for the farmers, and Eltweed Pomeroy, of Donna, Tex., was chosen vice-president of the society.

MUST NOT CHANGE MARKS.

When an American importer of nursery stock ships the original cases to his customer he must not remove the foreign marks and certificates, substituting his own, unless he has in fact had the stock inspected and certificated by his own state entomologist.

The following is a letter on the subject from the Federal Horticultural Board to its correspondents:

The state inspector of Pennsylvania, in reporting on two cases of imported nursery stock recently shipped to the Fairmount Park Commission, Philadelphia, Pa., by the _____ Co., New York, N. Y., advised that all foreign card markings and certifications had been removed from the cases, and that the business shipping card of the _____ Co. had been substituted. This card bears the following printed statement:

"This is to certify that the nursery stock herein has been duly examined in compliance with the inspection laws and was found to be apparently free in all respects from any contagious or infectious plant disease, or the San Jose scale, or other dangerously injurious insect pest or pests."

Inasmuch as this stock had not been inspected by the New York state inspector before shipment, this action on the part of the _____ Co. was a direct violation of the plant quarantine act and of the regulations prescribed thereunder. This company has been duly warned and it promised not to repeat the offense.

If any instances of this kind come to your attention, we shall be glad to have a full report, together with the shipping card of the company concerned, in order that proper action may be taken. So far as we are aware, the _____ Co. is the only firm that has been guilty of a violation of this kind.

procure. There are fine looking Easter lilies and rubrums on the market now. These are much in demand and are making good prices. Good roses now are hard to obtain, and sweet peas are poor and quite scarce. Asters are coming in, but not in large quantities, as is usual. They are small and short-stemmed. Fine gladioli are in splendid variety and sell well. The price of valley is high and this item is extremely hard to obtain. Garden flowers, such as gaillardias, daisies, delphiniums and coreopsis, are still in evidence.

There is a splendid lot of Boston ferns, cyclamens, primulas and chrysanthemums coming in for the fall. The greenhouse men are working like bees

PEONY ROOTS

In comparing prices, note our strong divisions are 3 to 5 eyes.

We offer to the Trade, Strong Divisions, three to five eyes, of the following varieties of Peonies, guaranteed true to description, f. o. b. our station, at the prices named. Our stock is grown on land suitable for the development of fine roots and our large stock enables us to make a low price. No order taken for less than five of a kind. The following varieties offered subject to being unsold on receipt of order. Ask for descriptive catalogue of these and 70 other high-class varieties.

S. G. Harris, Tarrytown, N. Y.

Dear Sir.—Last October I received 75 to 100 Peony Divisions from you. I won't sing "Tell Me the Old Old Story" for you, but in the last ten years I have been Peony stung—harpooned and trimmed until I refuse to resent a raw deal on Peonies any more. I just quit. I now take that time to tell the man who has given me a square deal—"Shake, you are a gentleman and a scholar and sure earned your money."

Last year I bought from you and —. His plants were good and worth the price. Yours were large, looked better and were much heavier. This season not more than one-third of his had flowers. All of yours, but a few, had blooms, from one to five, many of which were very large. The boys made more than the price paid for the plants from the blooms sold from them Decoration Day. You sell the best plants for the money I ever saw. If I can arrange, I want to put in more this Fall.

Some Son of Bellial got him hence with the Peony catalogue you sent me. I will certainly thank you for a copy, as it was one of the few catalogues I wanted to keep. Men like you deserve the good will and patronage of decent people and I am glad I had the good fortune to deal with you.

Wishing you continued merited success, I am,

Yours truly,

This man bought 200 more last fall.

to get their stock in and have everything in readiness for fall business.

Various Notes.

W. H. Bofferding reports business as being good. He had large funeral orders last week.

The Lakewood Cemetery Association has a new manager for its greenhouses. Carl E. Taube, for many years manager of the Muskogee Carnation Co., and later of the Aurora Greenhouses, now is connected with the association. The Lakewood Cemetery greenhouses contain a fine stock of Easter lilies and work is being rushed to put in a large batch of carnation plants, ferns and winter plants.

George Oys, of the H. B. Whitted Co., left this week for a vacation. He will tour the northern part of Minnesota, stopping off at Crosby, Milltown and Milaca. Later Mr. Oys plans to take an extensive eastern journey, and a lake trip from Duluth to Buffalo.

Max Kaiser, of the Merriam Park Floral Co., is cutting fine rubrums. Mr. Kaiser always has a splendid stock and business is good. Energetic management cannot turn out any other way.

The Mazey Floral Co. last week did a good business. The store is artistically decorated and a fine lot of stock is always on hand.

William F. Holmes reports business as good. He has many large orders of various kinds, despite the quiet summer days, and he does considerable decorative work.

T. S. Lynes is busy as ever with funeral and wedding work.

Splendid displays have been made by Oscar Amundson and O. C. Swanson. Both had good business and turned out large quantities of design work.

E. M. P.

New Castle, Pa.—Vacations are the order of the day and month. F. J. Fischer, one of our "complete anglers," has gone to the Canadian fishing grounds and C. D. Hennon the other day returned from an extended automobile tour.

Lockport, N. Y.—Miss Alberta P. Brace, who makes a specialty of asters, but who grows many annual and perennial plants for summer cut flowers for market, has some quite unusual hollyhocks, including new colors. The seed brings double flowers and does not run single the next year, as most double varieties do from seed. Miss Brace plans to put the seed on the market next season.

The Market.

There has been a decided change in the weather since last week's report. It is much cooler and business has changed for the better. There is little stock available, except roses, gladioli, candytuft, swainsonas and a few peas.

Various Notes.

At a recent meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, E. A. Feters; vice-president, Albert J. Stahelin; secretary, Henry Forster; treasurer, Robert Rahaley.

J. F. Sullivan is getting ready to move to his new location, one block farther north, on Woodward avenue. He expects to open his store about September 8. H. S.

Arkansas City, Kan.—Two Iowans, L. E. Flindt and W. H. Magner, of Webster City and Boone, respectively, recently came to town and purchased the establishment of Smith & Smith, lock, stock and barrel. Flindt & Magner will supersede Smith & Smith as the title of the business.

Camden, N. Y.—The partnership of Ernest D. Brown, of Clinton, Conn., and Carl W. Brown, of this town, who have conducted a greenhouse business on Railroad street under the name of Brown Bros., has been dissolved. Ernest Brown has returned to Connecticut and Carl Brown has settled in Detroit, Mich.

The Home of the Thenanthos

This photograph was taken July 14, 1916.

THE Thenanthos is the best brilliant Scarlet Carnation in commerce today. Average size of bloom, 3½ inches; prolific, free and constant bloomer; entirely free from disease, never being troubled with rust or stem-rot; a first-class keeper. The odor is rich, spicy and enduring.

As the best seedling Carnation exhibited at the Chicago Grand Floral Festival, November, 1915, it was awarded the Bronze Medal and the Silver Cup.

We will disseminate Thenanthos January 1, 1917.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

J. M. Ward & Co., of Peabody, Mass., have passed through a prosperous season and are "touching up" their place. There is striking evidence of the pride taken by our confreres in beautifying their home surroundings and it is a delight to visit them, particularly now, when nature has been so lavish. The whole of New England is one big garden; never have I seen it looking gayer or more attractive to the thousands of tourists.

A. M. Davenport, of Watertown, Mass., is strong, as usual, on ferns. An extensive vegetable grower, supplying some of the best stock seen in the market and employing close to 100 hands, Mr. Davenport is a busy man.

John McKenzie, of North Cambridge, Mass., expects to resume the management of his greenhouses at the expiration of the present lease. "Store business and real estate investments are all right in their way, but I cannot resist the call of the hose," observed Mr. McKenzie.

The Taunton Greenhouses, at Taunton, Mass., are closed.

E. R. Lenk, of Arlington, Mass., observed that the cucumber crop was a decidedly profitable one this year, and even at the time of my visit the prices made him reluctant to clean out the houses to make way for chrysanthemums, which were being cared for in frames. A fine batch of Kentucky Wonder pole beans, with pods fully twelve inches long and quite snappy, was noted. Mr. Lenk predicts a big demand for these in the future.

Manager Dewar, of R. & J. Farquhar & Co., of Boston, believes that the substitution of the name Lilium regale for L. myriophyllum will tend to make their beautiful lily even more popular. A fine showing of the blooms was made in Penn's window during my sojourn in the city. Across the street was a grand lot of the old favorite, Lilium Omaha-Council Bluffs Picnic.

The most successful picnic in the history of the Omaha and Council Bluffs florists was held August 3. Heretofore the outings have been held in Omaha, but this year it was decided to favor the Bluffs, and Lake Manawa was chosen as the scene of the picnic. It was an ideal place and more than 200 came out and partook of the fun. That it was such a success is attributed mainly to the fact that the affair was run by the younger element of the Florists' Club. Too much praise and credit cannot be given Messrs. Gardner and Faulkner, who solicited donations from the employers to defray all the expenses of the picnic, and it goes without saying that they did their work well. All the greenhouses closed at 12 noon, while the stores remained open until 1 p. m. Games of all kinds were indulged in and at 6:30 everyone repaired to the boat house pavilion, where a fine supper was served. After the repast the women and children were furnished with tickets for all the amusements in the park. The bowling match for the men was called off on account of the heat.

The Prize-Winners.

Following is the list of athletic events and the winners:

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

There was little change in market conditions last week. The weather has been somewhat cooler and this section has had almost too much rain. There were several storms last week that rated as the worst in some time.

The crop of roses still is small, making this item quite scarce. Killarney roses are somewhat more plentiful, but white remains almost unobtainable. The quality is fine and prices are reasonable. There are few carnations in the market now, as the growers have almost finished throwing out the old plants, and the new stock is not yet ready. Asters are somewhat more plentiful than they have been, and the quality shows a marked improvement.

Valley remains extremely scarce, and it is hard to fill orders with any degree of satisfaction. Gladioli are fairly plentiful and are moving well, at good prices. On the whole, business is picking up to some extent and slowly coming back to normal.

Various Notes.

A. Hare returned from the northern part of the state August 12, and immediately left for Chicago, and, possibly, other cities in that direction to spend the remainder of his vacation.

Kirksville, Mo.—The Kirksville Floral Co., S. A. Berglund, proprietor, has moved its greenhouse business to a 20-acre site on North Franklin street. Another greenhouse, boiler room and office will be erected at the new location.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

NOT ENOUGH DATA IN INQUIRY

We have nine houses, each 15x125 and nine feet to the ridge. The north side, south side and ends contain glass, all except about three feet all around being wood. It is desired to change the heating system from hot water to steam, at the same time adding about 23,000 square feet of new glass in houses of the same type. Please state what size of boiler should be installed to care for the entire range. We shall use a common return tubular boiler.

F. C.—Miss.

It is not possible to give a definite reply to the question, since no intimation of the temperature desired is given. We are also in doubt regarding the height of glass in the walls, and are uncertain whether more than one house has glass in the walls. It would have been helpful, also, had the minimum outdoor winter temperature been stated.

Where there is no glass in the side walls we would use one 2-inch flow and four 1½-inch returns for 60 degrees and three returns for 50 degrees. In case there is more than three feet of glass in one wall we would put in an additional return. While the data are quite imperfect, we think that a 75-horsepower boiler will heat the range even after the addition has been made.

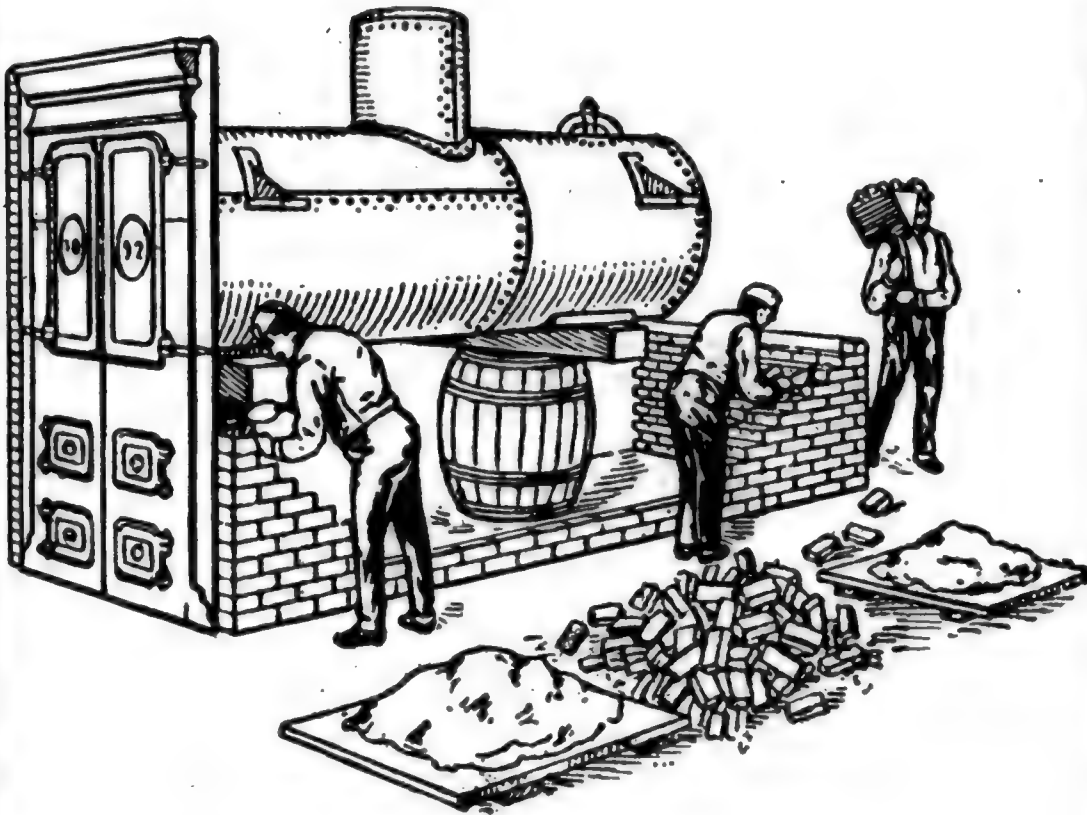

PIPING TWO NEW HOUSES.

I am building a greenhouse 26x100, with 6-foot side walls, each containing two feet of glass. The rafters are fourteen feet long and the height to the ridge is about sixteen feet. I expect to heat this house by means of two 3-inch overhead flows and the necessary 2-inch returns under the benches. How many returns will be needed to carry a temperature of 60 degrees? I have a gravity hot water heating system. Would it be satisfactory to place part of the pipes on the walls and part of them under the benches?

I am also building a house nine feet wide, at the north side of the larger house. It has a 4-foot wall on one side and a 6-foot wall on the other, with an uneven-span roof. How many runs of 2-inch pipe will be needed for 50 degrees in this house, using one flow from the other house to carry the water to the far end? The smaller house has no glass in the side walls.

L. G. B.—Ind.

The house described can be heated to 60 degrees by using fourteen 2-inch returns, in addition to two 3-inch flow pipes. Three or four of these returns may be carried on each of the walls and the others under the side benches. Whether it would be possible to carry any of the returns under the middle benches would be determined by the arrangement of the benches, walks, etc. Where returns are desired under the middle benches, it is advisable in a house requiring from 600 to 1,200 square feet of radiation to use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the third from three to six feet below the ridge.

To heat a house nine feet wide, without glass in the walls, four 2-inch return pipes will be needed.

ENDS OF HOUSE ARE COLD.

Will the editor of The Review's Heating Department give me some advice in regard to the system of piping in my greenhouse? It is piped for hot water. The house is 16x58, with three feet of brick and three feet of glass in the side walls. The height to the ridge is ten feet. The piping is all

Cut No. 1—Showing deep, narrow water ways directly over the hottest part of the fire.

Cut No. 2 — A rough sketch of the over-the-fire water ways, to emphasize in your mind their key hole shape.

Cut No. 3—Shows the secondary crown sheet at the right.

The Burnham's Secondary Crown Sheet a Great Economy Feature

LET'S get right down to bed-rock on the question of the Burnham's economies. Let's see what they actually are; and prove to each of ourselves that Burnham greenhouse boilers have some surprising economy construction features.

CROWN SHEET

Glance at cut Number One and you will see that running across the boiler, directly over the fire, are deep, narrow water ways, between which the flames, when hottest, come in direct contact. They form the crown sheet of the boiler. The fire comes against two sides and the bottom of these deep water ways, instantly giving to the water its greatest heat.

WHY KEY HOLE SHAPED

Now look at cut Number Two. It shows you the actual key hole shape of these same across-the-boiler water ways. You can see how narrow and deep they are; making it possible for them to carry a thin amount of water, that will heat quickly.

Their shape is based on exactly the same principle as a kitchen stove with a wide bottomed pan filled with but shallow water; heating so much quicker than a narrow bottomed kettle containing exactly the same amount, but deeper water.

It's just common every day kitchen sense, applied to a boiler.

RAPID CIRCULATION

Now another thing about the key hole shaped water ways. That increased size at the top gives ample room for expansion and rapid circulation—a point of no small importance.

So much, then, for the harnessing up of the hottest part of the fire. Now let's take a glance at what next happens to it, on its way to the chimney.

SECONDARY CROWN SHEET

Between each section on each side of the boiler, are flue openings, up which the fire goes, coming in contact with water ways on the sides and top.

Going up these side flues as it does, with considerable speed, it comes forcibly in contact with the water way at the very inside top of the boiler, which forms, as you now see, a secondary crown sheet.

With the water boiler, this secondary crown sheet gives an extra push to the water at a point where it is about to leave the boiler and go into the mains. It means increased circulation speed.

With the steam boiler, it means a hotter, drier steam.

This secondary crown sheet is one of the Burnham's important economy features.

BACK AND FORTH TRAVEL

After coming in contact with the secondary crown sheet, then starts that famous Burnham "3 Times back and forth fire travel" for which the boiler is so well known.

It's "that long fire travel that also has much to do with making the short coal bill."

Back and forth the hot gases travel until they reach the smoke box and chimney with only just enough heat left in them to produce the necessary draft.

There are several other Burnham economies well worth mentioning, but these are the big ones—the ones to keep in mind when some one tries to tell you that any other cast iron boiler can heat a greenhouse as economically as the Burnham Greenhouse Boiler can.

Railroads are crowded with business. Freights are slow. So order ahead of time, if you want your boiler on time.

TRAVIS ROCKER GRATES

For Greenhouse furnaces of all sizes and styles.
Installed without altering brick work or attaching to the fire front.

The shake lever is located inside the upper portion of the ashpit door.

They have the interlocking finger which forces open all the air spaces.

Air is admitted evenly through every opening.

You can keep your fire down thin as desired. They do not dump the cinders, but they grind them through.

They will not mix the fire and cinders together, which destroys the burning action of the fire.

They grip the cinders and grind them through without disturbing the bed of the fire.

Never use a poker in your fire. Never use a grate that will break the fire from top to bottom and roll it around, as this will cause large, hard cinders. Just stop and consider how cinders should be treated.

All firemen know that every time they disturb the cinders they are in trouble.

Firing on TRAVIS GRATES is a pleasure, because they require but little shaking.

The cinders are reduced in bulk, and he has much less to contend with than if he were using straight bar grates or wrongly constructed rocker grates.

WE HAVE THE SYSTEM.

Don't mix your fire and cinders together and expect the best results. Gently remove the cinders from below the fire until you get the required draft. Then you will see results that will convince you that firing is not so hard AFTER ALL.

Our only occupation is manufacturing rocker grates. For prices and full information give length and width of your grate surface.

under the benches, of which there are three. The main headers are in the center of the house and the piping is all 2-inch. This supplies all the heat in the center of the house, leaving the ends cold. The boiler is in a pit.

Enclosed you will find a sketch which shows the details of the piping and the connection with the expansion tank. There are six coils under the middle bench, the full length of the house. There are three coils under each side bench and four coils on each side wall. The heating contractor covered the main headers with asbestos, so as to keep the heat down in the center of the house.

There is nothing either in the description or in the accompanying sketch to show where the boiler is located, but since the boiler is eighty-eight feet from the main headers, which are in the center of the house, it would seem that it must be some fifty feet away from the house and probably at one end. The size and number of pipes required in a greenhouse will depend largely upon the temperature to be maintained, and we do not find any statement regarding it.

For 60 degrees, from 450 to 500 square feet of radiating surface will be needed and we would supply it by running three 2-inch overhead flow pipes from the end nearer the boiler to the farther end of the house, placing

Dear Sirs: I take pleasure in testifying to the merits of your Wilks Hot Water Heater No. 20, which I have had in use very nearly a year. When the thermometer showed 16 degrees below zero, it gave excellent satisfaction, heating both my greenhouses, 24x22 and 16x14, all right. I regard your Heater the best I have ever used.

S. WILKS MFG. CO.,

Dear Sirs: Yours of the 11th at hand. The Wilks Heater bought from you last fall has done finely. We burned coke and it has done just fine. By filling up the magazine about nine or ten o'clock and closing it up all around, we found a good fire in it by 7 a. m. The grate is one of the best arrangements we ever saw for an ordinary sized plant. It is one of the best Heaters I have ever seen.

using eleven returns for 60 degrees and seven for 50 degrees. Of the eleven returns, four could be upon each wall and under the side benches, while the remainder could be placed in the middle of the house. When seven returns are used, three could be under the middle bench and the others under the side benches.

The foregoing piping will give an even temperature in all parts of the house. A 4-inch pipe will answer for the main flow and the same size should be used for the main return. The expansion tank should be connected with the highest part of the system.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Glen Cove Wednesday evening, August 9, President James Macdonald presiding. The schedule of the coming dahlia show, which had been drawn up by the executive committee, was read by Robert Jones, chairman of the committee, and was favorably received. It lists sixty-three classes, covering exhibits of dahlias, roses, other outdoor flowers and vegetables; also a class for the best dinner table decoration. It was decided to adopt it as read. With only one or two exceptions, the classes are open to all for competition and all exhibitors will be welcomed.

Secretary Gibson still is receiving many offers of prizes for our chrysanthemum show and the outlook is most favorable for a successful exhibition.

John Ingraham, of Oyster Bay, staged a gorgeous collection of gladioli, for which he was awarded a certificate of culture and the thanks of the society. Harry Goodband was awarded first for twelve spikes of gladioli and first for twelve asters. John W. Everitt won first for six tomatoes. John Johnstone, Joseph Robinson and Thomas Twigg acted as judges.

By request Mr. Ingraham gave a talk on his exhibit of gladioli, in which he told of his method of culture and mentioned the varieties which he had found to be most suitable for the growing conditions on Long Island.

The Market.

Considering the extremely hot weather we have had for a month, business has been excellent. Flowers, however, have been scarce and of poor quality. Roses are small and do not keep long. The new crop of carnations is coming in and has to be used, even though the stems are short and the blooms small. Asters are on the market, but they are small. Some of the aster crops were a failure because of the dry, hot weather.

August 11 the dry spell was broken by heavy thunder showers and at the present writing, August 14, it still is raining. The late asters will be much better than the early ones, as the ground is becoming well soaked. Needless to say, everybody was delighted to see the rain.

Florists' Club's Picnic.

The Evansville Florists' Club held its first picnic August 19, at Silver Lake park. The day was ideal and there was

The Interior of One of the Benjamin Dorrance Greenhouses, Showing One of the "Detroit" Systems in the Boiler Room of the Greenhouse.

Are You Sure You've Stopped That Leak?

The hardest leak to find in business profits is the leak that you think you have plugged.

If you are still trying to cut down on running expense—and what manager or ambitious engineer does not want to do so?—this little talk may interest you.

We suppose you have installed a steam pump or some other method of handling the condensation in your boilers and steam lines. If you have not, this message will be of even more importance to you.

It takes considerable cost to raise to 212 degrees F. the amount of water circulating in the average steam system. A steam pump can return water only that hot to the boilers and it makes a big saving in coal, even tho' it does take considerable power to operate it.

But 212 degrees is not the highest temperature at which steam condenses under pressure in steam pipes. 330 to 340 degrees is nearer the point. A steam pump loses over one-third of the heat that has been put into the water (supposing 65 degrees the temperature of tap water), for it cannot handle water over 212 degrees.

The "Detroit" System for handling condensation will drain your steam pipes of condensation and put this condensation, even if it is 330 degrees F., back into the boiler. Figure up how much steam you are wasting now. How much coal does it represent? Don't you see that it will pay to replace your old apparatus with a "Detroit" System?

The "Detroit" System is absolutely automatic. It keeps the steam lines clear from the clogging effect of the condensation. It gives the engineer in charge more time to attend to his regular duties and it cuts down repair expense. Wouldn't you like to hear this story told a little more fully? "Watch Your Condensation"—Book No. 5-A is yours for the asking. (11)

BRANCHES EVERYWHERE.

Mr. Charles H. Allen, the well known florist of Floral Park, N. Y., sent in some information that may be of value to many of our readers:

As is well known in the Florists' trade, Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint is premier choice among florists for the protection of steam heating pipes, boiler fronts, and all metal, and even woodwork of a greenhouse.

The reason is that Dixon's Paint gives longest service and is more economical per year. Also the pigment sets up more mechanical action and does not injure the growth of flowers in any way.

We quote below Mr. Allen's recommendation of the work done by Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint around his greenhouse:

CHARLES H. ALLEN
FLORAL PARK, N. Y.

I used Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint on my hot water pipes sixteen (16) years ago, and the pipes are still free from rust. I require some more for other pipes, and of course shall use only Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint, as it is by far the most serviceable for the purpose.

(Signed) Yours very truly,
CHARLES H. ALLEN, Florist.

By writing to the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co., in Jersey City, N. J., information about the many places around a greenhouse that Dixon's Silica-Graphite Paint can be used will be obtained.

plenty to eat and drink for the seventy-five picnickers. Everything was furnished by the club, with the exception of some fine grapes, which were donated by Theodore Kuebler, and one or two other articles by others. It was one day in the year on which the women did not have to work; the male members of the club did all the work. Karl Zeidler prepared the meals and there can be no better cook in Evansville, as the burgo soup was great and the chicken was fried in grand style.

Karl Zeidler brought his phonograph to furnish the music for dancing. Old and young enjoyed themselves greatly. The ball game in the afternoon was won by Captain Carl Elsperrmann's team. Score, 16-to 15; umpire, Fred Chapman. The winners in the four races were as follows.

Married women's race—Mrs. Elsie Land.
Little girls' race—Irene Smidt.
Boys' race—James Niednagel.
Men's race—Theodore Elsperrmann.

The out-of-town guests were C. A. Morgan and family, of Henderson, Ky.; James A. Blackburn and family, of Mount Vernon, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schultz, of Vincennes, Ind.; W. C. Currie, of the Alfred Struck Co., Louisville, Ky.; Ernest Lentz, his mother and sister, of Boonville, Ind., and Otto Kuebler and family, of Newburg, Ind. Messrs. Morgan, Blackburn and Schultz made short talks and thanked the club for its invitation to them.

The next monthly meeting of the club will be held September 13, at the residence of Ernest Lentz, of Boonville.

Various Notes.

Miss Nellie Goodge has been busy with funeral work. Although not strong, she attended the picnic and enjoyed herself immensely.

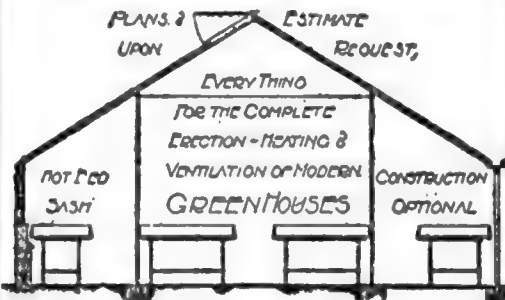

J. C. Elsperrmann's health is poor and he was unable to attend the picnic. It would have been great if he and Mrs. Elsperrmann could have been there, as the picnic day was the thirty-fourth anniversary of their marriage.

Royston & Fenton have a nice lot of 2-inch smilax and Coleus Brilliancy.

George Blackman and family have returned from a trip to Atlantic City and other eastern points. Edward Blackman and family have returned from a boat trip up the Ohio river to Cincinnati.

Paul Halbrooks, of Newark, O., made a short visit here with his father and mother. He came through in his machine after an extensive trip through the east, covering about 2,800 miles without any accidents whatever.

WE GUARANTEE Metropolitan Boilers

To Do Their Work Consuming Less Fuel Than Any Other Boiler.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—

Smooth, perfect finished castings.

Push nipple connections.

Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.

Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task.

Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.

Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.

They are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting. And above all, they cost less and are cheaper to operate than any other.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

The Market.

There is little change in market conditions. Home-grown stock has shortened considerably, but shipments from out of town have been heavier than usual. The hot, dry weather continues. Gladioli, lilies and asters are of fair quality. These are the only flowers at present, except a few open roses. Business has been better than is expected for this time of year, consisting chiefly of funeral work.

Various Notes.

Frank L. Barnes, son of W. J. Barnes, was married last week to Miss Stella M. Sheppard.

The Alpha Floral Co. was busy last week. Howard Bartlow and Miss Ellen Collins, of this concern, now are on vacation trips.

Arthur Newell says that business is good and that the elm canoes for plants are ready sellers. Miss Kline, book-keeper, is on her vacation.

The Rosery had another week of good funeral work. It was the best week of funeral work the store ever had during the summer months.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. has been busy with a number of out-of-town funeral orders. Stock was scarce. Glen Parker and his family left August 12 for an extended automobile trip through Missouri, Iowa and Illinois. They intend going on to Chicago and returning by way of St. Louis.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is receiving cut stock from Colorado, as the outdoor stock here is short of all demands.

Fred Fromholdt, formerly with the W. L. Rock Flower Co., was here on a visit last week.

George Hampton, of the Joseph G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; A. F. Longren, representing the Burlington Willow Ware Shops, of Burlington, Ia.; J. J. Hess, of Hess & Swoboda, Omaha, Neb.; Frank Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., were visitors to this market last week.

The Market.

Last week was like the one before it. Business was as dead as it ever is during the summer, and there has been so much rain and cloudy weather that there is little stock of any kind. Asters have not "made good" as yet, and it is time they should show up, if they are to amount to anything this season. Late asters are not grown here.

I cannot remember having seen so general a scarcity of good cut flowers as this summer. Even gladioli are not up to the mark. On the other hand, I have seldom seen stock in the houses looking better for the fall and winter crop. Mums and carnations seem to be doing especially well. Carnations are already producing a few good flowers.

The parks and private gardens are looking especially well. Bedding plants are blooming at present as well as they usually do in the fall. This augurs well for a heavy plant business next season.

The Newer Caladiums.

I saw a delightful bed of fancy-leaved caladiums last week. They were growing on the north side of a house and were making a wonderfully good showing. The trade might find that this is a good plant to recommend for shaded places in the south. It might not be out of place to mention the fine effects that are being produced in this city this summer with some of the newer varieties of outdoor caladiums. Of these, the Trinidad Dasheens grow the tallest and are especially effective for centers of beds. The variety known as Wonderful Dasheen is similar to the common caladium, but produces more leaves and does it in less time.

Xanthosoma Bataviensis I favor more than any of the other members of the family. It has plum-colored stems, with a decided bluish tint on the leaves. I have never seen a richer or more tropical-looking bed than one composed of these when well grown. The tubers are easier to keep over the winter than the old esculentum and a tuber not more than an inch and a half in diameter makes a show plant, whereas the older variety requires a large tuber to make much of a showing. ELASTIC-LYKE

THAT GOOD PUTTY
 (SEMI-LIQUID)

For bedding or running on top. Positively will not get hard, run in hot nor heave in cold weather.

Absolutely the best glazing product ever produced. Guaranteed to be made of Pure Linseed Oil, Pure White Lead and Oxide of Zinc. Weighs 16½ pounds to the gallon; goes farther and lasts longer than any other. Can be used in machine or bulb, and we guarantee that, years after using, if the outer film is broken the body will be found soft and pliable, making the removal of broken glass and the replacing of new very easy, without the breaking of more glass. Its elasticity will allow for expansion and contraction.

Try a 5-gal. kit, $7.25, and be convinced.

Also Dough Putty and "Sure-White" Pure Greenhouse Paint.

"SURE-WHITE" Pure Greenhouse Paint

A strictly pure Lead and Zinc Paint. The pigment is ground in Pure Linseed Oil, Turpentine and a small quantity of Japan to insure proper drying in cold or wet weather. This paint is superior to any a painter can mix, because the pigment is thoroughly ground in the liquid by powerful machines specially made for the purpose, and is much finer and more uniform than paint mixed with a paddle. We guarantee this paint not to contain any adulteration.

Reasons why you should use "Sure-White" greenhouse paint:

It is made to withstand excessive moisture and variation of temperature. Will cover more surface than any other paint on the market.

It will not peel, blister nor crack, hence will outlast by years other products and add to the life of the house without additional expense.

Also ELASTIC-LYKE—that good putty, semi-liquid, and "Sure-Pure" dough putty.

DAYLITE

QUICK

We are usually too busy to give testimonials, but most of us like to receive commendation for our goods, and we thought you would not object to a line from us in that direction. We have in front of our store a large marquee with a wired glass top. The latter has been extremely dirty, and we have not been able to clean it with water. It occurred to the writer to have our porter make an application of Andersen Daylite Glass Cleaner, and it is almost unbelievable what a difference there is! The glass is now as if it were new, and we have fully 75 per cent more light.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Throughout last week an active demand for stock took up all good offerings. The supply now is fair and the first of this week shows a substantial increase.

Except Killarney roses, which, owing to the extremely hot spell we have passed through, are poor, there are few roses obtainable. The good blooms have been selling readily. Easter lilies, rubrum and album lilies are in good supply and have been selling well. Hardy hydrangeas have met with a good market. The good gladioli clear readily, the same being true of asters. Snapdragons and water lilies are conspicuous and greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

O. B. Murphy has planted his carnations and sweet peas for the season. The stock is looking well.

C. E. Critchell received the first of an excellent cut of Easter lilies from the Hoffmeister Floral Co. Monday of this week.

John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., stopped in this city on his way to the S. A. F. convention at Houston, Tex.

Joseph Enneking, the popular manager of the Max Rudolph store, is receiving expressions of sympathy in his bereavement in the loss of his mother, Mrs. Frances Enneking, who died at Oldenburg, Ind.

Mrs. Catherine Carmichael, the wife of Daniel Carmichael, who is with the J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., died suddenly August 13, in her forty-ninth year. Mr. Carmichael has the sympathy of his friends.

Thomas Windram has returned from Leesburg, Fla.

H. M. Brothers, representing the J. M. Gasser Co., Cleveland; W. J. Marion, of Marion Bros., Circleville, O.; Oscar Leistner, Chicago; O. A. Fagin, Mount Holly, O.; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beckman, Middletown, O., were among the visitors last week.

SELF-LOCKING

THE ADVANCE Ventilating Apparatus with a worm and gear will securely hold your sash in any position. No danger of sash falling and breaking glass. No danger when operating the machine. This machine will meet any requirements you may have, and the operation will be easy. All up-to-date florists consider the ADVANCE a standard, due to the far-advanced ideas and designs. It is no use to try to find a machine that is better or equal to this, for no concern has, as yet, been able to market one.

If you are needing a sash-operator at the present time, or will need one a little later, you will find it to your interest to let us figure with you. You know what proper ventilation means in your houses, and the only machine that insures that is the ADVANCE. PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh and vicinity had its share of intense heat and storms until August 12. Since then the weather has been delightful. Business has fallen to a low ebb and probably will stay there until the end of this month. There is nothing to count on except funeral work. The supply houses are stocking up for the fall and winter season and the growers are planting carnations and getting the greenhouses in shape for the fall. The retail stores do not show much life, except when a funeral order comes along.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. purchased a motor truck last week. William Usinger expects to cover most of the local territory with it.

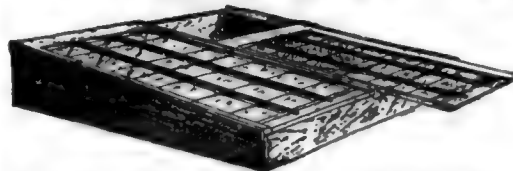

Miss Carrie Jordon, who conducted the flower stand in the Pittsburgh market, was married to John McCann August 14. They are spending their honeymoon at Atlantic City.

George Marshall, of the McCallum Co., and Mrs. Marshall are spending a few days at Geneva on the Lake.

DIETSCH HOUSES AT WAXAHACHIE, TEXAS. THE ESTABLISHMENT OF BIRD FORREST.

THE establishment of Bird Forrest, at Waxahachie, Texas, is a show place of Ellis county and well worth seeing. Mr. Forrest is one of the most enterprising florists in the Lone Star state and is one of the hard-headed, "show-me" kind commonly spoken of as having come from Missouri. We had to show him in order to get his order, and after the showing process it did not take long to convince him that there are all kinds of greenhouses, but only one kind that fills all requirements and that one a DIETSCH. Occasionally we find a man who wants to be shown, and experience has taught us that these are just the ones we want to meet up with in our efforts to build better greenhouses and teach the trade in general what we mean when we say "Better Greenhouses." To sell a man of this type is not so easy, but the satisfaction of doing so is well worth the effort. Once sold is always sold with them, and you can count on their loyalty every time.

At any rate it will pay you to investigate DIETSCH greenhouse materials and methods of construction. We build the most efficient and durable houses at a moderate cost. Construction of wood exclusively, or wood and iron combined, using each where it will best serve its purpose.

We are proud of our "show me" customers and want more of them. May we show you? When?

The Markets.

Market conditions are about the same as last week. Roses are plentiful and lilies again are to be had. Gladioli have improved since the rain of August 10. Asters are still poor in quality, as are other outdoor flowers, but prospects in this direction are a little better. The only business there is seems to be funeral work.

Club Meeting.

About forty Tri-City florists and their wives went to Muscatine Thursday, August 10, at the invitation of Emil Kranz. The party was a little inconvenienced by a heavy downpour of rain, but it nevertheless was in the best of spirits. From the Kranz home the party went to the German Club's home, where the club meeting was called to order by President Stapp.

After the business had been disposed of, the members sat down to a jolly good supper. Mr. McNutt, mayor of Muscatine, gave an address of welcome and acted as toastmaster. President Stapp responded in behalf of the club. Other speakers were C. O. E. Boehm, C. J. Reardon, R. M. C. Rohlf, Harry Bills, Arvid Anderson, Joseph Yukis and Mrs. Harry Bills. The Männerchor of Muscatine gave several selections that added to the pleasure of the occasion. The club members by unanimous vote expressed their thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Emil Kranz for their hospitality, and everyone went home well pleased with the day's jaunt.

Various Notes.

Max Knees, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. William Knees, of Moline, and Miss Elise Dolberg, also of Moline, were married August 9. The couple for the present will reside with the parents of the groom.

One of the secrets of his company's success is their method of keeping things growing vigorously in the days of their youth, giving them that vigor to withstand field-hardening hardships.

A large factor in securing such growth is not alone ample watering, but correct watering—watering that will not pack the soil, injure the plants, and that will at all times be done with equal uniformity.

All these things—and more—the Skinner System of Irrigation successfully accomplishes. It is not an expense, because it pays its way from the start.

View of a gigantic Garland greenhouse in the course of erection.
That of Davis & Steiner, Ottawa, Ill.

Last year we built the gigantic greenhouse shown, under construction, in the illustration above. Messrs. Davis & Steiner were so well pleased with the work we did for them that they have given us an order for the material for to be erected at their Streator establishment.

TWELVE MORE HOUSES

This is a good time of the year to take up the matter of new greenhouses, as well as additions to present ranges, and it is for this reason we suggest that you write us regarding your requirements.

Remember, we are greenhouse men as well as manufacturers. We operate our own foundry, machine shop and wood mill, which have been designed, erected and equipped for the fabrication of greenhouse material.

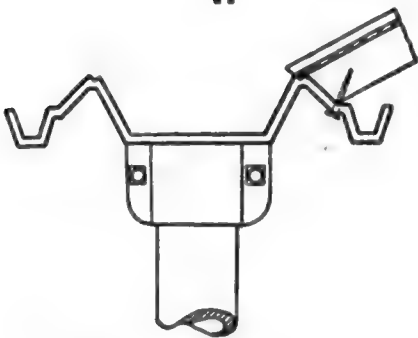

Send us your inquiries. You try the GARLAND BRAND of quality and service and learn for yourself the satisfaction of doing business with us. You will come back for more, just as Messrs. Davis & Steiner did.

Cypress a Strong Wood

Do you know that when it comes to strength—carrying strength, bearing-a-weight strength—Cypress is not a weak wood?

CYPRESS IS STRONGER THAN ANY SUBSTITUTE LUMBER

There's no wood now used in greenhouse construction, none that is claimed to be suitable for the work that will carry the weight imposed on sashbars and ridge-pole, with half the stiffness and certainty that Cypress can. Look at the old Cypress greenhouses and note that sashbars are not sagging—they are not like an old "sway-backed" horse.

CYPRESS is not spongy—like other woods we might name.

CYPRESS is not filled with little pin holes, like other woods we might name (though the immortal "pecky" is, of course, strictly a "holey" wood).

CYPRESS is not "dozy," like other woods that are being urged as a substitute for it in greenhouse construction.

The Market.

There is little to be said on last week's market conditions. Business was considered good, there being a goodly batch of funeral work and quite a few wedding orders. Roses were in fair supply, but arrived in an open condition. Carnations, unfortunately, are on the wane; there always is a good demand for them. The supply of gladioli is increasing slowly but surely. Asters as yet are scarce; those to be had are short-stemmed and small of bloom. Easter lilies are quite sufficient for the present demand. Water lilies seem to enjoy a greater popularity each year. Under the miscellaneous heading the principal items are corn-flowers, rubrum lilies, snapdragons and coreopsis. Greens of all kinds continue plentiful.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson last week had a good dull-season window, representing a country summer home.

William Warring, who is with Scott's, is spending a 10-day vacation at Port Maitland, Nova Scotia.

John Preisach, of Corfu, has completed rebuilding his greenhouses. He says his young carnation plants are coming along nicely.

L. Neubeck, Jr., who accidentally cut his arm three weeks ago, is out of the doctor's care. Twelve stitches were required to close the cut. A. E.

 "THE BOILER OF UNEQUALED FUEL ECONOMY"
 BUY DIRECT—FACTORY TO USER PRICES

The conservatories of the President of the United States are located opposite the Washington monument, Washington, D. C. Over 80 greenhouses are devoted to the growing of cut flowers, orchids and decorative stock.

A No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILER was installed in 1906 for the high temperature houses. The boiler made a wonderful record for economy.

The new iron frame range erected in 1910 is heated by a No. 7 KROESCHELL BOILER.

In 1912 two No. 5 KROESCHELL BOILERS were installed for the new range of the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Rockville, Md.

August, 1914, two more No. 11 KROESCHELL BOILERS ordered for White House conservatories, Washington, D. C.

DEEDS SPEAK LOUDER THAN WORDS

This principle has lifted the KROESCHELL BOILER from a modest position into a world's record, with millions of feet of glass. The reason is—well, ask any one of our customers.

THE WHITE HOUSE CONSERVATORIES, Washington, D. C.

FRANK OECHSLIN'S PLANT RANGE—100,000 sq. ft. of glass—heated by KROESCHELL BOILERS

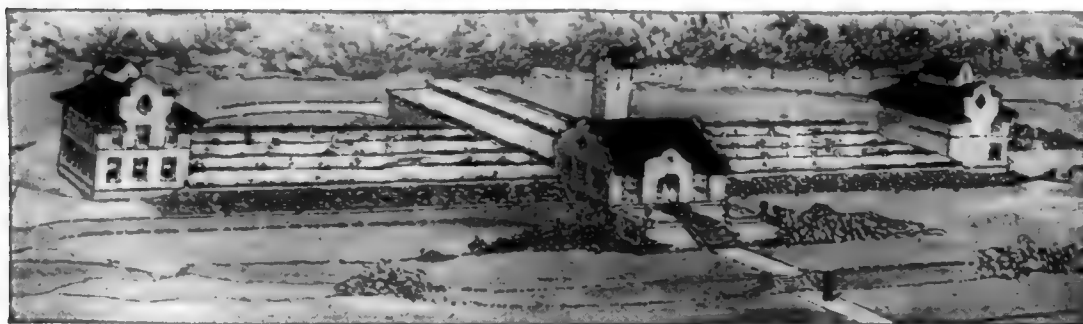

THE PLANT KING OF THE WEST

Ten years have been sufficient to make the history of the plant trade in Chicago, and Frank Oechslin is the man who has in a single decade established this business and built the only exclusive wholesale plant range in the big western city.

The first land (ten lots) was bought in 1902, and the first greenhouses (six small ones) were built the following year; there are now 81 large houses, 600 hotbed sash and ten acres of land in evidence of Mr. Oechslin's skill as a grower.

One of the principles upon which the Oechslin business has been built is to be satisfied with nothing short of the best a greenhouse can be made to produce. To produce the best, only the best in greenhouse material and construction has been employed.

Mr. Oechslin's greenhouses are now the show place of the city, and visitors there are always welcome. Go and see them, and when you admire the perfection of the plants and the cleanliness of the place, remember to visit the boiler rooms and note that the name KROESCHELL is found on every one of the boilers.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST MUSH- ROOM PLANT

We spent $100,000 in building and equipping the largest modern mushroom plant in the world. We purchased, in every instance, the best of everything we could get, and the fact that we installed a KROESCHELL BOILER to furnish our heat is sufficient evidence of our opinion of same.

Since installing this boiler and operating it we have never had any reason to change our opinion.

Yours very truly,

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

SPEEDING THE PARTING GUEST

The program for the closing days of the S. A. F. convention at Houston was disarranged by the vagaries of the weather, but it only put emphasis on the pleasure the Texas florists felt at having the national society visit the south. Looking into the future, two big years are ahead.

IF ANY evidence were needed as to the benefit to the S. A. F. by taking the annual convention occasionally to the cities outside the northern and eastern circle, that evidence might be found in the fact that when the society visited San Francisco, Vice-president MacRorie brought in 102 new members, and when it visited Texas, Vice-president Kerr added eighty-two new names to the roll, where there were only eighteen before. Surely an increase of 450 per cent in the membership in Texas justifies the expedition!

Weather Interrupts.

There were some who feared the heat of Houston, but it was rain that first interrupted, and then wind. The outdoor features of Wednesday's program were postponed because of the downpour, and Friday's trip to Galveston for the dip and dinner was called off because of the great gale that caused thousands to flee the Gulf Coast. The florists spent the day in Houston, although from Galveston came the report that thousands thronged the famous seawall boulevard watching great waves break on the riprap at its foot. The maximum wind velocity was forty miles. The maximum tide was four feet. With the exception of the heavy surf there was nothing of an extraordinary nature in Galveston. Indicative of the spirit with which the people of the city viewed the protection of the seawall was a band concert and dance Friday night at a beach pavilion above the roaring surf.

To San Jacinto.

By agreement the doors were locked on Thursday and all the visitors headed for the ship channel. Before starting the officers of the organization were photographed. After this the cars were boarded for the municipal wharf, to the end of the car line, after which there was a rather warm walk to the boat to the San Jacinto battlefield.

The trip down the channel was a novelty for many and much interest was shown in the various plants, warehouses and factories along the way. At the battlefield the afternoon was spent in viewing the various monuments and hearing stories of the famous fight, in dancing and an assault on sundry watermelons, sandwiches and lemonade.

An added attraction to the program was the passing of the Campania, the Austrian interned steamer, from the port of Galveston, the big tramp being towed up the channel by two tugs.

The Rotarian Affair.

The Houston Rotary Club entertained the visiting members of the Society of American Florists with a luncheon on the Rice roof garden. About 200 persons were present, Rotarians and florists together, and the program was so arranged and carried out as to be interesting to both.

Rotarian President Cole ordered a roll call of the assembly in a fashion novel and entertaining. Each man in turn stood up and gave his name, address, business, and favorite flower, thus: "O. L. Norsworthy, Houston, surgeon, sweet pea." These floral preferences ran all the way from the niggerhead to the deadly nightshade, and some of the visitors in their turns gave alleged botanical names that caused the more timid of the waiters to turn pale and seek places of safety.

R. C. Kerr, of the florists, then took the chair and introduced George Asmus, of Chicago, who paid a high tribute to the president-elect of the society. Mr. Asmus was followed by W. F. Gude, Rotarian from Washington, D. C., who declared that the Houston Rotary Club was the biggest factor in the decision of the florists to meet here. The last speaker of the occasion was Daniel MacRorie, of San Francisco, president of the Society of American Florists, who found many pleasant things to say about the south in general and Houston in particular.

Election of Directors.

This is the first time directors have been elected; the change in the by-laws adopted in Houston takes away one of the few opportunities the president has had to repay his friends for their efforts in his behalf. Also, the choice of two out of three candidates for directorships afforded the only opportunity to try the new balloting system. The vote resulted:

Frank Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo.	80
George W. Hess, Washington, D. C.	73
W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.	45

Mr. Coles had been spoken of as a possible competing candidate for the presidency. He was not present.

National Show.

After the report of the committee on the Philadelphia National Flower show was accepted, John J. Hess, treasurer of the society, offered a motion to instruct the executive board to sufficiently recompense Mr. Asmus for pulling off so successful a show, which was carried unanimously.

E. G. Hill. D. MacRorie. Geo. W. Hess. Geo. Asmus.
J. A. Peterson. C. L. Baum. Robt. C. Kerr. John Young. J. J. Hess.

The committee was not ready with a recommendation as to the date and location of the next National Flower Show, but it is hoped by many arrangements can be completed soon for holding the show in St. Louis, in the spring of 1918, in which event the S. A. F. convention will be held at the same time. The decision as to the show awaits assurances as to just what can be expected from the business men's organizations at the Missouri metropolis.

President's Recommendations.

The report of the committee consisting of Frank Stuppy, Geo. W. Hess, J. A. Peterson and E. G. Hill, appointed to consider the suggestions of the president's annual address, was cordial in its approval of what Dan MacRorie had to say. The suggestion that a group of large cities be selected for the annual gathering of the florists, for the convention to be held in them in turn, was approved, but no immediate action was advised, because of New York being selected for the 1917 convention and St. Louis for 1918.

The suggestion that the show be held either in the spring or fall, because of advantages in showing flowers at such seasons, was concurred in, but, as many other factors have to be considered, the committee advised leaving this matter open to be settled as conditions warrant. The fact that a plan is under advisement for the holding of the convention at the same time as the National Flower Show was another reason for postponing definite decision in this matter. The dual gathering probably will be experienced in St. Louis, and the way the plan works out can be looked into there.

The indorsement of children's gardens by the president was warmly backed by the committee report. It recommended that individual florists do all they can for the promotion of this work, and also school gardens.

Regarding convention gardens, the committee also advised that the utmost tact be used, but it was recommended that wherever possible the convention garden be developed, because it does much to increase interest and has a sweeping educational value.

The matter of a permanent secretary was indorsed, the committee concurring in the president's belief that there is enough work to keep a good man busy the year around.

A committee to foster the interests of Mothers' day was approved, and it was suggested that steps be taken to have the advancement of the occasion more definite and less spasmodic.

The report of the committee ended with appreciation and commendation

R. C. Kerr.

P. J. Fo'ey.

of the work of President MacRorie and his masterful handling of the many difficult problems presented during his administration.

Damaged Imports.

The matter of adjustments of international disputes was discussed. Secretary Young read a letter from a firm of Holland bulb shippers asking the society to appoint a board of inspectors to examine shipments said to be damaged and declined by the consignees. The matter was placed in the hands of the committee on tariff and legislation, with the suggestion that a sub-committee or representative be appointed to be stationed at New York.

The Awards.

Chairman William F. Gude reported for the committee appointed by President MacRorie to judge the trades' exhibits. Mr. Gude's report follows:

American Bulb Co., Chicago, Ill.—Decorative tricatene novelties, certificate of merit. The balance of this exhibit awarded honorable mention.

Judging the Garden.

Alex Miller, J. A. Manda, J. A. Newsham, W. J. Baker and J. J. Hess were appointed to judge the garden.

The aquatic exhibit of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, was pronounced the most attractive feature of the garden.

The water lily exhibit of William Tricker, Arlington, N. J., was highly commended.

The array of cannas exhibited by Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., was classed most attractive, the variety City of Portland taking the honors.

Boddington's Meteor was classed as the best red canna. It was exhibited by A. T. Boddington Co., of New York.

The best white canna was Eureka, shown by Henry A. Dreer.

American Beauty and La Detroit roses from the California Rose Co., Pomona, Cal., took the honors in this collection.

The garden was pronounced unusually fine and the judges rewarded all the rest of the exhibits with honorable mention.

A Trade Directory.

A committee consisting of Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis; Samuel Murray, Kansas City; W. J. Keimel, Elmhurst, Ill.; Patrick Welch, Boston; H. Plath, San Francisco; R. C. Kerr, Houston; C. L. Baum, Knoxville, and J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, was appointed, after the Philadelphia meeting of the executive board, to consider the advisability of the society issuing a trade directory or any other publication. The committee recommended that the society proceed to issue a directory under the direction of the secretary and that $3,000 be appropriated for the purpose. On motion, the matter was referred back to the board of directors, whence it came, but with power to act.

Some of the members regard the incident merely as a protest at the alleged lack of accuracy of the book now in use which will subside when the publisher promises a more thorough revision, but there are others who expect the board of directors to be urged to go ahead by job printers who would not care to undertake the matter on their own responsibility but who would like the profit of printing the books for the society.

Miscellaneous Matters.

A pause was made as a memorial to the members lost during the year and committees were appointed to draft tributes to Treasurer Kasting, John W. Poehlmann, W. Atlee Burpee and others who have died since the San Francisco convention.

A diamond-studded locket was given Robert C. Kerr, of Houston, retiring president of the Texas State Florists' Association and newly elected president of the national organization. The gift was from the members of the Texas association. William F. Gude, of Washington, made the presentation speech. Mr. Kerr accepted it in a few brief words of appreciation.

Robert C. Kerr, the new president, won the prize offered by Dan MacRorie, the retiring president, of $150 for the member bringing in the greatest number of new members, Mr. Kerr registering eighty-two.

Secretary John Young is quoted as being particularly enthusiastic over the Texas bluebell, the state flower, which was exhibited in profusion at the convention. "They tell me this flower grows wild down here," he said, "and you have taken it and cultivated it until you have one of the most gorgeous flowers known to the trade. If we can successfully raise these Texas bluebells in the east it will be the biggest trade getter we ever had in our lives."

A standing vote of thanks was tendered C. L. Brock, superintendent of parks, of Houston, for his work on the convention garden.

The automobile ride which was to have been given Wednesday afternoon, and which was postponed because of rain, was given Friday morning. The train of automobiles left the city auditorium and the ride terminated at Sam

Houston park, where the formal opening of the convention garden was held. The municipal band rendered a program at that time.

Otto Lang, of Dallas, was standing a scant forty feet away when a lightning bolt drilled a hole through a corner of Convention hall, scattering pieces of mortar in every direction like shrapnel. A number of persons standing in the foyer were deafened temporarily by the shattering concussion, but aside from losing a few drops of perspiration were no worse off for the experience.

A handsome silver service was presented to the retiring president, Daniel MacRorie, after the luncheon at the San Jacinto battle ground, E. G. Hill making the presentation speech.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee, of San Francisco, who is building up a large shipping trade in the south and west, brought a display of about a dozen varieties of cut flowers now available in the San Francisco market. The stock arrived in excellent condition.

The trades' exhibit of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was sold to R. C. Kerr, as was most of that of the American Bulb Co., Chicago. The exhibit of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was sold entire to Otto Lang, of Dallas. The plants shown by Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., and most of those of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, were sold to the Brazos Greenhouses, Houston.

The New Orleans florists gave an all-day entertainment to the convention visitors who passed through August 14: luncheon, automobile ride, dinner, dancing and supper. It was quite the most elaborate affair of the week.

Additional Visitors.

In addition to the list of those present printed last week, the following registered:

Beck, H. B., Austin, Tex.
Berning, H. G., and wife, St. Louis.
Chopin, P. A., New Orleans, La.
Crump, W. E., Colorado Springs, Colo.
Kimmell, G. A., Chattanooga, Tenn.
Kuerth, Robert, Denver.
Judge, Mrs. E. W., Tyler, Tex.
McNutt, A. J., Knoxville, Tenn.

Put It on the Glass.

At the F. T. D. meeting at Houston, at which W. F. Gude, of Washington, was elected president, a resolution was adopted urging each member to keep on display in his window or the front of his store or lettered on the glass a sign with the words: "Member Florists' Telegraph Delivery." It was also recommended that the advertising committee immediately take steps for a comprehensive and far-flung advertising campaign of the telegraph delivery service.

Ladies' S. A. F.

Officers for 1917 were elected at a lively meeting of the Ladies' Society of American Florists in the banquet hall of the Rice hotel. Mrs. R. C. Kerr presided and Miss Perle Fulmer acted as secretary, neither the president, first vice-president nor secretary being present.

The officers elected were: President, Miss Perle Fulmer, Des Moines, Ia.; first vice-president, Mrs. R. C. Kerr, Houston; second vice-president, Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J.; secretary, Mrs. C. H. Maynard, Akron, O.; treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; directors, Mesdames J. Manda, New Jersey; J. F. Wilcox, Ia.; George H. Cooke, Washington, D. C.; James Hancock, Illinois; Fred Howard, California, and Patrick Welch, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Kerr read several telegrams from members who were unable to attend the convention, among them one from the president, Mrs. John Vallance, of Oakland, Cal., saying that on account of illness she was not able to be present, but sent her best wishes to the organization. Reports from the secretary and treasurer were read and passed on.

Before the election of officers, a number of new members were enrolled. Mrs. C. L. Steffens, of Brownwood, Texas, and Mrs. A. Lange, of Chicago, were enrolled as life members in the organization.

A committee to draw up resolutions of respect for two deceased members, Mrs. Critchell, of Cincinnati, who was president two years previously, and Mrs. Shaffer, of Washington, was appointed. The committee was composed of Mesdames Vincent, Hess and Lange.

The meeting adjourned for a social chat with the new president. Miss Fulmer is a young woman, active and enthusiastic over the work. This was her sixteenth convention, she says. She is a charter member and has only missed two conventions since the organization of the Ladies' Society of American Florists. Miss Fulmer's father is the city florist at Des Moines, Ia. For a number of years she has been teaching in the public schools of her home city, but next year will be at the State School for Girls at Mitchellville, Ia.

Convention Weather.

It is thought the small attendance was in a measure due to the fear of hot weather. That such fears were groundless is shown by the official government records for last week, as follows, the figures being the highest and lowest temperature for the day, at Houston and the next two convention cities, compared with Chicago, the country's greatest summer resort:

	Tues.	Wed.	Thurs.	Fri.
Houston	89-75	93-73	91-71	88-77
New York.....	80-66	76-68	86-62	82-68
St. Louis.....	84-68	84-72	94-74	94-78
Chicago	76-68	78-69	89-70	97-77

There was 1.14 inches of rain at Houston August 16 and .91 inches August 17.

INSECT PROBLEMS OF THE FLORISTS

AN entomologist's view of the florists' insect problems may bring out something suggestive and perhaps useful, but it should be understood at the outset that the writer is and has for many years been a professional entomologist and that his view will necessarily differ from that of many florists.

The insect pests, which the florist must combat successfully or make a failure of his business, depend largely on the kind of crops he grows and to a minor extent upon the locality in which he works. The insects which trouble the rose grower in a period of five or ten years are pretty much the same, wherever his plant may be located, and the longer he grows the crop continuously the larger and more complete will his list of rose parasites become. This is true because the principal enemies of the rose form a more or less well defined group and the practice of importing plants from other growers provides for the distribution of the parasites.

Perhaps the species that come into the roses directly from the local environment will exhibit the greatest irregularity in type and number, because their attempts to enter are continuous and the conditions must be especially favorable to permit them to persist at all.

The Florist Can Control.

The florist is in a class quite by himself in the ability to sterilize his soil, and to practice clean culture and rotation of crops. His extremely intensive system of cultivation justifies a procedure in these matters that would be prohibitive for the farmer, the fruit grower or even the trucker. Furthermore, the florist who grows under glass has the climate under his control.

With the climate and the soil at his beck and call, it would seem that the plant parasite problems of the florist should be easy of solution. As a matter of fact, the crops of the florist pay their toll to the insect pests to almost if not quite as great an extent as do those of the farmer, fruit grower or trucker.

It seems to the writer that there are two reasons for this condition: One, that the plants are grown under forcing conditions and therefore do not have the strength and resistance of those grown under more natural circumstances and, second, that florists, acting much like other growers of plants, do not take advantage of their opportunities to rid their crops of plant parasites.

Clean Soil Is First.

It seems reasonable to consider cleaning the soil as an important step toward

This is the annual report of Thomas J. Headlee, New Brunswick, N. J., entomologist for 1916 of the S. A. F., presented at the Houston convention.

Another General View of the Trades' Display at the Houston Convention of the S. A. F.

getting rid of injurious insects. Under field conditions this can best be brought about through good drainage, clean culture and rotation of crops. Under glasshouse conditions this can best be accomplished by sterilization with steam or carbon bisulphide. Cleaning the soil does not mean that its liveliness shall be destroyed, but rather that its life and response shall be improved. Indeed, where the most severe treatments are used desirable bacteria that may be killed in the process can be largely replaced.

It is reasonable to consider the practice of absolute cleanliness about the field and glasshouse as another important step in the control of plant parasites. Under field conditions this state of things is incidental to cleaning the soil, but under glass it is not necessarily so. As often as the crop is removed, the house should be given a complete cleaning and sterilization.

Clean Stock.

With a clean soil, in a clean environment, clean plants are needed to produce a clean crop. In obtaining plants free from parasites the florist finds his chief difficulty and there appears to be no good way of getting around it. Perhaps the best method is that of carefully examining all incoming plants and rejecting or treating all that exhibit signs of infestation by serious parasites. Where the crops grown are of such a character that the plants live for a period of years, the placing of the recently arrived plants which seem healthy in an entirely separate part of the glasshouse system, where they may remain for a time sufficient for the parasitism to develop, followed by a ruthless weeding out of the sickly, should prove a good practice.

After the crop has started, the first step in its protection from insects is to keep it healthily growing, for a vigorous plant resists attack more successfully than one the nutrition of which is abnormal. The second step is to keep the sharpest possible lookout for trouble and treat it as soon as it appears.

Widely Varying Practice.

It is in the treatment of the plant after the insect has appeared that florists' practice appears to have reached its most bewildering diversity. Measures advocated by one grower as a specific for a given species are completely discounted by another and an opposite type of remedy substituted for them. This difference of opinion is partly due to the fact that florists are able to and do produce their wares under so widely different conditions that in some instances what works for one grower will fail for another, and partly due to a failure to comprehend the general principles which underlie proper practice. The first is, of course, an entirely legitimate cause for difference, but the latter is inexcusable.

The treatment which shall be administered to plants infested with parasites depends upon whether the injury has reached a stage where treatment other than prompt destruction is worth while, what the plant itself will stand without damage to growth and appearance, and the nature of the parasite. Injury beyond a point where the plant may readily recover, or of such a character (say borers in the main stem of herbaceous plants) that treatment is impracticable,

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

GORDON M. BENTLEY.

THE idea that work is a joyous privilege seems to form a large part of the philosophy of Prof. G. M. Bentley, secretary-treasurer of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, for he says: "September 23, 1877, at Great Barrington, Mass., I first had an opportunity to peep into this world of beauty and action." As to the genuineness of his activities, this summary of the evidence must here suffice: Began his special education with a 4-year course at Cornell University; returned to Cornell for post-graduate work, leaving the institution in 1901 with the degrees of B. S. and M. A.; taught science for four years in Union Academy, Belleville, N. Y.; became assistant state entomologist of North Carolina and instructor in A. and M. College, Raleigh, N. C.; now is state entomologist and plant pathologist in Tennessee, and associate professor of entomology in the University of Tennessee. Besides being secretary-treasurer of the florists' organization, as aforesaid, he also holds the same office in the Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association.

must be followed by prompt destruction of the plant and the parasite infesting it.

The Question of Treatment.

If the injury is one from which the plant may readily recover, the question of treatment then becomes one of nature, time and methods of applying. The nature depends on the parasite and upon the plant.

If the parasite is an animal, the question whether it consumes foliage or sap must first be determined. If the former, arsenicals should be used if the plant will stand the necessary dosage without injury to its structures or to its appearance. If the latter, nicotine or oil should be employed if the plant will stand the necessary treatment without serious injury to structure or to appearance. In the former case it is quite sufficient to coat the foliage which is being consumed, while in the latter the insect itself must be thoroughly drenched. This procedure will answer for the bulk of the florists' insect pests.

There are, however, certain species to which these general rules will not apply and each of them may be considered on its merits. For instance, many scale insects do not yield to contact sprays of strength which will leave the plants uninjured, and hand removal becomes necessary. Many of the scales infesting palms are illustrations of this sort. Some chewing insects attack plants of such a nature that arsenical staining is inadmissible and contact insecticides must be used, as is the case with the Florida fern caterpillar.

There are crops, such as tomatoes under glass, the insect pests of which yield most easily to fumigation, which will destroy a chewing insect as readily as a sucking one.

A Book for Florists.

For the purpose of bringing these methods together and giving them some sort of organization, the writer has induced Harry B. Weiss, of his department, to prepare a bulletin on greenhouse insects. Especial attention has been given to this phase of the florists' business because it has seemed to us that knowledge of that part of the field has been in more chaotic condition than any other. It is purposed to distribute this bulletin to the members of this association who express a desire to consult it.

No entomologist has made the insect pests of the florists' crops a subject of sufficiently extended study and research, and no really comprehensive and helpful scheme of procedure can be suggested until something of the sort has been done.

A live research committee of this organization might set such a piece of work going by cooperating with persons already in experimental work who are interested along this line, and thus initiate a movement that would prove a large factor in promoting American floriculture.

tory, on the whole, than flats or benches for growing them in, unless large numbers are grown and whole benches or even a house can be devoted to them. If they are in pans, it is possible to advance and retard them, something not so easily done when quantities are grown in benches, unless the bulbs are planted at intervals to maintain a succession.

Antirrhinums.

The earliest batch of antirrhinums should be benched before this time, in which case a good crop of spikes can be assured for the holidays. When they are planted thus early, I like to give them a little more room than when they are grown only for a spring or Memorial day crop, allowing them a space 10x12 inches. Remember that these snapdragons succeed better for a winter crop in shallow benches than in solid beds; also, that if properly treated they will flower profitably until next July, and how many other flowers can we depend upon to do likewise? Let the snapdragons all run up to flower before pinching them back fairly hard. If you pinch them back while the shoots are soft, the plants will break weakly and many of the shoots produced will not flower. The present has been a hard season for snapdragons and fungoid affections are rife. For safety spray with Bordeaux mixture or Fungine before you see any signs of these, or as soon as they appear.

Myosotis and Double Daisies.

Myosotis and double daisies are better if sown a little later than pansies, as their growth is much more rapid. The seeds do just as well if sown in a bed outdoors as in a coldframe. Protect the bed with cheesecloth, elevated a little from the ground, until the seeds germinate. For a compact-growing forget-me-not sow Myosotis alpestris Victoria. This may be had in blue, pink or white shades, but blue sells much the best. M. sylvatica, of a more spreading habit, is good for bedding and comes in useful for dotting through bulb beds as a ground cover. M. palustris is a persistent bloomer. It enjoys a damp location, but for the last two summers has got sufficient moisture from the skies to suit it to a nicety.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Cold Storage Lilies.

Now is an opportune time to pot up a batch of giganteum lilies from cold storage. You do not need large-sized bulbs; sizes 7-9 or 8-10 are the most satisfactory. Use 5-inch or 6-inch pots. If the soil is damp, you need not water them after potting. Stand the pots on a cellar floor, in a frame or even below the benches. Cover them with dry moss or some other mulch, to prevent drying out. As they start to grow, stand them on a bench. They do well in any ordinary greenhouse while summer reigns, but later they should have a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees at night for the best results.

It is not difficult to have a constant succession of lilies by starting batches two or three weeks apart, and where much funeral work is done they will be found extremely useful flowers. If you have uses for L. speciosum, you can also buy cold storage bulbs of these now. L. speciosum album will be found the most satisfactory. Bulbs potted now will flower from Thanksgiving onward and will prove useful.

Marguerites.

Marguerites for early flowering in pots should now be in 5-inch or 6-inch pots and should have another shift. They do not make rapid growth now, but just wait until it turns a little cooler! Pinch out any shoots running to flower and keep the plants plunged outdoors. These plants will flower freely as early as the beginning of December and can be easily had in splendid flower for Christmas. Plants must be well potbound to flower well. Do not imagine that you can flower them as well or better in a bench. You cannot do it, nor can you bloom the yellow marguerites at Christmas as you can the smaller-flowered white ones. If the leaf miner troubles you, use Black Leaf 40 as a spray, using one part of the nicotine to 600 parts of water. This will speedily kill every leaf miner it touches.

Bouvardias.

It is not safe to leave bouvardias outdoors after the end of August. While we might have a warm September and the plants would, in such a case, be perfectly secure, it is not safe to trust to this in our northern states. A temperature as low as 40 degrees will often destroy the embryo flower buds in that beautiful pure white variety, Humboldtii. Lift the plants with a nice ball, pot them carefully, stand them outdoors in a partly shaded location and spray freely until they are established somewhat. Give them some shade from bright sunshine. If they are planted in benches, be sure also to provide the necessary shade for a while and spray freely until the wilting ceases. Then they need only be sprayed occasionally.

Freesias.

The earliest freesias now are three to four inches high. Early in September these will go on the shelf of a carnation house, where a minimum of 52 to 54 degrees is maintained in winter. A large proportion of these we hope to have in flower for Christmas, a season when the prices of Purity freesias are always satisfactory. It is time now to start a second batch of these popular midwinter-flowering bulbs. Pans or half pots will be found more satisfac-

THE GLADIOLUS

ABOUT WHITE GLADIOLI.

Which is the best white gladiolus? If a question like that were propounded to a public assembly, the answer would probably be a chorus of discords, for no two replies would agree. Some of the discordant notes would be quiet undertones, wavering uncertainly in an attempt to blend harmoniously, but a few of the dissonant voices might be loud and insistent. One disputant might state mildly that there are enough good white varieties to afford a choice for people of all tastes. Another might shout that "there ain't no sich animal" as a best or superlatively good white gladiolus. "How about Peace?" someone would ask. "Peace would be a good white if it were white, but it isn't," would be the sarcastic rejoinder. "How about Chicago White? And how about—" But to each proposed variety there would be ready objections.

B. Hammond Tracy, whose ideas on the subject should be worth hearing, recommends Lily Lehman as being at least one of the best whites, and as one evidence of the correctness of his opinion he has submitted the photograph which is here reproduced. He includes in his lists Peace, Chicago White, Glory of Holland, White Excelsior, Augusta and others of the well tried sorts, besides some of the newer varieties, but when he comes to Lily Lehman he says: "No other white gladiolus equals this variety. It is a lily in both name and form, of a pure, glistening white, with just a tinting of pink on the tips of the petals." In another connection he speaks of "the dazzling blue-whiteness of Lily Lehman, the white orchid gladiolus." Perhaps, however, in ranking Lily Lehman so high, he did not intend to compare it with Queen of Whites, White Glory and others of the high-priced varieties which he and other growers carry in stock.

GLADIOLI AT CHRISTMAS.

We would like to know if there is any method by which Gladiolus Mrs. Francis King may be brought into bloom at Christmas. Would it be possible to hold the bulbs in cold storage until time to plant, or can we obtain early ripened bulbs from the south that could be forced into bloom by that time? We shall appreciate your advice.

H. B. R.—Ia.

I would not say that gladioli such as Mrs. F. King could be bloomed for Christmas by late planting. I have never seen them at that date. It should, however, be possible to flower them for the holidays by holding the bulbs in cool storage and planting them in August. Perhaps some growers have tried it. If so, I am sure The Review's readers would be glad to have their experience. The gladiolus season really starts about mid-April, under glass. With the later outdoor crop the season lasts until about the middle of October, which gives us practically six months of gladioli. Whether buyers would be willing to pay a price proportionate to their value at Christmas is a debatable question. It is also doubtful if they would appeal to the people at that time.

GLADIOLUS SOCIETY OF OHIO.

Fourth Annual Show.

The fourth annual flower show of the Gladiolus Society of Ohio was held in the assembly rooms of the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, O., Friday and Saturday, August 18 and 19. The season in many ways has been a most unfavorable one, and the growers were prepared for a scanty exhibit, but they were agreeably surprised by the showing of splendid gladioli that graced the tables. While not equal in magnitude to that of last year, the exhibition was quite as good as that of two years ago, which all remember as a gratifying success. Many fine displays were made, and probably the most striking feature of the exhibition was the fine new varieties and seedlings, which indicate the spirit of progress in this line.

The business session of the society was postponed until the November meeting, at which time the election of officers will be held.

INSURANCE ON IMPORTS.

Shippers in Holland who last season insured stocks for American customers, on which the underwriters subsequently were called on to satisfy an extremely large number of claims, are notifying the trade that the insurance companies will not allow the same liberal conditions as in 1915, urging consignees to follow the instructions given, as neglect to do so will forfeit any possible chance to recover eventual loss.

The instructions are:

"Please note that our goods are insured to destination on the following terms:

"Free from average unless 3 per cent English conditions, including damage caused by heating or gnawing of rats.

"Inherent vice is only recoverable if the forwarding of the goods is delayed for more than eight days owing to an accident during transit.

"In case of loss of or damage to the goods, consignee must apply at once to Lloyd's agent or, in places where no such agency is established, to the Dutch consul, or in absence of same to an authority at the place of destination, in order to have the damage ascertained by a competent and trustworthy surveyor. Affidavits of the consignee himself will not suffice.

"Claim for heating will only be recognized if the heating be stated within two days after the date of arrival of the goods at the place of destination, so that consignee is obliged to unpack his goods within this term.

"The survey report must contain the date of arrival of the goods, the date on which the damage was stated, the date on which the intermediation of Lloyd's agents, etc., was applied for, the cause and the extent of the damage.

"Claims about lost or damaged goods cannot be entertained unless these instructions be carefully followed."

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

VEGETABLE GROWERS BUSY.

Chicago Convention Plans.

There's an admirable thoroughness and vim about the way the convention committee of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America is shaping the program for the body's annual convention at the Hotel La Salle, Chicago, September 26 to 29.

A diagram of the convention rooms in the Hotel La Salle, rooms such as only a first-class hostelry affords, is given herewith. The trade exhibit hall, on the left, is 46x140 feet and will be divided into three sections, as indicated. The space rates are as follows: Section A, exhibits of 100 feet and over, 40 cents per foot; Section B, exhibits of fifty feet and over, 45 cents per foot; Section C, exhibits of thirty feet and over, 50 cents per foot. Section C has been set aside for small displays and will be divided for table spaces of thirty feet each, or sixty feet, with frontage on two walks.

As previously reported, the program includes round table discussions and addresses by leading gardeners, truck farmers, greenhouse men and representatives of various colleges, experiment stations and the Department of Agriculture. Marketing, soil fertility, heating, packing and many other subjects will be covered on the program.

Officers and Committeemen.

The officers of the association for 1916 are: President, M. L. Ruetenik, Cleveland; vice-president, H. W. Selby, Philadelphia; secretary, S. W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.; treasurer, E. A. Dunbar, Ashtabula, O. Directors, J. N. Draper, Richard Hittinger, T. C. Johnson, H. F. Hall, W. S. Weiant, R. H. Garrahan.

Following are the Chicago convention committeemen, a list of names that has

LETTUCE IN COLD FRAMES.

Please advise me how to grow lettuce in coldframes and when to sow the seeds. I have six beds 6x100 feet that I want to plant to lettuce, so that I will have crops on until Thanksgiving and possibly Christmas. I have one hotbed two feet deep, which I can double-sash if necessary. What varieties should be planted? When shall I sow the seeds, to have lettuce ready to cut October 15, November 1, November 15, December 1 and December 15? How far apart should the seeds be planted and how much sheep manure should be given a bed 6x100? Any other information will be appreciated. B. J. P.—Pa.

Good varieties of lettuce for the purposes named are May King and Hittinger's Belmont. For an immediate sowing Big Boston also would be good. A sowing should be made at once outdoors and additional sowings made September 1 and September 15. The last sowing will give you lettuce until Christmas, providing you give the plants a little warm manure below and give them necessary protection with mats and board shutters when the weather becomes sufficiently severe to warrant it.

If you use sheep manure, it must be thoroughly mixed with the soil. As lettuce plants require a rich soil to produce good heads, you should use 400 pounds of sheep manure to each frame. But you will have better results if you use horse manure; half decayed horse manure will answer well, if you cannot get it thoroughly rotted. Spread it three inches thick and thoroughly fork it in. Horse manure gives better results with lettuce than any other animal manure.

With May King and Big Boston only three rows per sash can be grown, seven and eight plants per row. Belmont can go a little closer; seven rows in two sashes I have found sufficiently close. All these are head lettuce, which I presume you want. C. W.

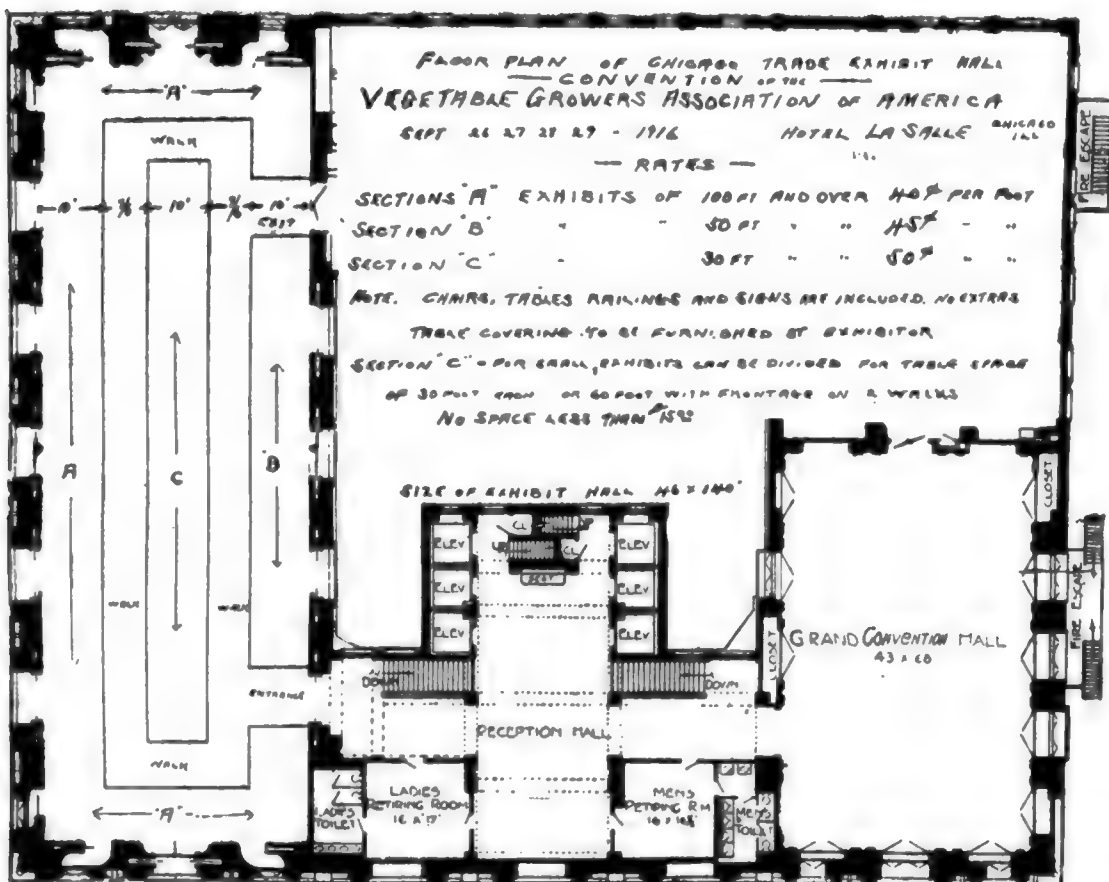

THE EDIBLE ASPARAGUS.

We have a customer who wants an outdoor asparagus bed. Please tell us the proper way to construct one and the best time of year to do it. How far should the plants be set apart, what covering is needed for winter and how should the sides be planked? Any information on this subject will be appreciated. F. & F.—Wis.

To have really good asparagus a thorough preparation of the soil is necessary. While this popular vegetable can be grown in almost any soil, it prefers a sandy or gravelly loam that has been deeply plowed, or spaded, and heavily manured. If the bed is for a home garden I would advise hand-trenching a couple of feet deep, working in plenty of barnyard manure. Do not be afraid to use manure liberally; I never knew asparagus to have too much of it. The bed should be prepared in the fall and the planting done in spring. For a small garden the rows may be three and one-half to four feet apart, and the plants two feet apart in the rows. For field culture the rows are better five feet apart, to permit cultivation by horse.

Use 1-year-old seedlings, if you can get them. They are equal in size to what the seed stores sell as 2-year-olds. Dig or plow out furrows eight inches deep, spread out the roots of each plant and merely cover them with soil. Fill them in from time to time as they grow, until the ground is level. If the roots are covered eight or nine inches deep when planted, a large proportion of them will never grow. Keep the plants well cultivated during the entire summer. Give them a winter mulch of stable manure. In spring a top-dressing of salt and a good commercial fertilizer may be applied. It is better not to cut any stalks until the third season. The plants then will be strong, and a well prepared bed should last twenty or twenty-five years.

The first season you may grow some crop like lettuce, string beans, beets or carrots between the asparagus rows, but only for one season. Do the planting in the early spring, as soon as possible after the frost has left the ground. If the asparagus beetle attacks the plants, spray them with arsenate of lead. For asparagus rust spray the plants with Bordeaux mixture or Fungine, or dust the plants well with air-slaked lime while the foliage is wet with dew.

I consider Reading Giant the finest variety of asparagus. Giant Argenteuil and Palmetto also are good sorts.

GUDE URGES ACTION.

Just prior to leaving Washington for the convention of the S. A. F. at Houston, Tex., William F. Gude, national representative of the organization, again took up with Senator Simmons, chairman of the Finance Committee, the subject of unfair competition, later submitting the following letter:

Hon. F. M. Simmons,
Chairman Finance Committee,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir: Referring to my brief talk with you the other evening in reference to the unfair competition or anti-dumping law, what we would like to have, briefly, is this:

1. We would like a law that will prevent the dumping of surplus shipments of nursery stock, plants, and bulbs here, especially to the auction rooms. Nothing should be shipped unless it is ordered in advance by an American firm.

2. We would like no change made in present tariff and no interference with legitimate trade in the same lines.

3. We want the auction rooms to pay duty on the same value on shipments as is paid by other importers on the same class of goods.

We would like to have the above law enacted, and we believe the Holland association would welcome such a law that would protect their trade, as well as ours, and all others doing a legitimate business. If some such law is not passed, there will be an avalanche of Dutch bulbs and other nursery stock here this fall, and the legitimate trade of both shipper and buyer will seriously suffer.

Our entire association will greatly appreciate anything that may be done in their behalf. I remain,

Very truly, yours,

Wm. F. Gude,
Chairman Committee on Tariff and Legislation,
S. A. F.

The bill advocated by Mr. Gude provides that "it shall be unlawful for any person importing or assisting in importing any articles from any foreign country into the United States, commonly and systematically to import, sell, or cause to be imported or sold such articles within the United States at a price substantially less than the actual market value or wholesale price of such articles, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country of their production, or of other foreign countries to which they are commonly exported, after adding to such market value or wholesale price, freight, duty, and other charges and expenses necessarily incident to the importation and sale thereof in the United States: Provided, That such act or acts be done with the intent of destroying or injuring an industry in the United States or of preventing the establishment of an industry, or of restraining or monopolizing any part of trade and commerce in such articles in this country."

NINE MONTHS' IMPORTS.

On pages 62 and 76 of this issue are the most complete tables of import statistics ever published, covering the importations of seeds, bulbs, florists' plants and nursery stock for the three quarters of the government's fiscal year up to March 31, 1916. The figures are from the official returns of the collectors of customs at all the ports of the United States. Those who study the trade will find much of value in them.

Gentlemen:

after comparing very carefully all my orders
I come to the facts, that the Review brings me alone
73% of all my orders from my advertising.

Yours Truly,

Ant. C. Zvolanek.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA Aug. 14, 1916

Covington, Ky.—John Popp was married to Miss Mary Hub, of Crescent Springs, last month.

Houston, Tex.—The Lord & Burnham Co., New York, is erecting here three greenhouses similar in design to the one shown in the S. A. F. trades' display, but larger. One of them is for Judge James L. Autrey, 3 Courtlandt place, and is of the curved-roof design. Another is for the city and is located in Wright's Flower Garden. It is of the commercial type. The third is for John W. Sanders, Yoakum and Lovett boulevards.

New Orleans, La.—Members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society August 14 acted as hosts to a number of florists from other states, who spent the day in New Orleans, while en route to the Houston convention. The reception committee was composed of the following: C. W. Eichling, Otto and Paul Abele, A. Alost, H. Mische, J. Bernard, J. Bollwinkle, T. H. Becker, P. A. Chopin, H. Doescher, T. Dormay, B. Eble, R. Eichling, E. Farley, H. Kraak, W. Wilson, C. L. Ory, C. R. Panter, H. Rehfeld, F. Reyes, M. Scheinuk, H. Scheuermann, J. Steckler, U. J. Virgin, A. Verlinde, A. Dammerau, F. H. Grillo, W. A. Dinkle and L. J. Lashley.

Waco, Tex.—Mrs. Annie Wolfe Brigrance, of Wolfe the Florist, is convalescing from an illness that has kept her away from business for some time.

Ardmore, Okla.—Eugene and Paul Woerz, who compose the firm of Woerz Bros., say the southwest has awakened under the influence of the oil millions and that the quick-rich are ready to spend goodly sums in the embellishment of their home grounds. They report calls from far and near for stock suited to the landscape requirements of the Oklahoma oil fields.

Enid, Okla.—Midsummer days in the florists' business are somewhat like midwinter days in the straw hat business—there's little doing at the retail counter. Of course there are exceptions to the rule, as note this message from A. D. Zimmerman, who speaks for the Enid Floral Co.: "We have enjoyed a good business this summer—fully fifty per cent better than that of a year ago. The increase is not unexpected, as our business during the last three years has never been standing still, but constantly growing. The summer, however, has been a trying one to those engaged in growing flowers in Oklahoma. The weather has been exceedingly hot and dry."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

POINSETTIAS IN THE SOUTH.

In the more northern sections of the south the last layers of poinsettias should have been made. Along the gulf coast the first week of September is time enough to make the last batch. The middle of September is a good time to give the final shift, or make up the pans. Use rather a light compost for the final shift, but see that it is rich enough in manure. I am of the opinion that most of the dropping of the foliage is due more to lack of nourishment than any other cause. When the plants are established in the last pots they should have a mulch of old cow manure, and this should be renewed every ten days until the bracts show good color. The plants should be carefully watered, tending rather to the dry side. Given these two conditions, poinsettias are not touchy as to temperature; 50 degrees at night is sufficient. Last year our poinsettias stood a temperature of 44 degrees for three nights in succession—before we got the fires started—without showing any harmful effects. L.

MUMS IN THE SOUTH.

Chrysanthemum plants in the south require considerable attention at the present time. The side growths shoot out quickly and they must be kept down, if the best results are expected. Keep the shoots neatly tied and do not fail to spray the plants once a week with one of the tobacco extracts. The time for taking the bud on some of the early varieties is almost at hand. It is well to bear in mind that you cannot take a bud in the south as early as you can in the north, and get a first-class flower. It is never safe to take any bud before September 1, with the possible exception of Mrs. H. W. Robinson, among the reliable varieties. After that date almost any bud will flower satisfactorily.

As soon as the bud is taken is the time to begin to feed some liquid fertilizer. Manure water made from fresh cow manure, varied with nitrate of soda or ammonia sulphate, a 4-inch potful to fifty gallons of water, applied twice a week, is the usual method of feeding. On pink varieties use the commercial fertilizers rather sparingly, or the color will fade. Always discontinue feeding as soon as the buds show color. Use a fine spray of clear water on the buds and top foliage as long as the color does not show, to keep down red spider, and also spray the plants regularly twice a week with a tobacco extract, to keep thrips at a distance.

L.

A SNAPDRAGON CATECHISM.

As I intend to grow snapdragons and am somewhat uncertain about the best way of growing them to obtain good results, I should like to get some information.

1—Can as good results be obtained from cuttings as from seed? I bought, late last fall, some cuttings from a good grower in New York. I kept them in 3-inch pots for a time and then planted them in the bench, in soil that had been used for chrysanthemums. I have been feeding them with cow manure water and get the quality, but perhaps not the quantity. As the plants did not show a tendency to send out many root shoots, I planted them rather closely, about eight inches apart. I am getting an average of four to six spikes from each plant, with stems one-third inch in diameter, and have at present two spikes with blooms closely set, measuring eighteen inches. I think I will keep these for seed and see how long they will grow.

2—When grown in the proper manner, do snapdragons need tying up?

3—Is disbudding merely beneficial, or necessary?

4—Is crushed bone the best food to mix with the soil, or is there something better?

5—When must I sow the seed to obtain plants to give me blooms for Christmas?

6—Is Nelrose a good variety to flower in the winter, or is the much advertised Silver Pink a better sort for winter blooming, although it is a taller and more spindly grower, with blooms farther apart on the stem than Nelrose?

C. V. F. N.—Can.

I will answer your several questions to the best of my ability, but would say that cultural methods have a great deal to do with successful snapdragon growing, no matter whether seedlings or cuttings are used.

1—Seedlings unquestionably possess more vigor than cuttings and are more disease-proof. Cuttings are much more subject to fungoid affections than seedlings, but to perpetuate special varieties, propagation by means of cuttings is much practiced. An objection to seedlings is that they do not come true to color, but if carefully selected seed from a reliable source is used the number of rogues is comparatively small. If you are growing one variety only, it will pay you to save the seed, but as some plants are superior to others in quality of flowers, I would protect the spikes with gauze to prevent fertilization by insects. It is well to note that pink varieties are not good winter bloomers, as are the white and yellow sorts. I have not yet secured a true winter-blooming pink snapdragon.

2—Tall varieties do need tying up, but the intermediate type usually grown commercially is best supported by means of wires and cross strings in the same way as carnations.

3—Disbudding improves the quality of the spike. It is not necessary. Some varieties make weak side shoots, needing no disbudding.

4—Well decayed cow or horse manure is decidedly preferable to bone in the soil. Fine bone is useful as a top-dressing when the plants are in active growth. A mulch of old manure, well pulverized, is also beneficial. Add a little bone to the manure, and after one or two waterings you will find the mulch alive with active roots.

5—Plants from seed sown in early May, if planted early in August, will start flowering in October and will give a nice Christmas crop. Of course these plants will throw a flower spike before being planted, which should be broken off, not pinched off, leaving it until the flowers start to open. If you pinch while the wood is soft, the plants will break weakly and many of the shoots will not flower at all.

6—Nelrose is a splendid pink snapdragon; so is Virginia, but Silver Pink is most widely grown. C. W.

LEAF-MINER ON MUMS.

Enclosed you will find two leaves taken from mums attacked by some kind of insect. It appears to me to be the leaf-miner. Please let me know what to do to kill it. B. B.—Mass.

The trouble is caused by the leaf-miner, tephritis, an insect commonly seen in celery leaves. The insects lay their eggs between the inner and outer layers of the leaves, and the larvæ eat their way around without puncturing the skin, thereby rendering themselves almost immune to tobacco extracts, insecticides or any of the poisons. The only really efficient remedy is to pick off all the leaves affected and burn them. The larvæ may be crushed in the leaf by the thumb and forefinger, but the process is slow and it is almost impossible to get all of them that way. If the plants are sprayed with soot water it will often discourage the industry of this particular pest. If B. B. has any celery in his vicinity he is almost certain to find the leaves affected in the same way as those of his chrysanthemums. Chas. H. Totty.

CUSCUTA, KILLER OF MUMS.

Enclosed you will find a sample of a peculiar growth that is killing our Smith's Advance chrysanthemums. This vegetation wraps itself around the roots of the mums and does not seem to come above the surface of the soil. So far we have only found it on Smith's Advance. What is the parasite, and how may we exterminate it?

J. C. A.—Tenn.

While the growth as yet has not shown itself above ground, I am inclined to think it will, for so far as I can make out from the specimen submitted it is the cuscuta, commonly known as the dodder plant, a parasitic twiner belonging to the order of convolvulaceæ. The seed germinates in the ground and as soon as the shoot gets through the soil it attaches itself to a plant and becomes a parasite, sucking its nourishment from the host plant and eventually strangling it. The dodder, in one or another of its many species, is found in most countries and mostly in low, swampy ground. If J. C. A. used rich black soil from a low bottom, it is safe to say that the seeds were present in the soil, unless the variety Smith's Advance was brought in from some other locality, as the dodder is not so particular as to prefer this mum to any other. If this particular variety never comes above the surface, as J. C. A. says, it is hard to see how it perpetuates itself. That is why I think it will appear above ground as the season advances.

It is difficult to say how this pest may be eradicated, as it is twined around the roots of the mum plants. A dressing of lime may help and if the chrysanthemums are encouraged to make a strong growth they may overcome it. Failing that, I see nothing for J. C. A. to do but to clean out the plants entirely, with every particle of soil, and replace them with another crop and soil taken from some other section.

Every year our old friend, the dodder, crops up somewhere, as an additional crop with the mum, but I never have heard of its interfering much with the results of the crop. Chas H. Totty.

STAGHORN A PLATYCERIUM.

We are enclosing a frond taken from a fern which we sold to one of our customers as Nephrolepis davallioides furcans, or the Staghorn fern. Our customer, however, who wanted the Staghorn fern, informs us that the variety sent him is not the Staghorn fern. Is not Nephrolepis davallioides furcans commonly called Staghorn?

N. & U.—Fla.

The fern in question, Nephrolepis davallioides furcans, is not correctly known as the Staghorn fern, this name being applied to Platycerium alcicorne. W. H. T.

"FANCY FERNS."

Can you give me the botanical name of the ferns commonly called "fancy ferns"?

E. H.—Md.

The "fancy ferns," as they are called in the wholesale trade, usually are forms of Asplenium Filix-femina, a species of which botanists have described more than fifty varieties, many of them growing wild in large quantities in the northern United States. In old botanies this fern was called Athyrium Filix-femina, but later revisions place it among the aspleniums. W. H. T.

RIDDING FERNS OF SCALE.

Will you please tell us what ails this fern and what to do for it? Spraying with water does not have any effect.

F. D.—Mich.

The nephrolepis frond forwarded with this query was badly infested with the common brown scale, or turtle scale, as it is frequently termed, and the first step to take would be to cut off and burn all the fronds that are in as bad condition as the specimen. Then prepare a dip composed of one part, by measure, of tobacco extract to fifty parts water, and after dipping the plants in this solution, lay them down on the bench to drain off.

By using this dip three or four times at intervals of one week this particular scale may be eradicated. W. H. T.

SHEEP MANURE FOR FERNS.

In what proportion should sheep manure be mixed with soil to make a good compost for ferns and palms?

H. C.—La.

Ferns in general do not require the addition of sheep manure to the potting soil, but a sprinkling of sheep manure on the surface of the soil is beneficial to plants that are becoming somewhat starved. This treatment acts well on adiantum and nephrolepis.

In the compost for palms, a 6-inch pot filled with the manure to a wheelbarrow load of soil will be beneficial. A larger proportion than this sometimes will sour the soil. W. H. T.

REMEDY FOR SCALE ON FERNS.

I am enclosing a frond taken from a Boston fern that was badly infested with a scale of some kind. Please tell me what scale this is and what is the best remedy for it. P. O. M.—Ohio.

The nephrolepis frond referred to was badly infested with the common brown fern scale, an insect that breeds rapidly and soon spoils the plants upon which it is found. This trouble may be kept down by regular sprayings each week with a solution of tobacco extract, using one of the commercial extracts in the proportion of one fluid ounce to one gallon of water. If there are many fronds in this condition I would cut off and burn the worst of them, and then give the plants a dip in the solution as the first treatment, following this with the spraying as noted above. W. H. T.

REMEDY FOR BROWN SCALE.

I am enclosing an infected fern leaf, which one of my customers sent me. What is the disease and what is a remedy for it?

F. J. A.—Neb.

The specimen in question is a portion of a nephrolepis frond badly infested with the common brown, or turtle, scale, an insect frequently found on ferns and one that spreads rapidly. Dippings in a solution of tobacco soap or extract of tobacco—the commercial extract, such as may be purchased from the leading seed stores—is a good remedy for this particular scale.

Try the minimum strength of solution as directed on the packages of these preparations, it being safer to use the treatment two or three times rather than to risk too strong a solution in one dose. W. H. T.

Madison, Conn.—Frank Dowd, who has two houses, says he finds business rather quiet. He had nice sweet peas outside this spring and grows some gladioli.

Westbrook, Conn.—Brooks Bros. sold out of bedding stock this season. They disposed of about 1,900 geraniums with their large auto truck. They are growing a few hundred mums.

Guilford, Conn.—B. A. Latham is erecting a sweet pea house 16x56 feet, thirteen feet to the ridge. He has one large carnation house and is growing 5,000 mums and 550 ferns. Mr. Latham started five years ago with a lean-to house 9x16. This season he had a quarter acre of asters and sold all clean.

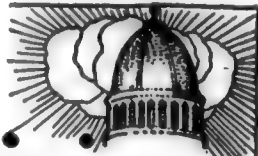

Fall River, Mass.—Chatterton Warburton has leased new quarters in Wilbur House.

New Britain, Conn.—F. H. Bollerer has leased the greenhouses recently operated by Mrs. E. Eggert.

East River, Conn.—Paul Watrous has two carnation houses, each 80x100 feet, and grows some fine blooms, also a few sweet peas.

East River, Conn.—Charles Hotchkiss is growing 6,000 mums and is remodeling his carnation house, putting in new benches. He grew 4,000 snapdragons last spring and disposed of them in New Haven. Mr. Hotchkiss has only had two years' experience in the business, but he is doing well.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

A LEGAL PHASE THAT COUNTS.

In affirming a judgment against a florist for $2,250 damages on account of injury sustained by the plaintiff when he was struck by the florist's delivery truck, the Pennsylvania Supreme court had occasion the other day to apply the rule that before the owner of such an automobile may be held liable for such an accident it must appear that the truck was being operated at the time in connection with his business. In other words, when an automobile or delivery wagon used primarily for business purposes is being temporarily used for pleasure purposes by an employee, the owner is not liable for injuries resulting from careless operation of the vehicle.

In the Pennsylvania case, the florist's principal contention was that the plaintiff failed to prove that, at the time of the accident, one of the florist's employees was operating the automobile delivery wagon in connection with the florist's business, but the court said:

"The name of the floral company was on the wagon. At the time of the accident the secretary of the company was operating it. Though the accident occurred on Sunday, the evidence showed that the company's store was open for business during that day, and that the wagon was coming from the direction of the street on which the store was located. From these facts a fair inference for the jury was that the wagon was being operated in connection with the business at the time of the collision." S.

LIABILITY FOR RENT.

Recent litigation to which the Robinson Seed & Plant Co., of Dallas, Tex., was a party has resulted in a decision by the Texas Court of Civil Appeals of some interesting legal phases relating to a tenant's liability for rent after quitting possession of the leased premises before expiration of his lease. (See 167 Southwestern Reporter 749.)

The company leased the premises in question for five years under agreement forbidding subletting without the landlord's consent, but, on quitting business before expiration of the 5-year term, the company obtained permission to sublet to tenants who might prove satisfactory to the landlord, subject to the company's remaining primarily liable for the rent. The company could not procure tenants who would accept the unexpired part of the lease, unless the landlord would consent to renew at the same rental, which the latter refused to do. Later the company abandoned the premises and refused to pay rent accruing thereafter, on the ground that it was released from liability by the landlord's refusal to accept the new tenants offered. On expiration of the five years, the landlord sued for the excess of the rents for the unexpired period above the amount received from tenants who occupied the premises for part of the time, and the Court of Civil Appeals sustained the right of recovery, saying:

"By the contract of lease in the instant case, defendant was bound for the rent for the unexpired term and, after it abandoned the premises, it was the duty of the plaintiffs to relet the premises for the unexpired term to the best advantage they could in the exercise of ordinary diligence in that behalf. This they did."

Answering a contention made by the company that the landlord was bound to accept the tenants offered by the company, the court said:

"We think the contention unsound, since said tenants would accept the premises only on condition that the unexpired lease was extended for a long period of time for the same rental. Such an extension of time would undoubtedly have prevented loss to defendant, but, on the other hand, would have resulted in a loss to plaintiffs in error of what they considered the increase in rental value of the leased premises. This, plaintiffs, of course, were not bound to do, either by the lease or any rule of law." S.

IRISES FOR CUTTING.

What are the best sorts of irises for the cut flower trade? Are they cut and shipped while in bud? How are they treated or hardened for shipping?

F. M. P.—O.

Several varieties of irises are suitable for cutting. The kind mostly seen on the cut flower markets, however, is Iris Hispanica, or Spanish iris, a bulbous species and inexpensive. These are perfectly hardy and should be planted outdoors from October 15 to November 15. Good varieties are Chrysolora, Louise, King of the Blues and British Queen. The English irises flower a week or so later than the Spanish. They produce stouter stalks and somewhat larger flowers, but they are somewhat more expensive. These irises are always allowed to expand fully before being cut and shipped. They are popular market flowers from April 15 until the outdoor season ends.

The German irises flower two to three weeks earlier than the Spanish. They are hardy and of easy culture, but are not so much used as cut flowers. These and the Japanese irises, or I. Kämpferi, which flower the latest of the whole iris family, are best if cut in bud, if to be shipped any considerable distance. Iris Sibirica and the pure white variety, Snow Queen, flowering outdoors in June, are fine for cutting, especially the last-named, and are of easy culture. The flowers possess good substance and ship well. Plant the German, Japanese and Siberian irises in September for best results. C. W.

News from Abroad

Haarlem, Holland.—According to one of the reports of the Haarlem section of the Union for Flower Bulb Cultivation, tulip bulbs are said to be suitable for pig food.

Hamburg, Germany.—The declared values of the lily of the valley pips for export to the United States, invoiced through the Hamburg U. S. consulate in the two shipping seasons since the war began, are as follows: In 1914, $68,450; in 1915, $38,567.

Lyons, France.—J. Pernet-Ducher, who has been called by E. G. Hill "the world's greatest rosarian," is indignant that other raisers should have named novelties after his two sons, Claude and Georges, both of whom have been killed in battle. M. Pernet-Ducher notifies the trade that he "reserves to himself the duty and right of naming two of his best new roses after his dear sons."

Sassenheim, Holland.—Bulb shipments are much later than usual this season, because of the difficulty the growers have experienced in getting the stock cleaned and cured. With rain practically every day in July, the atmosphere was so saturated with moisture that it was impossible to get the bulbs dry at the time packing usually begins. Shipments are from two weeks to a month later than usual.

Berlin, Germany.—In spite of a seventy-five per cent reduction in general exports to the United States, the declared values of plants and trees invoiced at the Berlin U. S. consulate increased from $16,003 in 1914 to $22,311 in 1915.

London, England.—In the matter of the British government's permission to import one-half of last year's quantity of Japanese lily bulbs, the trade committee appointed to devise regulations has reported: "Application for a license will be considered from firms or individuals who can prove to the committee that they themselves actually imported direct last season. The basis on which a license will be given will be for a quantity not exceeding fifty per cent of last year's imports as proved to the satisfaction of the control committee. Importers must in their turn undertake to supply, if desired, last season's customers with a similar proportion. This restriction will not apply in favor of customers who obtained their supplies at the public auctions. Prices to be fair and reasonable. In the event of a disagreement, either party may bring the matter before the committee. The members of the committee are H. Morgan Veitch, chairman; W. H. Page, W. A. Sherwood, Thos. Rochford and W. H. Brown.

A EUROPEAN CYCLAMEN HOUSE.

A picture from one of the warring countries of Europe, even if it is a picture of so peaceful a scene as a greenhouse undisturbed by shot or shell, is of double interest on this side of the Atlantic at present, when few if any Americans are visiting Europe and taking notes, personally, of what the European growers are accomplishing. Let cyclamen growers, and any others who are interested, examine the cyclamen seed stock of the European specialist, Ferd. Fischer, of Wiesbaden, Germany, as shown in the illustration, and get such information as the photograph will give them. What the picture tells is supplemented by these notes from Mr. Fischer himself:

"Of the many varieties of cyclamen introduced into the United States, few have received such flattering attention from the flower-loving public as have the salmon-colored hybrids, Glory of Wandsbek, Rose of Wandsbek, Pearl of Zehlendorf and Rose of Zehlendorf. All large-flowering, robust-growing cyclamens, which have appeared since the older and weaker-growing salmon type had its day, are descendants of the four varieties just mentioned. All these four are of German origin.

"Glory of Wandsbek is salmon-red; Pearl of Zehlendorf is salmon; Rose of Wandsbek and Rose of Zehlendorf are both salmon-rose. While the two Zehlendorfs bear larger individual flowers, the two Wandsbeks produce them more freely. Both types sell equally well. In the illustration the two benches on the left are planted with the Zehlendorf varieties; in the two benches on the right are the Wandsbek sorts. In the picture but one-third of my salmon-color seed stock is shown. You may judge from that how large the demand for it is. But the demand for all other colors, also, has increased wonderfully of late.

"The war, luckily, has not interfered with my shipments to the United States. On the contrary, my orders for seeds have increased and I am happy to state that not one shipment or remittance has been lost. In sections of the United States where cyclamen culture was formerly considered unprofitable on account of the climate, new trials have led to success; so my customers inform me. As a plant for Christmas and Easter trade, as well as for the ordinary winter and spring trade, the cyclamen sells excellently."

ANALYSIS OF SHEEP MANURE.

Will you kindly state what the result is from sowing pulverized sheep manure with wheat, instead of chemical fertilizers? Would it be advisable to use the sheep manure, or is it not suitable for such a purpose? Will you please give the analysis of sheep manure?

P. F. C.—Pa.

The answer to the question is purely an economic one. Pulverized sheep manure has the following composition:

	Maximum.	Minimum.	Average.
Nitrogen	3.09%	1.51%	2.50%
Phosphorus	1.10%	0.40%	0.65%
Equal to Phosphoric acid	2.50%	0.95%	1.50%
Potassium	1.85%	0.30%	1.25%
Equal to potash.....	2.24%	0.33%	1.50%

The amounts in the third and last lines of the foregoing table are not additional components of the manure, but phosphorus and potassium, respectively, stated in different terms. By comparison, the figures for average content in nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are 1.75, 0.75 and 0.85 for pig manure and 1.34, 0.40 and 0.70 for cattle manure, showing the sheep manure to be richer in these elements than either cattle or pig manure. No doubt sheep manure, sowed with wheat when seeding it, would benefit the crop, but whether it would yield enough return to pay for the cost of the manure and the labor of applying, depends on the character of the soil, regarding which the inquirer gives no information, and on the cost of the fertilizer. In the corn belt of Illinois its use is said not to be profitable.

Salmon-colored Cyclamens for Seed Stock at Ferd. Fischer's, Wiesbaden.

LIQUID PUTTY.

Please tell us how to make liquid putty to use in our putty machine.

G. F. C.—Tenn.

One old-time florist makes liquid putty of one-third lard oil, two-thirds linseed oil and enough whiting to produce the desired consistency.

W. E. P. says: "I make my own liquid putty, of whiting, linseed oil and Japan drier. Sift best whiting (thoroughly dried) into the oil through a household flour sifter, or other sieve, and stir until stiff enough to stay on the bars without running. The quantity of each depends on the temperature; better make it a little too stiff, for the Japan drier will thin it some. This makes a skin on the surface and should be added when the putty is to be used; quantity, about one teaspoonful to each pint, or perhaps less, according to the quality of the drier and conditions of the weather; stir at once and use soon."

LILIES FOR EASTER, 1917.

When should we start our lilies for next year's Easter? From last year's experience we judge that October 1 will be about right. We wish to use the Japanese giganteums and will not be able to give them much over 60 degrees during February and March. Should cold storage bulbs be used or will the new crop be ready in time? Any information you can give us will be welcome. We had excellent results last year by following C. W.'s advice in The Review.

G. F. S.—Mo.

Cold storage giganteum lilies would be quite unsuitable to use for Easter, as they make a much more feeble growth than the new season's bulbs. These latter should, unless something unforeseen arises, come to hand in ample time. If you can pot your bulbs even as late as November 10, they should be on time. Place the bulbs below the benches when potted. They can, if space is limited, be set several tiers deep. Give them a temperature of 60 degrees at night from the start. It is a mistake to keep this lily cool in the early stages of growth. This and an oversupply of water is responsible for much of the disease we see, for which dealers are unjustly blamed. If you can give your plants an average night temperature of 60 degrees in February and March, they will come in on time. You should be able to count the buds easily six weeks before they are to flower.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. J. M. Thorburn.

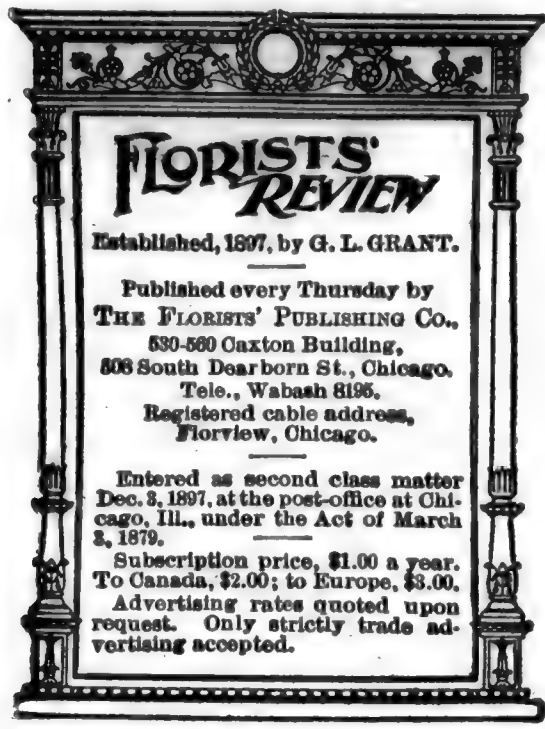

Mrs. Emily Thorburn, widow of James M. Thorburn, founder of the seed business of J. M. Thorburn & Co., died last week of infirmities due to advanced age, at her summer home at Patchogue, N. Y. Mrs. Thorburn, whose winter home was at 117 East Tenth street, New York, was born ninety-one years ago, a daughter of Joseph Cox, a New York importer.

The deceased for many years was actively identified with philanthropies connected with the Grace Protestant Episcopal church. When in 1846 Grace church was moved from the little rectangular edifice in which the parish was founded, at Broadway and Rector street, to its present location, Mr. and Mrs. Thorburn were the first couple married in the new edifice. Mrs. Thorburn leaves a daughter, Miss Clara M. Thorburn.

Tobe Teason.

Tobe Teason, for the last eight years in the employ of the Mullanphy Florists, St. Louis, died August 16. The funeral was held two days later, from his late residence, 3113 Cass avenue, his fellow employees acting as pallbearers.

Leavenworth, Kan.—R. C. Hinz, proprietor of the Hinz Floral Co., is spending the late midsummer at Plum lake, Wis.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1917: President, Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; vice-president, A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.

Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

THE preliminary schedule for the New York show, March 16 to 23, 1917, has been issued. Copies may be had by addressing John Young, secretary, 53 West Twenty-eighth street.

THE florists who are trying to place orders for paper boxes, tissue and wrapping paper for early delivery are getting an insight into some of the trade paper publishers' troubles these days.

CHARLES W. JOHNSON, Morgan Park, Ill., secretary of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, has issued a list of seventeen special prizes to be competed for at the annual exhibition at Philadelphia, November 8. Copies of the list will be sent to anyone who addresses Mr. Johnson for them.

GROWERS of chrysanthemums have been experiencing more than their ordinary troubles during the unusual heat this summer. Now that the early blooms are beginning to show color, after a hot, damp night rot sets in. It is just another argument against putting the chrysanthemum on the market before the frost is in the air.

AT New York next year the S. A. F. should make a new record for the size of its conventions. If the concerns with headquarters there, supplying the needs of florists, each make even a small exhibit, the trades' display will be the largest ever, and if half the florists within a night's ride visit the convention, the Grand Central Palace will not be large enough to hold them all at one time. It will be in marked contrast to the conditions of the last two years.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper. Among those who have this week enrolled themselves for more than one year in advance are:

THE YOUNGEST PRESIDENT.

January 1, 1917, when Robert C. Kerr takes office as president of the S. A. Mr. Kerr did not become a member of the S. A. F. until 1913, so he attained the presidency in three years. How long recent incumbents have worked and waited for the office is shown by this list:

ONE DIFFERENCE.

When the S. A. F. convention met in Chicago it set a record for size, but if it got a line in any Chicago daily it was such an inconspicuous mention nobody saw it. Quite the contrary, the S. A. F. last week at Houston, Tex., held the smallest convention since the society put off its swaddling clothes, but the Houston newspapers published columns about it; a leading daily gave an average of half a page to the trade's affairs for five days in a row!

On the opening day of the convention the Houston Post said editorially:

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

We have with us this week more than 100 of the live men of this country. They are men who love beauty, they are in tune with nature, they are artists in sense and feeling. But they are more than artists. They are business men who have won success while at the same time adding to the loveliness of the world and the desirability of living.

Houston is glad to welcome these men—and women, too, for some of the most enterprising florists are women—to this city. It is a pleasure to have them here and to hear their comments on what is soon going to be one of the prettiest cities in the country.

We are lovers of flowers and we are fortunate in that almost every plant will grow here luxuriantly and with little care.

While there may not be many beauty spots to show these connoisseurs in 1916, we promise them that when they shall visit Houston again it will be as attractive a city as they will find anywhere.

We are, too, glad to have the American florists here because they are sensible people and they are giving expression to some most interesting truths during their stay in Houston. We are learning of them lessons that properly applied will be of value.

And there are statements made by these visitors that will prove eyeopeners to many Texas people.

Texas florists import from other states ninety per cent of all the cut flowers they sell in this state. The express and the delay take more than one-half the legitimate profit.

Texas florists are the best advertised of any in the United States, due to their active work for the welfare of themselves and their people.

Houston offers to the greenhouse man greater inducements than does any other location in the entire country. Here the freight rates, the soil, the climate, the rainfall, all conduce to success. And the matter of saving of coal is a feature that must appeal to the northern grower; for here the greenhouse fires are not started until November and are discontinued in March—and they are not hot fires at that.

Houston is used to conventions, but we hope the visitors find that we are all the more anxious for them to enjoy their visit to us because of that. The Post, joined by every citizen of the city, gladly hangs the lachstring within easy reach and says to the florists of America, "We are glad you are here."

If we had our choice many of us would prefer being a whale in a pond rather than a minnow in the ocean.

DIFFERENT, BUT ALL ALIKE.

Here are four letters that came together on the Editor's desk. Each one deals with a different feature of The Review, but the approval is the same in each case.

To begin with, here is a subscriber's view:

I look for The Review with as much pleasure as I do my meals and I would not care to be without it, for it is business food.—F. W. Meyer, Cherryvale, Kan., August 13, 1916.

The next one is from a man who ran a classified ad, one of the busy little liners that another subscriber called "the little wonder ads." This is what he says:

It pays to advertise in The Review, for the calls we have had from the ad in The Review have been enormous.—J. J. Finger, West Allis, Wis., August 10, 1916.

The next one is from a man who had a second-hand boiler to sell and used four lines in the For Sale department. He ordered the advertisement printed five times, but after it had appeared once this is what he wrote:

Please take out the ad in The Review or we shall have to hire extra help to answer telegrams, telephones and letters and the people coming in person to see that boiler. Actually, we sold the boiler before we received our copy of the paper that had the ad.—Marysville Floral Co., Marysville, O., August 14, 1916.

Then comes a letter from a man who was using a half-page ad; his expenditure is not 40 cents per week, but $15 per week. This is what he says:

The advertisement is bringing such good returns we will have you insert it again in the Convention Number. This half-page advertisement has cost less per dollar of sales than any other pansy seed advertising we ever have done.—Wm. Toole & Son, Baraboo, Wis., August 12, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The cool weather that promised much the early part of last week was of short duration. Not so short, though, that it did not have a beneficent effect on much of the stock. The supply, however, remains inordinately short, with the result that all salable stock is cleared soon after receipt. Shipping business has been phenomenally good for the time of year.

Beauties are not in sufficient supply to meet the demand, and other good

TRY SOME OF THESE NEW BEAUTIES YOUR TRADE WILL LIKE THEM

For many years the best liked flowers of summer have been the short and medium Beauties, the first cut from young plants. And again we have a large crop. Much the best roses now in market, following the hot weather. Excellent values at 4c, 6c, 8c, 10c, 12c, 16c to 20c.

NEW GLADIOLI

We have a fine cut of Gladioli—all the old favorites, like America, King and Augusta, and novelties you seldom can find elsewhere, like Myrtle, Mrs. Pendleton, etc. You will like our Glads.

GIGANTEUM LILIES

We have probably the largest (certainly the steadiest) supply of Giganteum Lilies to be found anywhere in the west. We NEVER are out, and just now, when good lilies are scarce elsewhere, we are supplying all who come, including many other wholesalers. The price is $8.00 to $10.00 per 100. Fine stock, cut tight for shipping.

THE BEST ROSES

Mrs. Russell has shown marked improvement in quality the last few days—it easily is the leading hot-weather rose and we have the largest supply in the country. Milady and Sunburst rank next to Russell, but we also can furnish Ophelia, Ward, Brilliant, etc., as good as can be found anywhere.

GOOD ASTERS

In spite of the dry weather, that has ruined many a crop, we offer good Asters—long stems, large, full flowers, grown under irrigation; all colors. We shall be glad to have you try them, for we know you will want more.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

We can supply all the Valley you need—on telegraph order if need be, but why not arrange for regular shipments, so YOU will always have some on hand?

roses of medium and short length are clearing. Those with long stems are not to be had. Generally speaking, the excessive heat that has visited this part of the country recently has had a decidedly bad effect on rose stock. The blooms are small and soft. As one grower remarked, the roses now being received in the Chicago market are little different from those grown in the far south. Russell is beginning to arrive in larger supply, but it is not yet plentiful enough to satisfy demand. Ophelia is short, both in length of stem and in supply.

In a short market it goes without saying that valley is scarce. Easter lilies are none too plentiful and clear accordingly. Were it not for eastern stock, received in some quantity, the price would be higher. Cattleyas climbed up in price last week and have not yet come down. Though a few may yet be found, daisies are practically out of the market. Outdoor snapdragon is available, but it is not moving rapidly. The cut of gladioli is improving both as to quality and quantity, and prices are holding up remarkably well. A scattering of garden flowers here and there testifies to their rapid decline. Good asters are about the scarcest item on the market. Sweet peas are again appearing on the tables. Rubrum lilies, too, are offered.

Greens are in sufficient supply to satisfy all requirements and move in a manner that can leave no room for complaint.

The new location is considered much better than the previous one, Mr. Ronsley is a man who makes friends readily and the list of former creditors shows that he has had the confidence of some of the most conservative houses.

None of the Chicagoans who attended the S. A. F. convention seem to have tarried long. Most of those who had nothing to sell reached home August 19 to 21, but it is understood A. Lange and wife went to New York by boat from New Orleans. The salesmen, who constituted Chicago's principal representation, are working their way home, calling on the trade en route.

The transformation of the W. J. Smyth store on Michigan avenue is approaching completion. The entire west wall along the boulevard has been taken out and replaced with plate glass. Anyone passing can see the entire interior and the showing of windows is the largest of any flower store in town.

Herbert Stone, manager for Mrs. Williams, proprietor of the Atlas Floral Co., has the sympathy of his many friends in the death of Mrs. Stone's mother, who was buried August 20. The trade sent numerous floral offerings.

At the office of the American Bulb Co., A. Miller, president, says its representatives at the Houston convention not only sold the exhibit but sent home orders for future delivery aggregating over $2,000.

Herman Rolff, 7052 Stony Island avenue, writes that he is starting to grow flowers in a greenhouse for the Chicago market and will welcome suggestions as to what kind of seeds to sow to keep up a supply all winter for profit. Here is a chance for some commissionman who needs another shipper.

The automobile of William A. Beaudry, head of the Beaudry Nursery Co., 700 Railway Exchange building, stolen several days ago, was recovered by the police at Decatur, Ill. The young fellow driving it said he bought it in Chicago for $125, but he was held and sent back to the city.

The continuance of hot weather has at last constrained Robert Northam, manager of the George Reinberg wholesale house, to take a two weeks' vacation. He will remain at home with his family.

Some unusually fine gladioli, such as Panama and Niagara, are being shipped to the Chicago market by C. H. Ketcham, of South Haven, Mich. The stock is handled by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

With the return of August Barnett to his accustomed place in Erne & Klingel's, F. G. Klingel has left for a two weeks' outing.

Carnation planting in the greenhouses of Pyfer & Olsem, Wilmette, is finished. Speaking of business, A. T. Pyfer says his firm never had a better summer. Miss Nettie Parker will return next week.

Few of the many friends of Anton Then know that he is an accomplished wood carver. A specimen of his work is to be seen in the gavel presented to President Alex Henderson, of the Chicago Florists' Club, by Mr. Then last spring. But in the office of the greenhouses he has many curious and interesting specimens of his handicraft. Now we know why he spends so much time every winter in the Florida woods.

According to Felix Reichling, of Peter Reinberg's, the two cool days the early part of last week had a wonderful effect on Russell roses. Emil Reichling visited Sister Lakes, Mich., last week end. He was accompanied by John Evert, of Evert Bros.

Members of the trade were glad to see Harry Manheim, of Hoerber Bros., who recently met with an injury to his head, back in his accustomed place. The injury to his boy's leg proved to be a compound fracture and, though serious enough, the doctors expect a perfect recovery.

Frank Ayers, of C. W. McKellar's, has returned from a most enjoyable vacation. One week he spent on Mackinac Island, another on a lake trip to Buffalo.

A contract for the installation of a complete store equipment, including fixtures and refrigerator, for Stuhl-dreher Bros., Mansfield, O., is reported by T. E. Waters, head of the fixture and supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Not bad summer business when orders for 20,000 gladioli for shipping are booked in one day, thinks Eric Johnson, head of the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co.

Otto Frese, manager of the cut flower department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., scalded his left arm August 21, but quick action on his part prevented serious consequences.

An elaborate book entitled "Modern Flower Shops" is being compiled by the A. L. Randall Co. It contains complete store designs, layouts and arrangements and gives actual examples of how efficient layouts have economized space and made the difference between an attractive and an unattractive store. The book should prove of real value to those contemplating building or remodeling.

Reinholdt Schiller leaves for Toronto, Can., the night of August 26. While in the Dominion he may go to Montreal. He expects to be gone two weeks.

Mrs. Horton, of the Bassett & Washburn office, will leave August 26 for Niagara Falls. John Horstman and family are camping on the Kankakee river.

Miss O. A. Tonner, of O. A. & L. A. Tonner, returned from her outing in Wisconsin August 22.

During the hot days painters have been busy in the establishment of Ken-nicott Bros Co. and the result is quite refreshing.

Visitors.

David Geddis, who once was with C. A. Samuelson and who is president of the new St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., was in town two days this week on a buying expedition.

A visitor to members of the trade this week was F. C. Suchy, of San Antonio, Tex.

Carl Scharfenberger, of Defiance, O., visited the market this week.

Among the trade visitors this week was August Freese, president of the New Haven Floral Co., of New Haven, Ind.

A visitor from the Hoosier state on the market this week was G. W. Doswell, of Doswell & Son, Fort Wayne.

The Market.

There was a lively and healthy market in the wholesale cut flower section at the week end, and August 19 the demand was about equal to the supply. Shipments of roses were especially light and of carnations practically nil, the only surplus being the refuse and lowest grade of asters and gladioli. There now are some splendid asters, which easily bring $3 per hundred—a few choice ones even more. These were quickly absorbed on arrival by the bon-ton stores. There is little else for funeral requirements in the markets. Of course, there is a great abundance of gladioli, and 50 cents per hundred seems to be the bottom price. This grade seems to meet with but little demand and thousands remain unsold. For the better grades $1 to $2 are the quotations, with America the favorite, as usual. These and the asters may be termed the backbone of the market.

Hydrangeas and goldenrods are abundant. These help to give variety to the window decorations. Cosmos, Golden Glow, dahlias, bouvardias, rudbeckias—of these there always are enough and to spare. Valley has been running wild again, owing to short supply. Some say they received $8 and more per hundred during the week, but August 19 $6 was the general price, with little being offered. Lilies, too, took on new life during the week and at times extra quality flowers sold up to $10 per hundred. From this down to 5 cents per flower was the last quotation. The supply at last has not run equal to the demand.

Orchids still are scarce and high-priced. One authority declared values fluctuated between 50 cents and $1, the higher price being more frequently demanded. A break this week in both orchids and lilies is expected.

Roses improve but slowly in quality, and prices for even the low grades and short-stemmed stock are better. Good stock of any of the newer varieties sold up to $8 per hundred, when selected. With the rapid improvement now assured in size of bloom and length of stem, better prices may be looked for. There are few American Beauties arriving. Anything first-class sells at $25 per hundred.

Various Notes.

Up to the night of August 19 none of the conventionists had returned from Houston. But telegrams from Secretary Young and others had proclaimed the glad tidings for 1917 and everyone is delighted with the decision in favor of New York and the election of Abraham Lincoln Miller as vice-president of the S. If you attempted to send to every reader of The Review even a simple circular advertising your business.

The circular itself, the paper (it has doubled in price within a year), printing, envelopes, addressing, etc., would more than double the cost. And even at that, you would be forcing your proposition upon the attention of the people to whom you sent it.

On the Other Hand

No one who buys and reads The Review is forced to do so. He does it from choice.

Your business announcements stated in The Review come to the attention of the buyers you seek in a manner and at a time that is psychologically correct.

You can print in The Review a half page, each issue, for a whole year, for what one circular would cost if you attempted to reach the entire circulation of The Review just once.

The Comparison is Startling

The one distribution of 12,200 circulars would cost approximately $600.00—one "flash in the pan," then silence.

A half page in The Review would cost only $546.00 for a whole year; it would be seen, read and remembered, if not this week, then next week for 52 issues—634,400 copies.

Every modern business man knows the cumulative value of continuous effort.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Astermums, the name given to large-flowered, long-stemmed asters of a showy type, are the feature of the market this week. They command $3 and, occasionally, $4 per hundred, readily. They come in pink, white and lavender. The general aster situation is not rosy. It is becoming generally known that the aster crops in many sections of the east are a failure. So serious is the loss that there are growers who will cut almost nothing from their aster patches, while others will cut but a half crop, and those of poor quality. The loss of the asters is seriously felt in the cut flower market; flowers are scarcer than seems believable at this dull season. Relief is expected when the dahlias come into their own. The first dahlias are coming in now, but until cool nights become a settled thing dahlias are too soft to be satisfactory either for shipping or for critical local buyers.

Roses are becoming a little more plentiful. Prima Donna and Sunburst, with a few Double White Killarney, have come to the assistance of the regular summer varieties. Cattleyas have bounced upward from $7.20 to $10 per dozen, with sales at even $1 each, a surprising thing in August. Valley continues scarce at $5 and $6. There are hardly any carnations, save a few field-grown flowers, that sell, which is unusual. Gladioli and Easter lilies continue mainstays. The etceteras go fairly well; even Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora has resumed something of its old-time salableness.

Down at Sam Houston.

So far as can be learned, there were only six Philadelphians who answered to roll call at the S. A. F. convention at Houston, Tex., last week. Like the

Discussing the exhibition of the society, Raymond Brunswick expressed the opinion that a trades' display held in connection with a really fine flower show, such as the National Flower Show of last March, was far more satisfactory from an exhibitor's standpoint than a trades' display held in connection with a convention in midsummer. Mr. Brunswick thought that one large trade exhibition a year was enough and that, when held in connection with a flower show of magnitude, it would reimburse the exhibitor for his outlay, a happy result that rarely is to be expected in August.

Table ferns are a specialty; they comprise the best varieties. You want Mr. Aschmann's selection? Here it is: Pteris adiantoides, Pteris Wilsoni—these are all grown in pans, three to a pan—Pteris Mayii, P. cristata, P. albo-lineata, Cyrtomium falcatum and one or two more.

Mr. Aschmann is assisted by his son, who is taking a great interest in the business.

An Inspiration.

I ask the privilege of quoting the following lines from the Rev. G. T. Dowling, in the Churchman:

Never you mind the crowd, lad,
Nor fancy your life won't tell;
The work is the work for all, lad,
To him that doth it well,
Fancy the world a hill, lad;
Look where the millions stop.
You'll find the crowd at the base, lad;
There's always room at the top!
Courage and faith and patience!
There's space in the old world yet.
The better the chance you'll find, lad,
The farther along you get.
Keep your eye on the goal, lad;
Never despair nor drop.
Be sure that your path points upward.
There's always room at the top!

If you have not used this idea as yet, try it; see what your customer will say next time he sees you.

the sprays and set pieces all looked as if the flowers were withered, while the basket you sent looked as fresh as when it was delivered.

Business last week was only up to the standard for the summer. Stock has improved a little in quality. The gladiolus is the strongest flower at present and most in demand. Asters are arriving in better shape; they are not so small as formerly. There still are plenty of lilies, but not as many as last week. Roses are on the market, but there is little call for them.

the demand; occasionally we have to use swainsona. Gladioli and lilies are in limited supply and asters are small in flower, although there usually are enough to go around. A few sweet peas are seen, but most of them are short in stem.

From various reports, business has been typical for this time of the year, although there has been some hotel trade, as the hotels are all filled and turning people away. Detroit is almost a resort in the summer, having many conventions.

Various Notes.

Fred Nelson and Mr. Shastner, with the George Wittbold Co., Chicago, stopped over in Detroit while motoring east.

Philip Breitmeyer has returned from an extended visit west.

Joseph Streit, formerly of Buffalo, now of this city, has his houses ship-shape, having an especially nice stock of pot mums coming along.

The Market.

The continued hot weather has made business poor; there is little call for cut flowers and funeral work is about all there is. Gladioli and asters are of good quality and bring fair prices, gladioli selling at $5 per hundred and asters at $1 to $3. Roses are scarce and of little substance. There is scarcely any call for other flowers, though there are plenty of calendulas, coreopsis, snapdragons, etc.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, has an unusually large force of men on outdoor work. Mr. Murray had a large wedding decoration last week that called for practically all his palms and bay trees, besides a great many flowers.

William P. Peirce is building a large addition to his office on Elm street. His new greenhouse is about completed and ready for planting.

Edward M. Peirce, of Cottage street, is making extensive repairs on his heating system. Mr. Peirce reports business good for this season of the year.

Some fine asters are being shipped to Boston by Richard E. Nofftz, of Kempton street.

The Peckham Floral Co., of Fairhaven, has some unusually fine mums this season. A great deal of credit for the crop is due Frank L. Gray.

VIM

DELIVERY CARS

You Must Have "On the Minute Deliveries"

While your loads are ordinarily unusually light, your hauls are frequently very long, and long hauls make "on the minute deliveries" impossible without the most efficient delivery equipment.

Long hauls are nothing to a VIM.

A VIM is—a get away on the minute—365 days in the year delivery car.

It carries with it an air of quiet distinction and elegance that cannot fail to create a favorable impression and, as you know, appearance counts in your business as perhaps no other single item.

The VIM Delivery Car is a delivery car pure and simple, a sturdy dependable car with everything on it that a complete delivery car demands.

There are no extras to buy.

Don't judge a VIM by its price (that's low, $695 and $725, on account of our enormous production), but by its performance.

Judge it by the satisfactory service that it is giving thousands of business concerns large and small throughout the country.

See the VIM—get a demonstration—learn how it will fit your particular needs.

Enables you to purchase according to established practice in your business, and help pay for the car out of its earnings.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Little Rock, Ark.—Charles C. Waters, referee in bankruptcy, has closed the case of Paul M. Palez by declaring a second and final dividend of six and one-fifth per cent, which has been paid to creditors. November 11, 1915, a first dividend of five per cent was paid, making a total of eleven and one-fifth per cent realized by creditors in this case. Mr. Palez some time ago resumed business.

Boston, Mass.—The Transcript under date of August 15 states that Moses Penn, at 35 Hollander street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, in which liabilities are given as $6,057 and assets nothing. This has no connection with Penn the Florist, on Tremont street.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

S. J. Reuter & Son, of Westerly, R. I., are having the grower's difficulties with weather. "If Jupiter Pluvius is not soon replaced by old King Sol," remarked Louis Reuter, "we will think of going into the production of aquatics."

Conrad Schulz, also of Westerly, says his carnations are doing finely, planted on high ground. The season at Watch Hill opened auspiciously and a long one is anticipated. S. S. Pennock is seen occasionally, looking over the carnation plantations during his summer sojourn here—just to keep in trim, so to speak.

Lawrence Hay, of Rumford, R. I., who has the contract for keeping in order the fine grounds of the Agawam Hunt Club, says this has been his dampest season on the emerald. His place near the entrance is most attractive. The demand for plants and nursery stock is increasing annually.

C. W. Patt & Son and D. N. Potter are the principal market gardeners in Auburn, R. I., and are having the same experience in marketing their produce as many eastern growers. Quoting C. W. Patt: "It is hard when we have the goods that we cannot readily get them to market, especially when prices are so good." This did not refer to beans, of which I saw large quan-

MARIGOLDS UNDER GLASS.

Will you please advise me when to sow marigold seed to have plants in 2½-inch pots by October? How far apart should the plants be set in the benches?
Q. D. B.—Ky.

As the African and French marigolds have little or no value as cut flowers, I presume you have calendulas in mind. Their flowers are somewhat similar to those of the true marigolds. Calendulas have become quite an important flower under glass and will bloom over a long season. Sow the seeds on or about September 1 and pot off the plants singly as soon as they are large enough to handle. They will be sufficiently large and strong enough to bench early in October. Set the plants in rows twenty-four inches apart and allow eighteen inches between the plants. Use such soil as you would for mums or carnations. Give the plants a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees in winter. Raised benches in winter are preferable to solid beds, but the latter prove more satisfactory after the early part of March.

LILIES IN NORTHERN OHIO.

Will you kindly tell me whether Lilium giganteum, L. auratum, L. longiflorum and L. rubrum are perfectly hardy in northern Ohio? How are candidum lilies managed in order to have blooms on the market now? Mine bloom the last of June.
F. M. P.—O.

Lilium auratum and L. speciosum, which, I presume, you mean by rubrum, should prove perfectly hardy in northern Ohio, providing you plant the bulbs nine to twelve inches deep, on well drained ground, and give them a winter mulch. Plant the bulbs as soon as they arrive from Japan, which is about the end of November. Cover the ground where they are to be planted with leaves or straw, to exclude severe frost. Use some sharp sand below and over the bulbs, and be sure not to allow any manure to come in contact with the bulbs.

Lilium longiflorum, while it will winter, is less hardy and reliable than the other varieties named. By giganteum I suppose you mean L. longiflorum giganteum, and not the true Lilium giganteum, which is a noble lily, attaining a height of eight to ten feet, but rarely met with in America. The Japanese giganteum lilies should winter with you, but cannot be recommended for outdoor

It is well to state that L. auratum is quite an uncertain lily. the front ranks. The last-named still is high-priced, but it will be the leading garden lily in America in a few years.

Regarding L. candidum, I have never seen it flower as late as mid-August. It can be forced moderately and flowered by the end of March, but I do not know of any way to retard and flower it at this season. L. candidum cannot be held in cold storage with success, like other lily bulbs, as it starts to produce leaves in late summer. These remain green through the winter. If held in cold storage I am afraid these leaves would be destroyed and with them the likelihood of the bulbs flowering successfully. Cover the candidums four inches deep and plant no later than September 15.

ASTER BLIGHT.

Will you please inform me what causes blight on asters in the field and suggest a remedy for it? Our stock was partly grown in pots and partly in the field, and apparently was in first-class condition until the buds began to form, when a large percentage of the plants became affected with blight. They turn a light green and die. The plants were put in the field about May 10 to 20. The variety was Queen of the Market. Our greenhouse stock of Crego is fine, although lately, just as the plants are about to bloom, a good many wither and die. Something seems to work up through the stem.

F. W. H.—Ill.

The cause of this aster blight is but imperfectly understood. During the present summer, due probably in a considerable measure to peculiar climatic conditions, the loss of plants has been abnormally heavy. This is particularly true of plants set out on land which previously has been used for asters and which had the trouble in a more or less aggravated form. The fungus causing this wilt is supposed to live over in the soil in the same way as the fungus causing carnation stem-rot. Therefore, all affected plants should be pulled up and burned and not thrown on any rubbish heap.

It is quite necessary for successful aster culture to give a change of soil each year, especially if there has been any blight on the plants. I would suggest that you lime the soil freely in the fall and plow the land, leaving it rough over winter. It is a good plan to plow all land to be used for asters in the fall. I have noted a lot of blight this season on asters planted

Of the 10,000 half-ton and one-ton models to be produced during 1916 by the Studebaker Corporation, a large proportion have been spoken for by distributors in towns of a size that were not considered seriously as a market for commercial cars two years ago. This year's output of trucks, it is said, places the Studebaker Corporation as the largest builders of commercial cars in the industry. The vehicles are particularly numerous in the delivery departments of florists and a vigorous campaign is being carried on to further their use in this industry.

The Market.

Business last week showed the effects of the warm weather and there was little doing in the stores. The main sale has been on gladioli, but even these are beginning to show signs of coming to an end, and the best are about over with. Asters have shown some improvement both as to quantity and quality, but with respect to the latter this means but little; the best are being shipped in. There is plenty of Hydrangea paniculata to be had, but the sale of this item is slow. The blooms are exceptionally large and make a good showing. The cool weather which preceded the present hot spell helped roses considerably and slightly better prices prevailed the early part of the week. There has since been a slump and good stock is scarce.

While there is an occasional call for American Beauty roses, it is a hard matter to get any, regardless of the price one is willing to pay. Cattleyas also are scarce and high. They are worth $1 each and the retailer frequently is willing to pay more in order to get enough to fill an order. The season is over for carnations and one finds it a hard matter to get even a limited quantity. Easter lilies are good as to quality and there is an oversupply, with a limited demand at this time. They were largely used in funeral work last week, but even that failed to make an impression upon the market.

While there are some good dahlias to be had, it is rather too early in the season to expect much from these. Sylvia, now offered, is quite good. The market for Sprengerii, plumosus and ferns is quiet.

Various Notes.

Among the recent visitors was James Harper, of F. D. Harper, Pierson, Fla. Mr. Harper came north, accompanied by Mrs. Harper and their two children, by automobile, and they were headed for points beyond Washington. They reached Baltimore without difficulty, but decided not to go farther because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis and turned back to Washington, en route for home. They declared the trip to have been a delightful one.

J. H. Small & Sons have been taking advantage of the summer season to have a regular clean-up at their store at Piney Point, Md., where the fishing this year is excellent. With a friend on two occasions he has brought in record catches.

Stanley Holland, of Eighteenth street and Columbia road, northwest, and his family, have been motoring to Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

Arthur Niessen, of the Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, recently was in town looking over the new store which the company hopes to occupy shortly after the first of the coming month.

The employees of the F street store of Fred H. Kramer are busily making wreaths for the Christmas holidays. Mr. Kramer moves an enormous quantity of these and he has found it expedient to get things started many months in advance. C. L. L.

BOSTON.

The Market.

August business continues remarkably good, better than we have had for many years. Outdoor flowers now are arriving of much better quality, thanks to drier weather. Indoor flowers, with the exception of roses, are almost nil. Roses are selling splendidly; short-stemmed stock makes $1.50 to $3 per hundred and other grades from $4 to $12, with a few fancies realizing $16, which are extremely high summer prices, and there is no surplus at these prices. Beauties hold at $20 to $25 per hundred. There are no carnations on the market, but flowers from the new crop are almost due. Sweet peas are scarce and, in the main, of inferior quality. Valley is decidedly scarce—not at all equal to requirements.

Early asters are finishing and second early varieties are not yet in good crop. As a consequence, prices hold firm. Select flowers make $2 to $3 per hundred; some fancies $4. Seconds sell at 75 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Gladioli are the only flowers of which there is a heavy excess. Far too many of these are arriving and prices are low. Lilies are in good supply at $4 to $6 per hundred. A little Bouvardia Humboldtii arrived last week and was eagerly picked up. Gardenias sell well at $3 per dozen for the best. Cattleyas are scarce, the small C. Harrisoniae being practically the only variety available.

Various Notes.

The Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, N. Y., is sending in the finest roses seen in the Boston market, of a quality equal to those of winter. They receive an average of 12,000 flowers daily. The prices realized in July were extremely good, but August's prices are surpassing them and will beat any previous summer month's sales; in fact, few winter months will surpass this August. August 19 this concern's sales averaged $6.57 per hundred, some selling as high as $16 per hundred. This season the company has dropped Indiana, Russell, d'Arenberg and Hadley, and is growing the following varieties: Ophelia, Prima Donna, Montrose, Mrs. W. R. Hearst, Nesbit, Sunburst, Sunburst Sport, Ward, Stanley, Shawyer, Francis Scott Key, Mock, Hoosier Beauty, My Maryland, Milady, Double White Killarney, Black Beauty, Cecile Brunner and Killarney Brilliant. Last year a small lot of gardenias were grown and paid well. This season 3,000 have been planted.

William Sim has had a successful season with tomatoes, of which he will market from indoors about 100 tons. These have sold better than ever here this season, as the cool and damp season which lasted until August made outdoor fruit late. He now is shipping gladioli in large quantities to H. M. Robinson & Co. Some of his best varieties are Myrtle, Panama, Europa, King, Halley, America and Schwaben. A field of early sweet corn came in while prices ruled high in the markets.

J. Eisman, of Penn's staff, left this week for a vacation to be spent at New York and Philadelphia. A. Daniels has gone to Saranac Lake, and E. Pike to New Hampshire. Funeral work continues to form the bulk of the work, but there were four wedding orders August 19.

Members of the wholesale flower markets had a successful all-day fishing trip to Boston Light August 17. There were twenty in the party and 125 fish were captured, including one dog fish and some nice cods. A baseball game was played at Peddock's island and Boston was reached at 8:30 p. m. Some of those in the party were Messrs. Hamer, Beasley, Gorney, Hastings, Ginsberg, Sloane, Learned, Lynch and Mitchell.

The finest gladioli I have seen in the wholesale markets this season are those handled by Moses Liebman and coming from S. E. Spencer, of Brooklands Gardens, Woburn. Such varieties as Mrs.

Frank Pendleton, Schwaben, Mrs. F. King, Panama, Pink Perfection, Myrtle and America are included.

Morris Saganoff, for seven years an employee of H. M. Robinson & Co., was drowned while bathing in Whitney pond, Holliston, Mass., August 14, and was buried August 17. The deceased was only 23 years of age and much esteemed by his employers and many customers with whom he had done business.

W. R. Morris, of Wellesley Hills, is sending in nice shipments of roses from the new crop. The varieties he is growing this season are Killarney, White Killarney, Killarney Brilliant, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley, Richmond, Ophelia, Ward and Dark Pink Killarney.

The Welch Bros. Co. hopes to be removed to its new quarters, 262 Devonshire street, by September 1. This leaves a month in which to clear up at the present stand. The company reports good August business. Lily of the valley is reported scarce, but roses are of good quality.

A. H. Hews & Co. report such a heavy demand for flower pots that they have felt obliged to turn down a number of orders for long-distance shipments. They have increased their capacity for pot production considerably this season and now are trying to keep abreast of orders. Their new cyclamen pot is having a great sale.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is sending in a fine lot of white and red speciosum lilies. This concern reports that work on its large new house progresses somewhat slowly, owing to labor troubles among the builders' employees.

John W. Foote, of Reading, is in the market with the ever popular Bouvardia Humboldtii, of which flower he is the leading specialist for the Boston market. He also has some single red bouvardias.

Peter Fisher hopes to finish planting the bulk of his carnations this week. He says that some varieties, such as Matchless and Alice, have made large plants, while White Wonder and Pink Delight are quite small. His house of roses is doing well.

August so far has proved a much drier month than July, and of late we

The Market.

The wholesale market last week was weak in all lines. There was not much of anything coming in and high-class quality stock was out of the question.
No change in present conditions is looked for until the middle of September. The weather is hot again, but the few good, heavy rains we had were of much benefit to outdoor stock. Rose shipments will be increasing now, but the size of buds and length of stems will disappoint many. Good quality roses cannot be expected until the cool weather sets in. Asters are coming in more plentifully and there is a big demand for them. The quality of the stock, however, could be better; $3 per hundred seems to be the average price for this stock. Carnations are off the market and not until September 15 will there be any good carnations. Gladioli are arriving in fine shape, but the prices have surprised many buyers. Some of the stock is sold as high as $8 per hundred, a big price for this time of the season. Valley is scarce. Lilies are strong and the supply is good. These sell well at all times. Dahlias soon will be arriving in large quantities.
Tuberose are good sellers. In former years these usually were a glut on the market. Greens have a good demand, especially smilax and asparagus.

Various Notes.

The publicity committee of the spring flower show met at the Liederkranz Club hall August 18. A campaign plan, which will be started at once, was mapped out. The committee consists of five—Chairman Windler, D. S. Ged-dis, J. S. Carter, C. A. Kuehn and Vincent Gorly. This committee is one of the most important, and as all the committeemen are hustlers the spring show should be a financial success. The Armory hall, Grand avenue and Market street, has been secured for the show.

Misses Elva and Louise Guy, daughters of E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., will leave at the end of this month to teach physical culture. Elva Guy will teach at Decatur, Ill., and Louise at Saginaw, Mich.

The Brecht Co. has two large refrigerators completed for the St. Louis
Wholesale Cut Flower Co. They are 8x
10x14, and are finished in forest green.
Mr. Gillespie, manager of the department for Brecht, says the season in florists' iceboxes was a busy one.

H. G. Berning telegraphed the florists here from Houston that St. Louis was selected as the 1918 meeting place of the S. A. F. convention. The news was most welcome. The telegram was received by President Bourdet while the executive committee of the flower show was in session. Although it is two years off, the boys say they will start working early to make it even greater than in 1893 or 1904, when the S. A. F. met here.

D. S. Geddis, of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., left for Chicago August 19. He will visit other northern points in the interests of his concern.

The summer cut of roses at the establishments of C. S. Cerny, W. J. Pilcher and Werner Bros. has been quite large.
Good blooms, although short in stem, were shipped. These concerns have about completed summer improvements and are ready for the fall season.

rists, has taken Nat Kingsley's place as buyer in the wholesale district. Mr. Artmann also has charge of the Grand avenue store in the absence of the boss.

Fred H. Weber and family returned from their vacation trip spent at Estes Park, Colo. Mr. Weber says the trip did him much good and that he is now ready for a busy season.

Our local nurserymen are preparing for a busy fall season. The H. J. Weber & Sons Co., Sanders and the Westover say they have many orders booked ahead, owing to the extremely dry season. They look for the best season in years.

Henry Braun, well known rose grower of a few years back, contemplates the erection of two greenhouses in Kirkwood, for roses. Mr. Braun took many prizes in the rose classes in our former flower shows held in the old Exposition building, while in the employ of A. Jablonsky.

Paddy Patton, of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., is taking his vacation by easy stages. He says a half day off now and then is good enough for him, especially when the locusts are singing, "There's a hot time in the old town tonight."

Martin Seeger and Nat Kingsley, of the Mullanphy Florists, are down south with their families for a two weeks' vacation. Julius Schaefer, head artist at the downtown store, left August 19 for Chicago and other northern points for a two weeks' vacation.

The preliminary schedule for the 1917 spring flower show will be mailed on the return of the papers on the incorporation of the St. Louis Flower Show Association, which was thought an advisable thing to do by the members of the executive committee.

Prizes were offered for the best decorated automobile at the business men's picnic and parade August 17. The auto of Grimm & Gorly took second prize, although many declared it should have had first. Marion Uhlschmidt decorated the car.

Tobe Teason, for the last eight years in the employ of the Mullanphy Florists, died August 16. The employees of this firm sent a casket cover and several acted as pallbearers. The funeral was held August 18, from his late resi-

MICHIGANDERS TAKE DAY OFF.

Members of the Saginaw-Bay City
Floricultural Society took a day off
August 16 and journeyed to Frankenmuth, a pretty place on the Cass river, for their annual outing. The trip was made in autos and by interurban, those who went by trolley leaving at an early hour in the morning.

The day was largely devoted to sports, which took place in Hubinger's grove, at Frankenmuth. There was a baseball game between the florists of Saginaw and Bay City, and another in the afternoon with teams from the same cities participating. In addition there were tugs of war, sack, wheelbarrow and potato races and other games. A picnic dinner was served at 2:30 and a luncheon at 5:30.

The society has forty-eight members, who represent 1,000,000 feet of glass, of which 525,000 feet are in Saginaw.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

If your city is not represented in The Review, there is an opportunity for you. It is the intention to add to the Pacific coast news features as fast as the increase in advertising revenues will permit, and it is to be noted the Pacific coast advertisements are increasing steadily.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There is little to add to recent reports as to market conditions. Some slight improvement is noted in the general quality of flowers and the carnations are exceptionally good for the season. Gladioli, like the famous brook, seem to go on forever and dahlias are still making a good show. Funeral work has dropped off a little this week and things are undeniably dull. The weather here is so delightful that trips to the mountains and beaches or auto rides through the country appeal more than indoor entertainments where flowers are used. A few pretty weddings, however, helped a little.

Various Notes.

Dahlias and asters have been making a splendid show at the store of S. Murata & Co., where business is just about as usual at this time. Mr. Murata's friends are all sorry to hear of the illness of his little daughter, possibly occasioned by the hot weather, but she has had the best of care and at the time of writing was much better.

At Hills' Nursery, stock is looking remarkably well. Some fine Cocos plumosa, only about three years planted, are being lifted and established, and an excellent collection of conifers is a prominent feature here. Mr. Hills' new fern is remarkably fine. He has sold only large plants of it so far and it is wonderful how rapidly they make big specimens. He also is cutting a magnificent crop of Adiantum Croweanum, A. California and Glory of Mordrecht.

While business has not been rushing at the nursery of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., it has been sufficient to keep all busy and an interesting point is the number of inquiries for stock of all kinds that are coming in by every mail. The spirited advertising campaign carried on by this firm is doubtless helping along this line, and the generally cool summer weather is another happy feature. M. L. Germain returned to the city August 14. After the usual monthly meeting of the Germain Improvement Association, held at the store August 11, there was a melon-cutting performance, at which about twenty-five different varieties were sampled.

G. W. Smith and Mrs. Smith are taking a few days off, having driven to Bear lake. In a letter to a friend they say they enjoyed the trip up immensely, notwithstanding a little carburetor trouble, owing to the altitude.

The fields of annuals grown for seed by the Victor Johanssen Seed Co. at El Monte are beautiful now. Asters and zinnias are the big drawing cards, while large blocks of choice verbenas, marigolds, phloxes and many other plants are now at their best. The soil here is excellently adapted for seed growing, being a fine, sandy loam, which does not bake and is naturally subirrigated. Oscar Johanssen puts in his time about equally between the ranch here and the large

H. Reeve Darling has obtained a lease, on advantageous terms, of the store next to his in the Hayward hotel building and intends to start at once to remove the wall between the two and throw the rooms into one. ras, where he spent his vacation. He knows them well, having gone practically all over them in his capacity of guide to the Sierra Club.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at Kruckeberg hall August 16. A meeting of the Nurserymen's Exchange was held at the office of the secretary the same evening. The old, evergreen, hardy perennial of standardizing prices was one of the principal topics discussed.

The sympathy of the trade and their many other friends is with Mr. and Mrs. Hill, of Alhambra, in the loss of their daughter. They have certainly had more than their share of misfortune and are speaking of leaving California and returning to the east.

Arthur Beverley, of Santa Barbara, made another flying visit to the city this week, looking up stock.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

There is little change in the market situation since the last report, with the exception that asters are more plentiful. These have not been selling so well during the last few days as they did previously, and this has given some of the other varieties of flowers a better chance to clean up. There is a large sistent manner, being used liberally in basket arrangements.

The rose cut is light, but the average quality is good, the foliage being better than for several weeks. There is an abundance of Lilium tigrinum and L. rubrum and both meet with popular favor. It is difficult to secure the prices received in other seasons, however. A good many violets can be seen in the local market, but the shipping business in this item will not amount to much before the middle of September or later. The supply of orchids is light and possibly more blooms could be disposed of if they were available in more liberal quantities. The same is true of gardenias.

quantity of good amaryllis and they have a satisfactory demand. The supply of gladioli shows no indications of diminishing, but despite the excellent quality of the flowers and the comparatively low prices, the blooms have attracted little attention since asters came in. Dahlias continue abundant and fine, with a moderate demand. Sweet peas are about gone, but carnations have been coming in a little better.

The chrysanthemum situation is disappointing. Several of the early varieties now are coming in quite liberally, but instead of being received with open arms and purse strings, as in former years, they are a drug on the market. The finest specimens bring only about half of last year's prices and are hard to move at that. The florists are inclined to think that their early arrival is largely responsible for the lack of attention accorded them, in which case the demand is apt to pick up at any moment. Zinnias still are fine and are maintaining their popularity in a per-

Co., is rebuilding several of his greenhouses. He makes a specialty of carnations and brings in some of the finest stock received in the local market.

M. Pos is making extensive improvements at his store and greenhouses, San Mateo, Cal.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is beginning to cut a fine crop of Russell roses, with which it expects to do exceptionally well. This concern does a large business in violets, but does not contemplate much shipping business until later.

Richard Diener, who made a big hit with gladioli at the P. P. I. E. last year, now has about 10,000 blooms of different varieties at his new place at Kentfield, Marin county. The flowers are not quite so good as those at the exposition last year, as he has not succeeded in getting all the salt out of his ground.

Work is to begin shortly on the remodeling of the flower store of T. Mosco, on Geary street, near Market street. Mr. Mosco opened at this location a few months ago and his business already warrants finer quarters. He has secured adjoining space for the enlargement of his display window and the entire store will be refinished.

Domoto Bros. report shipping business as picking up. They are cutting a fine crop of Hoosier Beauty roses, these having much better stems than those of last year. Mr. Domoto thinks this rose is better for this market than Hadley, as it has a fine color, opens well, has a strong stem, is more profitable for the growers and the florists like it better. This firm is preparing to add a big stock of baskets, florists' supplies, etc., at its Bush street establishment, and to accommodate this new department of the business is preparing to remodel the store.

H. Cooper and John Macdonald, of the retail force of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., expect to leave the end of the week for a hunting and fishing trip in the Sacramento valley and, incidentally, to attend the state fair at the capital the first week of September.

Henry Goertzchain, of Redwood City, is bringing in about the best asters seen here this season.

J. J. O'Connor is back on duty at his store on Mission street, after a well earned vacation.

Five acres adjoining the company's place at Fifteenth and La Grange streets have been purchased and lath houses for plumosus will be erected on this. Three and one-half acres are already planted to plumosus and over 125,000 of the plants are potted. Altogether the firm will have more than twelve acres devoted to flowers and plants. It now has 125,000 square feet of glass and plans have been drawn for two additional houses, each 27x207 feet.

The Market.

The weather this summer has been ideal for growing outdoor stock and field-grown carnation plants are unusually thrifty and strong. Indoor roses, cut from new stock, are abundant and of fine quality. Carnation plants benched early are beginning to bloom. Last week several cloudy days, with light showers, succeeded the previous warm spell and the weather seemed more like midfall than midsummer. Asters are the ruling flowers. Orchids and valley are scarce. Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley and Mrs. Russell are the leading roses. Business has been stimulated by the cool weather and is a little above normal. There were several funerals which used a quantity of flowers and weddings and other social events kept the stores fairly busy with decorative orders.

Many varieties of outdoor flowers are offered, gladioli, gaillardias, irises, helianthus and snapdragons leading. Sweet peas still come in, but their season is virtually over. Carnations cut from old plants are shown and there are enough of them to supply the demand. Chrysanthemums are coming on finely and the earliest varieties soon will be in.

Club Meeting.

The Portland Floral Society held its regular meeting August 15. Routine business and a talk on dahlias by E. H. White took up the time of the session. Mr. White had several vases filled with mixed dahlias and he gave the history and characteristics of each. As a boutonniere he wore a Pierrot dahlia eight inches in diameter. He stated that his company had 1,400 plants, with 660 varieties in its show garden, and was introducing 225 new varieties this year. Van Dyke, which was voted the award for popularity at the show last year, had proved the best seller. He recommended the collarette varieties as good keepers.

This season, he said, had been favorable for thrifty growth, but the cool weather produced an abundant crop of aphids. A short discussion arose as to the keeping qualities of Minnie Bungle and it was stated that several growers had brought in blooms of this variety that were the best keepers the retailers had ever handled.

C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York, attended the meeting.

Various Notes.

Max Smith is showing some good gladioli, which were grown at his range.

At the city range of the Martin & Forbes Co. nearly all the young stock is benched. Potted stock is being overhauled for fall growing. Foreman George Spencer said that the favorable season had produced extra fine stock and his benches of carnations and mums certainly bore out his statement. Several successful seedlings have been propagated and a number are now being tried out. Mr. Spencer has been with the company for thirteen years and is a most successful grower. At the store of the company, on Washington street, the new roses, Cleveland and Gorgeous, introduced by Charles Totty, were seen; also the new rose Tipperary. The rose range at Haynes is producing a heavy cut of Ophelia.

William Fehrenbacher, of the Martin & Forbes Co. store, spent his vacation with his family at Gearhart beach.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

The downtown stores are experiencing the dull season of the year and there is comparatively little movement in stock of any kind. Funeral work is the only activity, although an occasional wedding assists. On the other hand, the growers and greenhouse men are busy from dawn to dark.

Prices are at their lowest ebb. Asters and gladioli vie for leading honors in popularity. The asters, white and lavender, lead, because of their adaptability for funeral work. A few dahlias have made their appearance, but these are sluggish as to sale, not having as yet attained much popularity.

Various Notes.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, had a large exhibit of dahlias at the Newport show last week.

Ellen T. O'Connor had special pieces for the Arnold funeral last week. The casket blanket furnished by her was of My Maryland roses.

Alexander Macrae, of F. Macrae & Sons, has registered a new touring car.

Joseph L. Savard has commenced the erection of a greenhouse and boiler plant at 91 Merida avenue, Woonsocket.

Richard L. Hogan is building a new carnation house 28x100 feet.

Mrs. P. H. Conley has completed benching a large house with carnations, the plants looking especially promising.

James Hackins, of Central Falls, has purchased a new touring car.

Samuel Resnick, with J. E. Koppelman & Co., is on a vacation trip to New York and Atlantic City.

Alonzo Vose has commenced remodeling one of the greenhouses at his range at Woonsocket.

Miss Tillie Stroh, with Stroh's Quality Flower Shop, Buffalo, has been enjoying a vacation at Watch Hill.

Charles Macnair was a business visitor to New York last week.

W. A. Bowers has had the front and interior of his store on Washington street done in white. W. H. M.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Midsummer Flower Show.

With a display surpassing the two previous exhibitions, the third midsummer flower show held under the joint auspices of the Newport Horticultural Society and the Newport Garden Club opened August 17 on the grounds of Hill Top Inn. The attendance on both days was unusually large, the summer colony making it one of the season's social events.

The judges were Bruce Butterson, Andrew J. Meikle and Christian M. Bogholt, all of Newport; James Wheeler, of Natick; John Duguid and John Marshall, of Providence. The Mrs. French Vanderbilt cup offered for the best exhibit by a private gardener and the Newport Garden Club silver cup as a sweepstake prize for the best exhibit

SALZER KILLED BY AUTO.

Henry A. Salzer, president of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., one of the largest seed houses in the United States, was crushed to death August 22, when his car turned turtle off a narrow road on Dresbach Hill, a mile from the village of Dresbach, Minn. Mr. Salzer was ground against a stump by the heavy machine. He was one of the wealthiest men in the trade, and had many outside interests.

RALPH M. WARD & Co., of New York, have opened a branch office at Boompjes 82, Rotterdam, Holland. The office is in charge of J. Henry Thomas, for thirteen years in the employ of Ward & Co. The purpose of this office is to superintend the purchasing and shipping of European bulbs, plants, etc., and to facilitate prompt shipment from European ports.

A most excellent piece of forethought was displayed by the firm of J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, when they purchased early in 1916 their entire requirements of paper, to be used in the various issues of their catalogues during not only the year 1916, but also the entire year of 1917. This consisted of several carloads of paper and amounted to a considerable outlay of money, but they have already

TO THE TRADE:--

The American Bulb Co. take this opportunity, through the Florists' Review, to thank their many friends for their interest shown in the many letters wishing us success.

Owing to the urgent work at hand, completing our preparations, and the absence of two of our very important members, Messrs. Sam Seligman and Robert Newcomb, who have been in charge of our exhibit at the Houston Convention of the S.A.F., we are unable to give the many letters received our personal attention at this immediate time.

Again we thank you most heartily, and further assure you that the members of the American Bulb Co. shall do all in their power to prove worthy of your confidence.

Very truly yours,

AMERICAN BULB CO.,

realized a saving equal to their investment, with the price of paper advancing almost daily.

VISITED CHICAGO: Frank H. Henry, of Henry & Lee, lily bulb merchants, New York.

ACCORDING to late reports, the yield of onion sets at Chicago is not over one-third to one-half of what was expected thirty days ago. This fact, together with the short acreage, means an extremely short crop of onion sets and correspondingly high prices next spring. Edward Leonard, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, who has been inspecting fields during the last four weeks, reports the average yield will not be more than 100 to 150 bushels to the acre of choice, small sets instead of a normal yield of 300 to 400 bushels to the acre, and that the acreage is from twenty to thirty per cent less than that of last year.

MICHIGAN BEANS.

One day last week John Leonard and A. H. Smith, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, through the courtesy of Sym Eagle and J. J. Thompson, of the same city, were invited to the office of Mr. Thompson to look over 200 bunches of bean plants which he and several of his coworkers and friends had pulled during the preceding week on a 3,000-mile automobile trip through Michigan. The bean crop, as shown by these plants, each bunch of which was taken from a different field in every part of the state, has been almost ruined by the continued hot weather. Many of the plants did not even show a pod. Others had a few shriveled pods, but

RAINBOW

(many bright colors)

FREESIAS

Our crop of bulbs grown in California now is ready for delivery, and the bulbs are of exceptional quality, ranging in size from $\frac{1}{2}$ to $\frac{3}{4}$ -inch. The mixture offered includes several shades of yellow, orange, lavender and pink, all harmonizing with each other when bunched together.

Rainbow Freesias are great money-makers for all florists, whether they grow for their own retail trade or for the wholesale market. Splendid sellers at top prices. Moreover, the habit of plant is branching, each bulb giving two to three flower spikes with stems long enough for all floral purposes.

$5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000; $187.50 for 5000.

(Note.—Because of the branching habit, Rainbow freesia will give twice to three times as many flowers per bulb as will Purity or refracta alba.)

Every jobber and catalogue house that has a trade calling for high-class novelties should write at once for terms on Rainbow. Freesia bulb growers write for prices on planting stock (bulblets).

most of them, at the best, would not mature to exceed one or two beans to the pod. Some of the plants show late blooms, which started since the recent rains, but it would require seven or eight weeks without frost to mature beans fit for harvest. As a result of their observations, those on the trip, all of whom were expert bean men, feel that the crop of beans in Michigan cannot possibly turn out more than twenty to twenty-five per cent of a normal crop, even with the best weather conditions. There are many varieties of beans more delicate than ordinary stock that are dried and practically complete failures now. This means poor delivery in almost all varieties of beans, entire failure of delivery on some sorts, and with not over a fourth of a crop of navy or field beans. Almost anything in the shape of a bean is worth from $6 to $10 per bushel today.

RIGHTS UNDER SALES CONTRACTS

In a memorandum decision which does not disclose the facts of the particular case, the Supreme Court of Georgia lays down the following points of law:

A single contract for sale of specified quantities of various varieties of onion sets for shipment about a certain date (weather permitting) is to be construed as an entire contract and not severable as to the various items. The question whether such a contract is entire or severable, which question the court says is to be determined according to the mutual intention of the parties, is often a material inquiry in determining the

Where there is a contract for the sale of onion sets, or other goods, and a portion is delivered, paid for and used by the purchaser, he cannot afterwards rescind the contract upon the ground that the quantity delivered was inferior in quality to that stipulated in the contract.

But if the seller delivers goods not in accordance with the contract and defective, and there is a delay in shipment, and this amounts to such a substantial noncompliance with the agreement as a whole, the buyer may rescind the contract and refuse to accept performance

Now you wonder why a girl (no thanks, I am not a man) dodges certain kinds of obnoxious admirers, slides out the back way and, when he blocks her getaway, she suddenly gets a headache or is in an awful rush.

Nuisance was a fizzle with real ladies, but to hear him tell it he was some heart breaker; sure, they were all dying of broken hearts for him. Whenever anyone boasts of his popularity, take it for certain, he is a dead one, and trying to stir up business, staying up o' nights looking for someone, any old one will do.

Well, the Nuisance finally married. This marriage entailed his three children, himself and the new wife, poor thing. The real tragedy is to come.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming GIANT PANSIES

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and its unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe winters and to bloom right on into the summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for Autumn planting on graves and for very early bedding, as well as for early cut flowers.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, eye. 16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with eye. 17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations. Each color separate or mixed.

500 seeds 50c., 1000 seeds $1.00, 1/8 oz. $2.00, 1/4 oz. $3.75, 1 oz. $15.00.

20. PRINCESS. The New Upright Pansy. This strain is entirely distinct from all others. It is absolutely compact, upright growing, and extremely weatherproof, enduring many storms without damage to its flower. The flowers are mostly blotched and frilled like the Masterpiece, of good form and heavy, velvety texture, on heavy stems carried well above the foliage. Attractive by the brilliancy of its colors.

500 seeds 20c., 1000 seeds 35c., 1/8 oz. $1.00, 1/4 oz. $2.00, 1 oz. $7.50

22. KENILWORTH MIXTURE. A collection of beautiful colors and markings.

24. KENILWORTH SHOW. An extra fine strain of immense flowers.

26. KENILWORTH CUT FLOWER MIXTURE. Has long stems and large flowers.

28. MASTERPIECE. A large flower with curled, wavy petals.

30. THREE AND FIVE BLOTCHED FLOWERS. Of rich velvety colors and great substance.

PRICES OF KENILWORTH PANSY SEED:

All sorts and mixtures except the new Pansy Princess and the Early Flowering or Winter Blooming are $5.00 per oz., $1.25 per 1/4 oz.; 5000 seeds $1.00; trade pkt. of 1000 seeds 25c.; any 5 pkts. $1.00. Please order by number.

32. PARIS. Enormous blotched flowers, very showy.

34. BRONZE. A mixture of bronze, brown and copper shades.

42. ADONIS. Light blue, white center.

82. ORCHID FLOWERED. A mixture of rose, pink, blush mauve, fawn, light brown, orange and chamais.

118. PSYCHE. Curled white, blotched.

138. WHITE. Large, satiny white.

140. WHITE, with violet blotch.

142. YELLOW. Large golden yellow.

RAINBOW. With every $1.00 worth of Pansy seed I will send 1000 of Rainbow free, and with other amounts in like proportion.

TURKESTAN ALFALFA SEED.

Quality Doubtful; Prices High.

During the fiscal years ended June 30, 1913, 1914 and 1915, approximately 6,000,000, 5,000,000 and 7,000,000 pounds, respectively, of alfalfa seed were imported, while during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1916, less than 3,250,000 pounds were imported.

For several years Russian Turkestan has been the only country having a large surplus of seed available for international trade, but the supply of seed from this source has been practically shut off since the beginning of the European war, until last winter, when shipments were begun by the way of the trans-Siberian railway, Vladivostok, and the Pacific ocean. Of the seed imported into the United States since July 1, 1915, more than half has been from Russian Turkestan, and no doubt more of this seed will be brought in as transportation can be arranged.

The short domestic supply of last year, together with the decreased imports, have resulted in a marked increase in the price of seed over that of a year ago. The lack of alfalfa seed in this country this year must be made up by importation, and this will necessarily be largely Turkestan seed. It is known that Turkestan seed is not well adapted for general use in the United States and that it is particularly undesirable for use in the eastern humid sections.

Import Contains Weed Seeds.

On the basis of its relative crop-producing capacity, the price of Turkestan seed should be lower than that of domestic seed, and purchasers should know when they are buying Turkestan seed. Conditions may often be such that only Turkestan seed can be obtained at the time and place where seed is wanted, but in every instance the purchaser should know whether he is getting Turkestan seed or not.

Turkestan seed can be distinguished from other alfalfa seed by the presence of certain characteristic weed seeds. These seeds are usually not numerous, but no importation of commercial Turkistan seed has been examined by the seed laboratory of the department in which they were not present. On account of these characteristic weed seeds not being plentiful, it is always necessary, in determining the origin of the seed, to examine a bulk of seed, and not depend on the examination of a small trade sample. Anyone wishing to have alfalfa seed examined, to determine its possible Turkistan origin, should send not less than one-half pound of seed to the seed laboratory, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

A discussion of the relative value of commercial Turkistan alfalfa seed will be found in Department Bulletin No. 138, "Commercial Turkistan Alfalfa Seed."

OUR ad in The Review has sold all the cuttings of Carnation Nebraska we shall have to offer this season.—C. H. Frey Co., Lincoln, Neb.

THE small ad in The Review made my rose plants disappear faster than the fresh baked potato pancakes did when put on the lunch counter in a Milwaukee saloon, and they certainly went fast enough.—W. H. Amling, Maywood, Ill., April 3, 1916.

employment, holds the Michigan Supreme court in the case of Kunze versus Detroit Shade Tree Co. (158 Northwestern Reporter 851).

In this case it appears that one employed to plant, trim and otherwise work about trees, was required, in the course of his work, to proceed from one place to another, and while doing so was struck by an automobile and fatally injured. His employer denied liability under the Michigan workmen's compensation act, but the Supreme court decided that the case fell within the law, saying.

"It is true that in going from one place to another, as was his duty, he naturally was compelled to assume risks not in any way connected with the trimming, planting and treating of shade trees; but his employment extended further than this and necessarily obliged him, in the discharge of his duties, to go from place to place, and in so doing to assume the risks of traffic on the streets."

CONNECTICUT ASSOCIATION.

Bright and early on the morning of August 16, the day of the annual outing of the Connecticut Nurserymen's Association, a party of fifty, composed of association members, their wives and their friends, set out in automobiles for the picnic grounds at Riverside Park, a suburb of Springfield, Mass.

The baseball game, easily the main and most amusing event of the day, was called at 11 o'clock, the nines being chosen and captained by W. A. Campbell and E. A. Bassill. Mr. Campbell's players were designated as the "Ornaments," while Mr. Bassill's aggregation was down on the score card as the "Big Stock" nine. The "Big Stock" team proved true to name and took the "Ornaments" into camp to the tune of 20 to 9, their victory in a measure being attributed to their refusal to be "out" until four batters had been retired. The game between the lady nines was most interesting, but the score will not be published.

After a dinner served by the park management, the picnickers enjoyed the amusements at the park and talked shop. Really, it was one of the most enjoyable outings the association ever held.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The first part of the week was chilly and rainy. The rain was badly needed and splendid results may be seen about the city and country. Plants and crops in general had the appearance of being scorched. The last of the week found the city visited by another heat wave of some intensity.

Business is good, a condition that has been a blessing to Minneapolis florists this summer. It is hard, however, to obtain stock, the demand being much greater than the supply. Large funeral orders and weddings keep the supply of flowers nearly exhausted, and while this condition exists a large business will be impossible.

There is a big demand for roses, but these are difficult to buy. While there have been fine Easter and rubrum lilies in the market, at good prices, the supply of them has not met the demand, and they are becoming more difficult to obtain. Gladioli are plentiful and much sought. The prices, however, are not high. There continue to be some garden flowers, such as delphiniums and gaillardias. There are few daisies, as large beds of these have been completely dried up. There are some asters coming in and there is a demand for all the good ones obtainable.

Various Notes.

W. H. Bofferding has been extremely busy with funeral work.

Miss C. H. Lippincott reports business a little quiet, with a hard time to obtain good stock. She expects better conditions soon and anticipates a splendid fall trade.

T. S. Lynes says business is fair, with a considerable quantity of funeral work. Mr. Lynes has purchased a hunting dog and will take a hunting trip in the near future. Mr. Lynes is fortunate in having a splendid stock of sweet peas coming in daily.

R. A. Latham reports business good. He expects to occupy the new premises shortly, the new building now being under construction.

The flower department of the R. M. Chapman Co. reports a good business. Miss E. Larson is in charge of the department.

The Vasatka brothers, of the Chicago Avenue Floral Co., are rushing the work on a new greenhouse. They recently purchased a large piece of land and are cutting fine carnations and asters.

The Chicago Avenue Greenhouses are as busy as usual, but report difficulty Woonsocket, S. D.—Mrs. H. E. Richardson, proprietor of the Woonsocket Greenhouse, says this season has been the most unusual in her experience and extremely trying to all plant life. Ten weeks of drought, with strong, hot winds from the south and a blistering sun, ripened all fruits before their time, blasted and blighted many flowering plants and left the florist with little stock to satisfy a steadily increasing demand.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Registration of New Varieties.

The following new roses have been registered with the American Rose Society:

By Frank L. Moore, Chatham, N. J., Rose Muriel Moore. The flower is white; when in bud it is a bluish white. The bud is longer than that of My Maryland and not quite so double. The foliage is distinctly different; the leaflets have a rich green color, are narrower and have more finely serrated edges; in fact, the edges are almost smooth. It is a profuse bloomer.

By Howard & Smith, Los Angeles, Cal., Rose Los Angeles. Color, flame-pink, shaded to yellow, toned with salmon. Foliage light green, extra heavy. Buds longer and pointed, opening to a bloom of large proportions. Origin, a cross between Mme. Segond Weber and Lyon rose. Growth exceedingly vigorous; has none of the die-back habits of Lyon rose.

The Hartford Test Garden.

Wallace R. Pierson, Alex. Cumming, Jr., and John F. Huss, who constitute the committee appointed to judge the new rose entries, report that they visited the Hartford Test Garden July 5. The varieties of this season's entry were not considered in condition to judge until better established.

Among those entered previous to this season, the following climbing roses were examined and received awards:

Dazzling Red, 79 points. Entered by W. A. Manda.

Mrs. Longwood, 78 points. Entered by Conard & Jones.

It was a source of gratification to the judges to note the splendid behavior of the varieties previously awarded silver medals, every one of which stood out conspicuously among the older entries.

Benjamin Hammond, Sec'y.

Bloomington, Ind.—Frank L. Morris has leased his business to his son, Merle, for a period of two years.

St. John, Kan.—Mrs. H. K. Maxwell, who does business as Maxwell's Greenhouse, is just finishing a greenhouse 21x50 feet, of Moninger material. As this is in the hail belt, she is thinking of covering it with a screen.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather again has changed and we are having another torrid spell, which is anything but pleasant. This section has been burdened with too much rain of late and the dry spell is rather good, despite the heat. Business in general remains light, not because the demand is exceptionally slow, but because stock is not sufficient to take care of all orders satisfactorily.

Carnations are out of the market entirely and the vacancy is not filled well by asters this year. This crop has been particularly short and the quality only fair. Roses also are scarce and whites are extremely hard to obtain. It will be a few weeks before the cut is sufficiently large to be considered normal again.

Some exceptionally fine sweet peas are coming into the market at this time and are finding a ready sale. Gladioli are more plentiful and in fine shape. No trouble is experienced in moving the bulk of the cut at fair prices. Valley remains quite scarce, but the quality is good.

Various Notes.

F. H. Holton, who is a member of the local Shriners' band, spent August 19 at Racine, Wis., where the Shriners were entertained by Mr. Horlick, of malted milk fame. H. J. S.

Aurora, Ill.—The W. B. Davis Co., growers of greenhouse vegetables, has certified to an increase in its capital stock, from $43,500 to $134,000. It presages another expansion.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather again has changed and we are having another torrid spell, which is anything but pleasant. This section has been burdened with too much rain of late and the dry spell is rather good, despite the heat. Business in general remains light, not because the demand is exceptionally slow, but because stock is not sufficient to take care of all orders satisfactorily.

Carnations are out of the market entirely and the vacancy is not filled well by asters this year. This crop has been particularly short and the quality only fair. Roses also are scarce and whites are extremely hard to obtain. It will be a few weeks before the cut is sufficiently large to be considered normal again.

Some exceptionally fine sweet peas are coming into the market at this time and are finding a ready sale. Gladioli are more plentiful and in fine shape. No trouble is experienced in moving the bulk of the cut at fair prices. Valley remains quite scarce, but the quality is good.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

A RANGE OF EIGHT HOUSES.

Will you oblige me by telling me how to pipe for steam my range of eight greenhouses? Please state, also, what size of boiler will be needed. Six of the houses run east and west; they are each 18x100 and four feet high to the gutter. The other two houses, which are new and modern, run north and south; they are each 25x125 and seven feet high to the gutter. There is glass in the west wall and in both ends.

N. P. & F. C.—III.

The temperature to be maintained is not stated, and without knowing this we are not able to give a definite reply. If a temperature of 60 degrees will answer, we would use in each of the 18-foot houses one 2-inch flow pipe, carried under the ridge, and eight 1½-inch returns, placing part of them on each wall and the others under the benches. For 50 degrees use only six returns.

In the new houses, for 60 degrees, use three 1½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the other under the ridge, with eight 1½-inch returns upon the walls or under the benches. If a temperature of only 50 degrees is desired in any of these houses, omit two of the returns. The house in which there is glass in the side wall will require an additional return on that wall for each two feet of glass. We would use a 50-horsepower boiler for 60 degrees. For 50 degrees a 40-horsepower boiler will suffice.

HOT WATER FOR TWO HOUSES.

I intend to build two greenhouses, running east and west, and I wish to get your idea of how to pipe them for hot water to maintain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees in zero weather. The north house will be 10x60 and twelve feet high to the ridge. The north wall will contain two feet of glass above three and one-half feet of boards. The ends, except the lower three and one-half feet of boards, will be of glass and Probably you have wondered why the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler is not sold by any of the greenhouse construction companies. In justice to all concerned we feel it is our duty to state that the Kroeschell Boiler is never sold by any one but—THE KROESCHELL BROS. will be exposed. Raised benches will be used in this house.

The south house will be 23x60, five and one-half feet high to the gutter and fourteen feet high to the ridge. The east end, three and one-half feet of which will be boards and the balance glass, will be exposed. The west end will be protected by a workroom, which will be built over a boiler cellar seven feet deep. The south wall will be boarded to a height of three and one-half feet; the other two feet will be glass. In this house there will be a raised bench on each side and two solid beds in the center.

The two houses will be separated by a partition composed of three and one-half feet of glass and two feet of boards. Please state the size and number of pipes that will be needed and the proper size of boiler. However, I wish to get a boiler large enough to care for two and one-half times the amount of glass in the two houses I have described.
T. C. A.—Pa.

For the smaller house we would suggest the use of one 2½-inch flow pipe, carried three or four feet below the ridge, and six 2-inch return pipes, placing three pipes on each of the side walls or under the side benches. In order to make the connections with the side coils, we would suggest dropping down a 2-inch pipe on each side of the door at the east end of the house, starting the coils at the door and running them to the corners of the house and then along the side walls.

For the wider house we would run two 2½-inch pipes below the ridge and connect one of them at the east end of the house with seven 2-inch returns on the south wall or under the bench, connecting the other flow with six 2-inch returns for the other side of the house. These returns also should start on either side of the door and follow around the end and side of the house to the boiler end, where the coils on each wall should be united in a 2-inch pipe and connected with the heater.

By running the flow pipes with a fall of one inch in ten feet there will be no occasion for using air valves, provided the highest point in each of the flow pipes is connected with the expansion tank. The two houses will require about 1,000 square feet of radiation, and for two and one-half times as much glass we would use a boiler rated for 3,000 square feet.

BEGINNING A NEW RANGE.

As I am a beginner and am building, I shall be greatly obliged for any information you can give me in regard to the piping for hot water. At present I am erecting two houses, constructing them of hotbed sashes. These houses are each 9x40 and seven and one-half feet high to the peak. They are connected and run east and west. The north wall is four feet high and entirely of concrete; the south wall consists of two feet of concrete and two feet of glass. The houses are protected at the west end and half of the north side by a brick building. I intend to grow geraniums and so shall not need a high night temperature, but the outside temperature here often drops to 10 degrees below zero. This year I expect to heat from the residence boiler, which is at the west end of the houses, but next year I shall build a boiler room at the east end and heat from that.

How many flows and returns will be required in each house and what would be the best arrangement of the piping for this year? The benches will be three feet high and three and one-half feet wide. What size of boiler would you advise for next year? I intend to keep on building. In that case, would you advise a large boiler to start with, so as not to have to buy each year? Next year I expect to build one new house, 24x60.
C. L.—O.

The two 9-foot houses can be heated by running a 2-inch flow pipe on the outer wall of each house, at the plate, and another on the posts between the two houses. With each of these flow pipes feed two 2-inch returns. If the wall which contains two feet of glass is much exposed, it will be well to put in an additional return upon that side. The return pipes may be under the benches or on the walls, as will be most convenient.

For the 24-foot house there should be a 2½-inch flow pipe upon each wall plate and another two or three feet below the ridge. For 60 degrees use eleven 2-inch returns, placing three or four under each of the side benches or on the side walls, and the others under the middle bench or benches. If 50 degrees will answer for this house, only eight returns, in addition to the three flow pipes, will be needed.

A boiler rated for 1,000 square feet will easily heat the three houses, but if more houses are to be added within a year, it will be well to put in a boiler large enough to handle them also.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Though August is usually a quiet month, it is not so this year. Most of the houses here are kept quite busy with funeral work. Flowers are extremely scarce and it is a problem to know just what to do. During the last few days the demand has been larger than the daily consignments. None of the local growers is cutting anything like the quantity that is usual at this time of the year. Outdoor flowers in many places are a fizzle and little first-class stock reaches the market. Fortunately, there are some good crops of gladioli and these bring a fairly good figure. Asters are poor with most growers and not at all plentiful. Some sweet peas are indifferent, but the usual run of them is poor, being short-stemmed and spotty. The supply is limited.

Small quantities of snapdragons and shasta daisies reach us and are bought quickly. Heliotropes, gaillardias, coreopsis and candytuft are exceedingly useful these days for basket work, and baskets of flowers in this city are popular. The supply of roses also is limited, but they are of fairly good quality and move easily. Valley is on hand, but the demand is not large. Most carnations are inferior and many growers are not cutting until the new crop arrives. Greens are plentiful.

Plattsburg, N. Y.—Arrangements recently were made by Harry M. Cooke for the purchase of the property of his late father, on South Peru street, including the Cooke greenhouses and business. Several months ago Mr. Cooke leased the Valley greenhouses. His business grew to such an extent that he found the Valley property inadequate, and a proposition was made to his brother and sister for the purchase of their share in the Cooke property.

WE GUARANTEE Metropolitan Boilers

To Do Their Work Consuming Less Fuel
Than Any Other Boiler.

Because of their proven scientifically perfect construction, Metropolitan Patented Boilers will heat a given amount of water quicker, with less fuel and less attention than any other boiler on the market.

The remarkable heating efficiency and quick steaming qualities of these boilers are due to their large and effective heating surface.

Just a few points of Metropolitan Patented Boiler merit:—

Smooth, perfect finished castings.

Push nipple connections.

Large fire box, providing ample combustion chamber, and permitting a sufficient charge of fuel to require attention only at long intervals.

Deep ash pit, making the removal of ashes a slight task.

Large flues, making the boiler easy to clean.

Grates that are made for hard usage and long service.

They are Fuel Saving, not Fuel Wasting. And above all, they cost less and are cheaper to operate than any other.

We also make soft coal boilers which are smokeless, and save 50 per cent in coal.

The Market.

Business continues somewhat quiet, though good for this season, and little change is expected until Labor day.

Each week there is a greater variety of gladioli, and these are plentiful and cheap. Asters are arriving in good quantities, but they do not seem to be so abundant as they sometimes are. They bring a fair price. Many of them are small. Hydrangeas now are in bloom and they are used by some in window displays. They also are used in making up pieces, the quantity of flowers that can be used for that purpose being small at the present time. Good roses are scarce and bring $6 to $8 per hundred. Some of the florists report that the new rose, Cleveland, is giving satisfaction.

Various Notes.

The window decorations at Fred P. Wolfinger's store during the last ten days consisted of specialties.

Henry A. Strobell reports business fair for this season of the year. Some days he is exceedingly busy, but on other days things are unusually quiet.

W. R. Jones last week reported that a thief had made away with $10 from his cash register, during the night. Entrance was made through a rear window, which had been left unlatched.

Philips Bros. had considerable wedding work last week, considering the season. Frank Philips is spending his vacation at Asbury Park. His brother, Frederick, spent his vacation fishing at Corson's inlet, near Ocean City, N. J. The principal sport there is fishing for channel bass and Mr. Philips succeeded in pulling out one of the largest of the season.

R. B. M.

BALTIMORE, MD.

J. Henry Joyeux, field seed manager for J. Bolgiano & Son, and Claude B. Ramsay, advertising manager of that firm, have returned from a week end trip, spent with Charles J. Bolgiano at his summer home in the Allegheny mountains near Mountain Lake Park, Md.

Eugene Smith, 28 years of age, 1919 Pennsylvania avenue, a florist, was found unconscious in bed in his room July 31. A bottle which had contained carbolic acid was found by the bedside and the examining physician reported that the entire contents had been swallowed by Smith. The young man was rushed to the hospital and shortly afterward was reported to be recovering from the effects of the self-administered poison.

The Market.

After a few cool days, we are back in the midst of another hot spell. Good flowers are scarcer than ever. As there do not seem to be any really good asters, the stock in the market consists principally of Beauties and other roses, lilies and gladioli, but there is not much trouble in getting along with what is offered, as there is little business. The retail stores generally seem to be trying to put in time until their customers get back from their vacations. Even good funeral orders are scarce, so they have plenty of time to trade vacation experiences.

Various Notes.

Ben Elliott, who was touring New England in his machine, had some unpleasant experiences on his way home, as he had his little daughter with him and every town in New York was quarantined on account of infantile paralysis. He was detained because he had no health certificate, and as the certificate could not be secured without residing in one place two weeks, he was unable to get one. He managed to bluff his way through, but when he wished to stop for the night he found that many hotels would not take a child under 16 years of age without a health certificate. In one instance he had to drive twenty-five miles through the rain to find some place where he could get shelter.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Ludwig have gone to Canada. They will visit the Thousand Islands and Montreal.

Albert Vick was compelled to take Mrs. Vick to the hospital for an operation. She is now getting along nicely. Clarke.

TOPEKA, KAN.

Edward G. Bass, proprietor of a range of houses opposite League park, on East Fifteenth street, on the morning of August 17 sustained a loss by fire estimated at $10,000. The blaze is believed to have started in the boiler house shortly after 4 a. m. Mrs. Bass was awakened by smoke and aroused Mr. Bass. Efforts to call the fire department were unavailing when the telephone service failed. The flames spread rapidly over the dry buildings. From the boiler house they lapped their way to the second story residence and in a few moments the building resembled a bonfire, a total loss, including the contents. Besides the home, a propagating house, conservatory, wagon shed, garage, pumping station, boiler house, south annex and show room were destroyed. When the firemen arrived after 5 o'clock they directed their energies to saving the greenhouses south of the residence. The range was valued at $16,000. Less than half of the damage is covered by insurance.

The Market.

Business has been unusually good for August and shows a marked improvement over that of last August. The unusually hot weather of July and the early part of August, and the heavy rains of a week ago, played havoc with the sweet peas. There are no good ones to be had now. Asters are improving and the first really good ones came in last week. Gladioli are arriving in large quantities and find a ready market. Panama and Mrs. Francis King rule the market, while America is decidedly poor this year. Dahlias are plentiful and of good quality. Snapdragons are good, but there is no call for them. Carnations are poor, except the whites and there are not nearly enough of them to meet the demand.

Roses are good and there are just about enough of them to allow the retailers to clean up every day. Hoosier Beauty, Russell and Ophelia roses are especially good.

Various Notes.

Robert Kurth, foreman of the Park Floral Co. greenhouses, was the only one from Denver who attended the convention at Houston. All hands at the Park Floral Co. store were busy August 19 with work for a large out-of-town funeral.

The Market.

Last week's business, while good, was not quite up to that of the previous week. The general supply is about the same, but in some lines more stock could be used to good advantage.

The cut of roses still is rather limited. Gladioli are in good supply, the same being true of Easter lilies. Asters have become rather scarce; the late ones are slow in arriving. Rubrum and album lilies are selling well and hydrangeas find a fair market. The first cosmos came in last week. Chrysanthemums and gypsophilas also were offered. Greens are plentiful. Some excellent wild smilax may be had.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger and family have gone to Emerado, N. D., for a visit of five or six weeks.

C. E. Critchell is motoring through Ohio, calling on the trade.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has been offering chrysanthemums during the last week or ten days.

L. H. Kyrk was the first in the market to offer cosmos this summer. It came in August 19.

L. Davis, with P. J. Olinger & Co., has returned from a five weeks' fishing trip in Arkansas. He is enthusiastic over the big ones he caught.

At the Carthage fair flower exhibit, T. B. George and Fred Backmeier cleaned up handsomely on the prizes. C. H. H.

AN INVITATION.

Timothy Smith, chairman; Frank A. Friedley, H. P. Knoble, C. B. Wilhelmy, E. A. Bause, O. P. Blackman, G. Jacques and Robert Weeks, who constitute the flower show committee of Cleveland's forthcoming exposition and fair, desire to extend an invitation to all florists in the central states to come to Cleveland between September 2 and 9 to see the first open-air fall flower show ever staged in Cleveland. This being about the last week before the actual fall season for retailers, growers and wholesalers begins, the committee looks for a large attendance from western New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Indiana and all of Ohio.

In addition to the flower show, the exposition offers some thrilling attractions; a 23-act open-air hippodrome and a fine exhibit of live stock from O. C. Barber's famous Anna Dean Farm, valued at $100,000.

The entire family takes a pride in the new houses. This bed of cannas and coleus was Mrs. Weiant's suggestion.

Gardens, Newark, Ohio

Just to give you an idea of the amount of materials in such houses; the framework and glass alone weighed over 310 tons. Fifteen miles of sash bars and fourteen miles of rafters, purlins, posts, etc., were used in their construction.

In the vacuum heating there are ten miles of pipes, ten tons of pipe fittings, 4000 roller spools and a carload of asbestos pipe covering.

There is a mile of Skinner System Irrigation lines and an automatic steam pump with a capacity of $\frac{1}{4}$ -million gallons every ten hours.

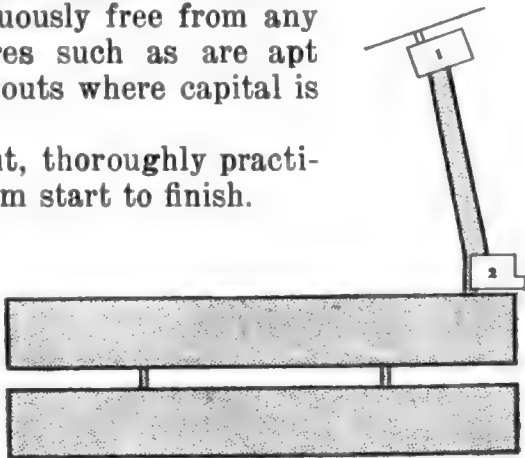

There were fifty miles of wire used for the cucumber trellises, and four carloads of cement for the walks and walls.

We believe this range to be one of the finest commercial layouts we have been privileged to erect. Structurally, it embodies all that's best in our wide spaced iron frame construction.

From a business paying point of view, it is conspicuously free from any superfluous features such as are apt to be found in layouts where capital is plentiful.

It is a clean cut, thoroughly practical proposition from start to finish.

The curved save propagating house, 25x200 ft., connects the packing sheds numbered 1 and 2. Note that the big houses have two connecting passages.

Two-thirds of the workers in the paper box industry were reported on strike last week. They demand wage advances and improved working conditions which, if granted, will further advance the cost of florists' boxes. The strike comes at a time when the supply of boxes on hand is the smallest in years, and when prices are the highest ever known. No maker will accept an order subject to delivery at a definite day and price.

James J. Daly, president of the Greenwood Florists' Association, a south Brooklyn organization, is making arrangements for the association's annual outing, which is to be held at Green island, Labor day, September 4. On the day of the picnic members will assemble at the clubrooms in the Fifth avenue court building and will be taken to the grounds in automobiles.

BUGS ON ASTER PLANTS.

Under separate cover we are sending you a bug which is starting to do a good deal of damage to our aster plants. We also send a few plants that have been attacked. They seem to wilt quickly after being attacked and in some cases are dying. Please advise us as promptly as possible what remedy to use. In the meantime, we think we will apply a little Paris green, being careful not to have it too strong.

The black beetle attacking flowers of asters is well known and readily controllable by spraying with a weak solution of Paris green. The bugs forwarded I do not know. I would, however, suggest spraying with Paris green at the rate of one ounce to fifteen gallons of water, and adding a little nicotine. I consider Black Leaf 40 the strongest and most effective. This mixture should surely clean out your pests.

Lincoln, Neb.—Established only a year ago, the Enslow Floral Co. has built a thriving business in plants and cut flowers, both in Lincoln and other parts of the state. A large out-of-town patronage has been gained through service. The company has never missed a train on an out-of-town order and has worked many a night that orders might be executed on time. O. H. Enslow and J. A. Cruickshank are the builders.

Cedar Falls, Ia.—At the annual meeting of the Bancroft Co. all the officers were reelected, as follows: President, W. N. Hostrop; vice-president, Ward Pierce; secretary-treasurer, George Bancroft; directors, M. F. Arey and C. J. Wild. The concern is in a most prosperous condition, according to the directors' report, which showed the year's business was nearly $35,000. The usual six per cent dividend was declared.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Esther Spear, 4 years old, was run down and killed August 15 by an automobile owned and driven by Charles H. Schoenhut, florist, 352 William street. Her skull was crushed. Mr. Schoenhut said the child ran from the rear of a wagon directly in front of the auto. A front wheel of the car passed over her head. The machine was stopped, according to witnesses, before the rear wheel touched the child. Mr. Schoenhut drove to the Sycamore street police station and reported the fatality. Half a dozen witnesses also said it was plainly an accident, and Mr. Schoenhut was released.

HEAD LETTUCE UNDER GLASS

"If you have an old greenhouse," says this writer, "a greenhouse that apparently has reached its limit of usefulness for growing flowers and seems to be due for the junk heap, renew its lease of life, as I did with one of mine, by growing head lettuce in it."

LETTUCE, especially greenhouse lettuce, always commands a good price in the winter market, but it is well to arrange the planting of the seeds so as to bring the largest proportion of the plants to maturity at the proper time to meet the greatest demand, which is around Thanksgiving, Christmas and the Lenten season. Seed catalogues give the time required for growing lettuce generally as six weeks, but I find that better results are obtained by allowing my plants ten weeks from the planting of the seeds until the cutting of the heads. In this way no hard forcing is used and the plants are stronger.

Sowing the Seed.

So, to harvest a crop of lettuce at Thanksgiving, it is well to plant the seed about the middle of September. For this purpose use shallow flats filled with light, rich compost, consisting of one-fourth manure and three-fourths soil, sifted through a coarse sieve. Before putting the seeds in, try to have the soil evenly moist; not soft and pasty, but at the point where it can be handled without caking or leaving mud on the hands. By setting the flats in the ground so that the tops of them are even with the surface, you can keep a better degree of moisture at the bottom of the flats, which is desirable. Sow the lettuce seed as thinly as possible, in drills two inches apart the narrow way of the flats. Press them firmly with your hand before covering lightly with soil.

In September the seed flats may be left outdoors if given a little shade during the hottest part of the day and some protection from sudden frosts at night. A canvas stretched on a frame and placed at least three feet above the flats during the middle of the day provides sufficient shade, and glass sashes laid over the flats at night are protection enough in the early fall. Water lightly each day, always early in the morning. Give the flats plenty of air, but protect them from rains. In from five to eight days the seeds should be sprouted.

The First Transplanting.

Make no attempt to thin or transplant these young shoots until the third leaf is formed; then transfer them to a space in the greenhouse, setting the plants 2x2 inches apart. Have the soil for this about as rich as in the flats, but in this case it need not be sifted, only raked carefully.

These little plants must be handled carefully and the roots must be disturbed as little as possible. Usually the best way is to cut down each row of plants in the flats with a thin-bladed knife, lifting a part of the row of plants with the earth on, separating each one as you need it and using only the best and strongest shoots. It does not pay to transplant any thin, spindly or poorly rooted ones. If you do this on a sunshiny day, see that the roof of the greenhouse is shaded with a light mixture of lime and sand, with water enough to make a thin coating when thrown on the roof, or shade with cheesecloth or newspapers, but be sure these are several feet above the plants, so as to allow a good circulation of air.

As soon as the plants are well established give them more sunlight, unless they show a tendency to grow spindly, when they should be run at a lower temperature. When they are four or five inches high, transplant them to the beds where they are to stay until maturity.

Set these eight inches each way, first marking the beds evenly, so that the plants will be in straight rows both ways. Pack the soil rather firmly around each plant and use the same precaution as formerly in regard to shading, until they are established.

The First Firing.

By this time it will probably be necessary occasionally to have fire in the greenhouse boiler, but great care must be taken not to allow the temperature to become too high. A temperature of 50 to 60 degrees in the daytime and 35 to 45 degrees at night is desirable. I never force my lettuce except when the heads have formed, and then I do it carefully. Be sure that your ventilators are up the first thing in the morning, no matter what the weather; regulate the distance they are opened by the outside temperature.

Give the plants water as they need it, using a hose with a nozzle that will permit the water to run out freely between the plants, letting as little as possible touch the plants themselves. Do this always in the morning, and never so heavily that the water will lie in puddles around the plants. Cultivate the soil by means of any of the small implements that are provided for this purpose, keeping the ground well loosened between the plants. An application of manure water now and then is beneficial, with occasional doses of nitrate of soda or any commercial fertilizer that contains it, but apply these in moderate quantities only and mix them thoroughly with the soil. The nitrate of soda will materially help in the heading process of the lettuce.

HEAD LETTUCE UNDER GLASS

"If you have an old greenhouse," says this writer, "a greenhouse that apparently has reached its limit of usefulness for growing flowers and seems to be due for the junk heap, renew its lease of life, as I did with one of mine, by growing head lettuce in it."

LETTUCE, especially greenhouse lettuce, always commands a good price in the winter market, but it is well to arrange the planting of the seeds so as to bring the largest proportion of the plants to maturity at the proper time to meet the greatest demand, which is around Thanksgiving, Christmas and the Lenten season. In this way no hard forcing is used and the plants are stronger.

Sowing the Seed.

So, to harvest a crop of lettuce at Thanksgiving, it is well to plant the seed about the middle of September. For this purpose use shallow flats filled with light, rich compost, consisting of one-fourth manure and three-fourths soil, sifted through a coarse sieve. Before putting the seeds in, try to have the soil evenly moist; not soft and pasty, but at the point where it can be handled without caking or leaving mud on the hands. The nitrate of soda will materially help in the heading process of the lettuce.

Yellow Seed Butter Lettuce, an Excellent Market Variety.

By the first part of November the plants should commence to head. Keep the ground moist and free from weeds, allow plenty of sun and air, see that your temperatures keep as normal as possible and by Thanksgiving week you should be able to harvest your first crop of lettuce.

A greenhouse 18x100 feet will hold 3,000 plants, set eight inches apart, but sometimes all the plants do not mature at the same time. However, you can count on at least ninety per cent doing so, and if you do a little judicious forcing toward the last you can often have all your plants ready at once.

Marketing the Crop.

Marketing lettuce to the best advantage is perhaps the greatest problem to the grower. Some make a practice of sending it by the barrel to the city through the entire season, but the trouble with this method is that, if the market is oversupplied, your stock, no matter how good, must take its chance with the rest, good, bad and indifferent. If you have means of conveying it to a nearby market, you can see that it reaches there in good shape and you will know at once what price you are to get for it. Or, if you advertise it, often hucksters will agree to take so many heads per day or week at a regular price for the entire season. Sometimes they will come to the greenhouse and get it, which is an advantage.

One way in which I disposed of some of my crop—and the way which brought me the best financial results—was to make paraffine paper bags and put into each bag a head of lettuce, first removing the roots and large outside leaves. The bags were sealed with a gummed label, on which were typewritten my name and the date of gathering. These lettuces, packed in crates and shipped to a fancy grocer, brought 10 cents a head, well repaying the extra care and trouble.

Selling to Hotels.

Sometimes you can get in touch with large hotels that will take a regular number of heads per day. While these hotels seldom pay over a few cents a head, there is this advantage in an arrangement of this sort, that the demand will extend through the entire year and you can grow lettuce for this purpose in the open ground through the summer months. Then, too, there is generally a local demand, but this is always more or less uncertain in extent.

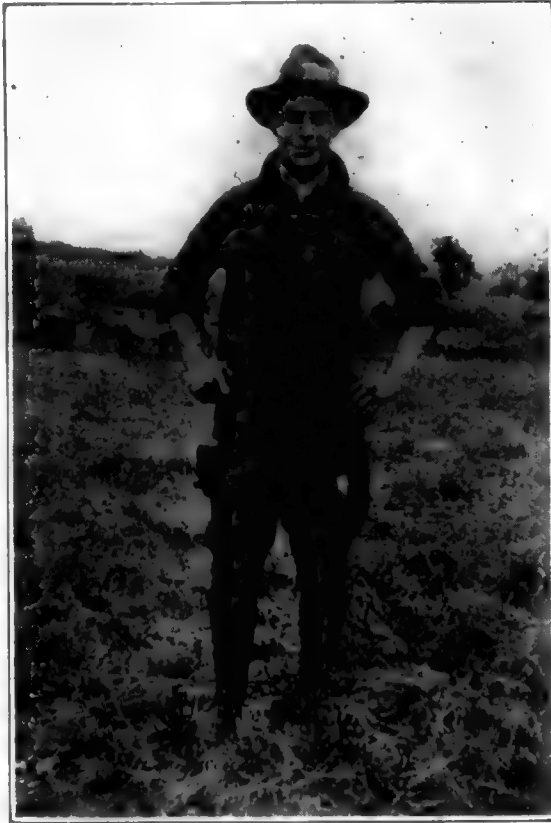

After the first crop of lettuce is gathered, it will be necessary to give the soil in the beds a thorough spading, mixing with it a light dressing of well rotted stable manure and raking it all over smoothly before putting in the next crop, which should have been started and transplanted at the right time, so as to avoid any delay in refilling the greenhouse beds. The best way is to start two flats of seeds every two weeks, as this will give you a constant supply of plants to transplant as soon as there is room for them in the beds.

In a future issue of The Review, the writer will give some suggestions as to the most suitable varieties of lettuce and the best methods of combating pests and diseases in the lettuce house.

Among the scores of youthful florists who are with the national guard on the Mexican border is Walter Young, secretary of the C. Young & Sons Co., of

HOW TO CARE FOR BULBS.

Please inform me when to pot my bulbs and when to put them in coldframes; also when should I move them to the greenhouse to have them bloom about the first of March and Easter? About what temperature should be maintained? M. E. E.—Ind.

You do not mention any particular bulbs, but I will assume that you have reference to such Dutch bulbs as narcissi, tulips and hyacinths. These usually come to hand about October 1. They should be unpacked at once and potted as soon as possible. The sooner they are placed in the soil after being received, the better they are likely to do. Bulbs after potting may be placed on the floor of a cold cellar and kept there until wanted for forcing in coldframes, or outdoors, if you have no suitable frame or cellar. If they are kept outdoors it should be on well-drained land, and they must be properly protected. Plants should be housed from three to six weeks before they are wanted in bloom, and should be given an average night temperature of 50 degrees, according to the season and variety. Watch the cultural columns of The Review for more extended notes on bulbs from time to time. C. W.

CHINCH BUGS ON DAHLIAS.

Our dahlias have done poorly this year. The leaves of most of the plants are affected as the samples we enclose. Furthermore, many of the flower buds drop off when they are about to open. Can you tell us what the trouble is? So far we have been unable to find any bugs or other pests on the plants.

G. R. K.—O.

I think it probable that the tarnished plant bug, also called the chinch bug, is the cause of the loss of foliage and buds on your dahlias. This pest is destructive not only to dahlias but also to many other garden plants and is not an easy pest to fight. Sometimes it will sting the shoots so thoroughly that the plants will not produce a solitary flower. The full-grown bug is from one-fifth to one-fourth of an inch long, brown and dull yellow in color and so active on the wing that it is almost impossible to kill it with any insecticide. In a young state the bugs may be killed by spraying with a nicotine or kerosene emulsion.

The chinch bugs hibernate in heaps of crop rubbish. Therefore destroy all such possible abodes for them as one means of control. The chinch bugs, when they pierce the dahlia shoots, suck out the sap, causing the shoots to become distorted and black, and often new shoots formed are similarly destroyed. Cleanliness and early and frequent sprayings as suggested are not complete remedies, but they will, if tried, materially assist you in fighting a difficult foe. C. W.

DO AUTOS PAY?

I would like to ask the following questions: Do you think auto delivery pays? If so, what make has been found to be the cheapest on upkeep and expense? Our average loads are between 500 pounds and one ton. We have a 5-mile run to the downtown section of town. Are solid tires better than pneumatic? Why, or why not?

I bought a second-hand delivery car this spring and I guess I got a poor deal, as I have had a lot of trouble with it. I am thinking now of buying a new car, but would like a little information on the subject before making up my mind. W. J.—Minn.

The question of whether or not automobile delivery pays depends on the individual conditions and the letter does not give sufficient information for one to be able to judge of the case. If there are several 10-mile round trips to town to make each day, one would not have the slightest doubt that an automobile will pay. As a general proposition it can be said that an automobile will pay any florist who can keep it busy and, for that matter, it does not eat its head off in the stable any faster than does a horse.

Do not think of solid tires for a florist's truck. The solid tires no doubt would be cheaper in themselves, but they would take more out of the stock than pneumatic tires take out of the florist's purse.

As to the make of machine, experience indicates that none of them will run continuously without more or less attention and that the older they become the more adjustment and renewals of parts are necessary. Write to the automobile advertisers who are using space in The Review and get their literature.

LOZIER'S WREATH.

One of the show places for shoppers in Des Moines, Ia., is the new Lozier store, at 521 East Locust street. It is 20x110 feet, with equipment and facilities that, according to general opinion, make it one of the best shops of its class in the country. The photograph herewith reproduced, of a galax wreath, with a cluster of roses, lilies and valley, gives an idea of why Mr. Lozier has so increased his trade as to have made it necessary for him to move from his old stand at 410 East Sixth street into the model store he now occupies.

REX BEGONIA FOLIAGE BURNED.

Can you give me any information as to the causes of the dry rot on the enclosed leaves? The plants are grown in large, airy houses and are in apparent good health until a certain stage of growth, when the edges of the leaves suddenly become brown.

S. G. K.—Can.

The Rex begonia leaves arrived in good condition. I am afraid you have been growing these plants in too strong light and that the sun has burned them. At least the foliage had that appearance. Give them some shade; not a heavy one, but sufficient to exclude the direct rays of the summer sun. The plants will not mind winter sun in the least. Perhaps you may have noticed these begonias coming up below the benches of your houses, growing in comparatively poor soil and making a splendid growth, where the soil was almost constantly damp and the plants in complete shade. This shows that this type of begonia likes moisture and shade, to be at its best. If you give your plants such conditions you should have no further leaf-burning.

REMEDY FOR ASTER BEETLES.

I notice in The Review for August 3, on page 20, that E. B. inquires about a remedy for the aster beetle. Now, we used to be bothered quite a bit by this pest and suffered much damage, but since we have grown castor bean plants among our asters for shade there has been no trouble from this source. Whether it is the shade, the beans, or both, I do not know, but the beetles surely have let us alone.

We grow our asters in rows about twenty inches apart and set the castor bean plants about twelve feet apart, in every fifth row, so spacing them that they will stand zigzag with the plants in the next row. We consider castor bean plants better than corn for giving shade, as they do not sap the moisture from the soil so much. They permit better circulation of air and easier spraying in dry weather.

HOW TEXANS LOOK AT IT.

The big convention of the S. A. F. is over and, as we look back to it with wondering awe, we can recall the past, we can put before our minds many scenes and words spoken and enjoy the bliss, for the big S. A. F. convention was in Texas and we now can call the trade's most prominent men our friends. I am thankful for the honor and pleasure it gave me to meet them. I want to extend my thanks to the florists of Houston for the splendid and most interesting program of enjoyments. This convention is a jewel in our star for the florists. The selection of the Rice hotel for headquarters was the first good judgment of the florists. This hotel stands as a king in that king city. Houston has won over other Texan cities with its world-promising harbor. The roof of the Rice hotel is a triumph for that city—the view obtained from there is sufficient to convince one that Houston is a grand place.

The reception was another proof of hospitality, but the height of all pleasure was the trip to the San Jacinto battleground. I shall always remember that trip—the beautiful scenes of the banks of the channel with its native trees, the branching off of the Bayou, the wharves where the cotton is shipped to all points of the world, along the channel many prosperous business places, the place where Santa Ana was captured, and the battleground itself, the victory place of our Lone Star state. Try to picture this place in the spring, when the flowers, our native flowers, are in bloom. It is a beautiful floral carpet in all colors, waving in the gulf breezes. If our northern friends had seen this they surely would always remember the words of our president, of our big chief, R. C. Kerr, descriptive of Texas, "The land of sunshine and flowers." The watermelons were ripe and they gladdened the florists' hearts. The auto ride was postponed on account of the storm, of which warning was given several days ahead, but the florists would take no heed until it was on its way across the plains and then our Houston friends had to give in. Our Galveston trip would have been a most charming one, but it, too, was called off on account of the storm and the glorious convention came to an end with a kind of nightmare. It seems our prayers for our dear Houston friends were heard and the storm took a different road and spared them.

GRUBS IN ROSE SOIL.

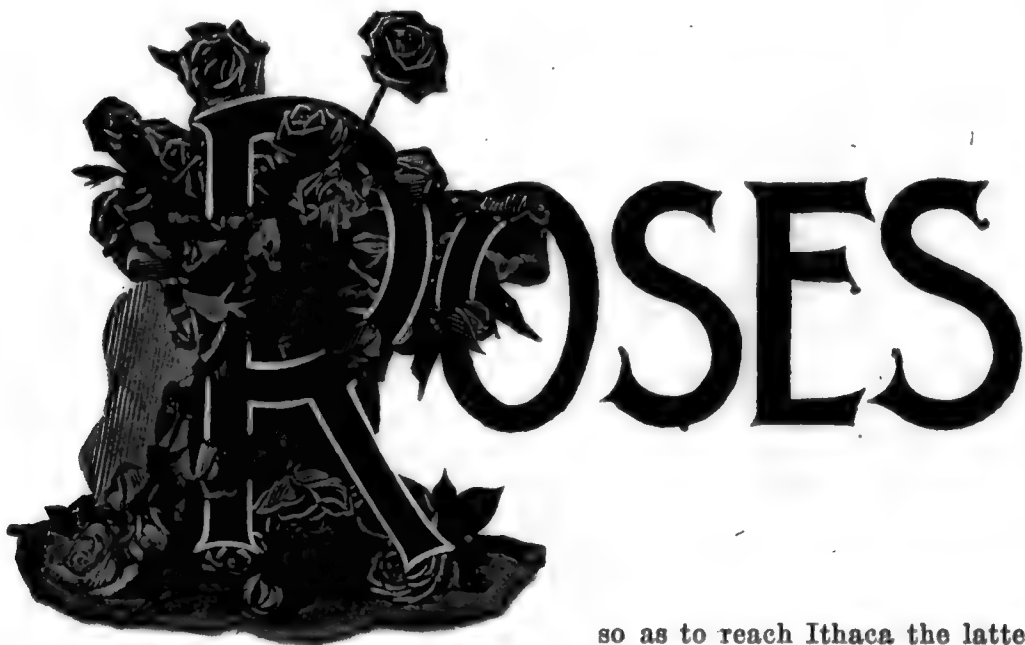

Will you kindly advise us what to use to kill grub worms? The soil in our rose benches contains a great many, and most of them are quite large. We have used as much lime as the soil will stand, thinking this would kill them, but it seems to have no effect. We are using about thirty-five pounds of Scotch soot to 900 square feet of bench space.

S. A. G.—W. Va.

Sterilization of the soil before planting is the best remedy for these grubs, which are the larvæ of the May beetle and will ruin many of your roses if they are not killed. They also eat the roots of many other plants and frequently destroy wide stretches of lawn and pasture land. Seeing that steam sterilization cannot be carried out, I would secure some carbon bisulphide. This comes in pound cans. Bore holes four inches deep, with pointed sticks, a foot apart each way in the benches. Pour a scant teaspoonful of carbon in each hole and immediately cover with soil. The gas generated will destroy the grubs and other soil pests and will not harm the roses. Do not use any naked lights while using the carbon, as it is of an explosive nature. The odor from the carbon is quite disagreeable, but soon passes away and the gas will certainly kill your grubs.

On lawns heavy rolling will kill many of the grubs when the land is broken up. Where they are abundant, hogs and fowls will destroy them in immense numbers. A heavy top-dressing of kainite and nitrate of soda has been found effective in destroying the pests in some states. The carbon is most effective when the soil is quite damp. Scotch soot helps to keep away cutworms and other larvæ, but I do not think either lime or soot will drive them away from your benches, and a too heavy use of them may injure your roses.

C. W.

TO THE GROWERS OF ROSES.

This is to inform you that members of the American Rose Society have been raising money to coöperate in employing a trained plant pathologist to investigate diseases of roses. Sufficient money has now been obtained to assure this work, which is already under way. Dr. L. M. Massey, of the New York State College of Agriculture, Cornell University, Ithaca, is conducting the investigations. It is hoped that all growers of roses will now take advantage of this arrangement, not only to obtain what little information there is already at hand, but to coöperate in ways which will be suggested from time to time. Through coöperation with Dr. Massey, the growers will greatly increase the efficiency of the investigation and obtain the greatest returns from their investment.

First of all it seems desirable to make a rose disease survey such as will acquaint us with the various diseases, together with their range and the extent of injury caused by them in this country. In order that this survey may reach its maximum efficiency, it will be necessary for the growers to coöperate by sending specimens of diseased plants. Franked tags will be supplied on request. It is hoped that each grower will interest himself in this work sufficiently to collect and send diseased material, together with a brief statement regarding varieties affected, nature and extent of injury, time of appearance of the disease, and other points of interest which may have been noticed. Acknowledgment of receipt of material will be made and such information as is available in the line of control will be given. Many growers will be visited, but it is hardly necessary to say that it will be impossible to visit all.

The material sent should be freshly collected and should show various stages in the development of the disease. Where roots are sent it will usually be undesirable to enclose any soil. Where convenient, specimens should be mailed so as to reach Ithaca the latter part of the week. Dr. Massey may be away from the city during the early part of the week and the material should receive immediate attention upon its arrival.

Place leaves, buds, etc., between the leaves of an old newspaper, a few between each two sheets. Then roll into a tight bundle and wrap in stout paper. Tie well, attach one of the franked tags on which you have written your name, address and mail. It will go postage free.

Schizanthus.

Sow a batch of Schizanthus Wisetonensis, or one of the various improvements on this variety, now. The seeds will germinate rapidly, when the seedlings should be potted off singly and grown in either a coldframe or a greenhouse, well up to the light. Give this beautiful annual cool treatment all the time, with plenty of fresh air. It will not tolerate coddling in any form. The schizanthus likes a light but rich compost, and when in active growth it enjoys frequent applications of liquid manure.

Hollyhocks.

Hollyhocks are less affected by rust than was the case a decade ago, and are coming much more into favor. Both single and double varieties are beautiful. Personally, I prefer the former, and do not believe there can be any more beautiful object in the hardy perennial garden than a clump of well-flowered single Allegheny hollyhocks. Though they are usually treated as biennials, it is well to remember that hollyhocks are true perennials and the single varieties, especially, will last eight or ten years if properly treated. Sow the seeds now, outdoors. When the seedlings are of sufficient size, transplant into nursery rows. Planting may be done in fall or spring. The former season is preferable, if care is taken to give the plants a light winter mulch. Chater's will be found a splendid strain of double hollyhocks.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

Have you remembered to plant out a sufficient number of Asparagus Sprengeri? There are usually somewhat shaded positions, where flowering plants would not be in their best element, which can be used for A. Sprengeri; in even a narrow box it makes a really surprising growth. Even if lacking bench room you need not be without it. Fill some baskets and suspend them in one of your houses. From even a few baskets it is possible to cut a large number of bunches. Line the baskets with rough moss—sheet moss is good—and give the plants a generous compost. Once well established, they will need lots of water.

Cyclamens.

Have you remembered to sow your cyclamen seed? If not, do so at once, as no time is to be lost if nice blooming plants are wanted for Thanksgiving and Christmas next year. Do not believe the man who tells you that a year is ample time to produce fine plants. You will find that such plants, no matter how ably cared for, will look pretty puny when compared with those sown a few months earlier. Purchase the best seed obtainable and in separate colors, such as red, pink, salmon or white. Do not buy cheap mixtures; a large percentage would carry small flowers and be of unsalable colors. Sow in pans or small, shallow flats of light, sandy soil. Cover lightly and, after watering, protect with glass and paper. Place them in a warm, moist house. Do not allow the seed pans or flats to become dry. As the seedlings appear, remove the glass, but do not expose to direct sunlight.

Small Ferns for Dishes.

Almost any country florist knows how to propagate nephrolepis, but it is quite another matter to raise small table ferns in variety. Some specialists raise these by the millions from spores and they can do so much better and more cheaply than the man who has to grow a little of everything. Now is the time to buy a good stock of these ferns from one of the big specialists. It is not necessary to have them from pots; many are sold cheaply in small trays or flats, and if these are placed in small pots when received, given some shade and carefully watered, they will soon make nice plants for fall and winter use. The various forms of pteris make fine ferns for table centerpieces; so do some of the adiantums, aspidiums, lygodiums, cyrtomiums, polystichums and onychiums. Some of the selaginellas also are fine for the same purpose.

Berried Solanums.

The Jerusalem cherries, owing to the copious rainfalls, have this season made a strong growth in the field and are now quite heavily berried. As a continuation of wet weather may make the plants unduly large, it would be well to lift and pot them now. See that some soil adheres to the roots. After potting, water thoroughly, shade from direct sunshine, and spray freely until the plants cease wilting. The field plants are always so much larger and better berried than pot-grown ones that the wonder is that anyone continues the latter method of culture in summer.

PROGRESS OF THE F. T. D.

In greeting my worthy successor, W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., as president of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, I feel that there are some statements pertinent to this organization due the members and past officials.

It has been my pleasure to see this organization grow from nothing to 360

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

IRWIN BERTERMANN.

INDIANA is known as the birthplace of poets and authors, and those who know Irwin Bertermann will recognize that, as a native Hoosier, he came naturally by some of his best qualities. Mr. Bertermann is 36 years of age; he spent his first two decades in growing up and in acquiring an education, but the other sixteen years have been devoted exclusively to advancing the flower business, that of Bertermann Bros. Co., Indianapolis, in particular and that of all other florists in general. Mr. Bertermann was treasurer of the first National Flower Show, at Chicago, and was the first secretary of the F. T. D., succeeding J. A. Valentine in the presidency, which he now turns over to W. F. Gude. Mr. Bertermann also served last year as chairman of the S. A. F. committee on national publicity for flowers.

members, consisting mainly of the best retailers in the country; also, to have this organization advanced from $300 in arrears in the guarantee fund to approximately $6,000 gross balance. The annual business transacted by the members of this organization is estimated at well over a million dollars per year. This wonderful growth has been due in part to the untiring efforts of several of the members, particularly Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit; Paul Schulz, of Louisville; George Stumpp, of New York; W. J. Smyth, of Chicago; W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, and numerous others. The officers and directors of the association have worked untiringly and have given their time and money to promote this organization's welfare. There has never been a misunderstanding between any of them and, on the whole, progress has been one of harmony and general upbuilding. I wish to pay particular tribute to the untiring efforts of Secretary Pochelon and Treasurer W. L. Rock, whose work is scarcely appreciated as yet. The adjourned meeting in Chicago, October 11 and 12, undoubtedly will be well attended and a source of much benefit to the whole flower profession and plans are under way which will be of decided value in the sale and promotion of flowers throughout the country.

I wish again to thank all those who have been instrumental in the success of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, not forgetting the trade press.

Irwin Bertermann,
Past President.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleyas.

The last half of August and the first half of September finds us with few cattleya flowers. In fact, they are always scarcer at this time than in any other period of the year. Except for the small-flowered but ever useful C. Harrisoniæ and a few late stragglers of C. gigas and C. Miss Willmott, the flowers would be practically nil. Every florist who grows cattleyas for home trade should include a few of C. Harrisoniæ. It grows well in pans or baskets suspended near the ridge of the house, where it gets fairly good light and plenty of fresh air.

C. labiata now has its sheaths well advanced and buds can be seen on some of the plants. How ill we can afford to lose this fall cattleya! And it is a thousand pities that imported plants get smaller each year and at the same time more expensive. Will not some enterprising raiser of orchid seedlings select good types of labiata and raise them in quantity? Such seedlings should command good prices even before they flower and should prove a paying proposition. The seedlings will have far more vigor and better lasting properties than collected stock. Keep the *labiata*s well supplied with water, but not too heavily shaded. This summer has proved the wonderful advantages growers have who possess movable shades, as there have been many days when all orchid houses would have been vastly better without any shade at all.

C. Trianæ, C. Percivaliana, C. Schræderæ and other cattleyas which follow C. labiata have all got bulbs pretty well made up. Where feeding is done—and I consider it a decided benefit to well rooted cattleyas where they are given an abundance of fresh air—it is well to use it in weaker doses when the sheaths are well advanced. An overdose may destroy some of the flower buds, even though the plants may show no ill effects. C. Mossiæ, C. Mendelii, C. Skinneri, C. speciosissima, C. gigas, C. Gaskelliana and other late spring or summer-blooming varieties will still need a good water supply, but as the evenings grow cooler be sure to have the atmosphere of the house dry before nightfall. Do not, on any consideration, close the ventilators because of one or two cool nights. Cattleyas love fresh air and there are few days in even the most severe weather when the ventilators cannot be opened for a few hours, while at this season there is no earthly excuse for closing them either night or day.

Dendrobiums.

Plants of Dendrobium formosum giganteum, and D. Phalænopsis and its form Schræderianum, should still be kept in a warm, moist house. These two dendrobies love heat, and if a little fire heat can be given on cool nights it will be of decided benefit. Many of the plants of D. nobile and its many hybrids, also D. Wardianum, now have their pseudo-bulbs well developed and firmed, and these should be removed to drier and somewhat cooler and more airy quarters, to assist in ripening their growths. The water supply also should be gradually decreased. Where the plants have not completed their growths, keep them hot and moist, closing the house sufficiently early to bottle up a nice, brisk heat.

VAN AART HOME FROM HOLLAND.

John Van Aart, of Paducah, Ky., returned home August 24 from a trip to his native town, Lisse, in Holland. Some of his experiences are of general interest.

Mr. Van Aart left New York June 17, sailing aboard the Ryndam. The steamer's first stop was at Falmouth, England, where they spent two days, not being allowed to land. They had a safe passage across the Atlantic, but after leaving Falmouth struck a rock, tearing a hole in the ship's side twenty feet long. The steamer's double bottom saved the craft, but she was forced to lay up in Kirkwall for repairs. The cause of the accident lay in the lack of lights.

From his mother's home near Lisse Mr. Van Aart could hear the roar of the cannon on the Belgian front. "The roaring was continuous and sounded like an earthquake," he said. Mr. Van Aart also saw numerous aeroplanes and at night once discerned two in a battle in the sky above Belgium. The flash of the rapid-fire guns of the planes could be seen, although they could not be heard.

To go into Germany from Holland it is necessary that one show letters and credentials, explaining one's business in full, and to wait eight days for the papers to be sent in to headquarters, examined and returned. Directly across the Holland border in Germany it is necessary for one to secure a permit from the mayor of the town in order to get food at a hotel.

While food is obtainable in Holland, the prices are extremely high. Butter sells for $1.25 a pound, while eggs bring 7 and 8 cents apiece. Potatoes sell at $2.25 and $2.50 a bushel. Meat is unobtainable.

Every lot and fence corner is under cultivation in Holland, according to Mr. Van Aart, and the chief difficulty is in securing labor to work the farms and gardens. Wages are twice as high as usual. A part of the problem is solved in allowing each of the soldiers to return to his home one month in every six to work his garden or farm.

MULCH FOR ASPARAGUS.

Would a mulch of oak leaves benefit Asparagus plumosus nanus? How would it do to mix stable manure with the leaves as a mulch for asparagus?

G. K.—Fla.

The oak leaves, when rotted, could be mixed in compost and used to advantage for some crops, but as a mulch for asparagus the stable manure alone would be preferable. Asparagus is a rank feeder and enjoys a liberal quantity of cow manure, either in the soil or when used as a mulch, or both.

CARNATIONS

CLUB-ROOT ON CARNATIONS.

Is there any remedy or check for club-root on carnations, or are my plants all doomed? They were planted in April under a light shading of laths, in soil that had never before been cultivated, and were lightly mulched with stable manure. The plants grew luxuriantly. I gave them the first hoeing three weeks ago, during a period of rains. The week following they began showing a decline and today I pulled one up and found it badly infected with club-root or root-knot.

O. W. H.—Fla.

As far as we know, no remedy has been found for this disease. Once the plants are badly affected, they succumb sooner or later to such an extent that the returns from the bench space do not pay for the cost of growing. This trouble seems to be confined chiefly to the southern states, from which we have received a number of complaints, and it would seem worth while for one of the experiment stations located in that section to take up this subject for investigation. It has been suggested that a salty fertilizer, such as nitrate of soda, might prove beneficial, but this is merely a suggestion.

ANNAS

IMPROVEMENT OF THE CANNA.

Notes of a Trip to West Grove.

The mail brought a tempting invitation from Robert Pyle, president of the Conard & Jones Co., to visit West Grove and see the cannas. Something was said about some good new varieties and a word of caution was thrown in about avoiding Jupiter Pluvius. An afternoon was gladly named. It proved a happy selection. King Sol was there in all his glory and West Grove never looked prettier. The canna fields were not at their best, Mr. Pyle said. It had been dry and hot, 97 degrees in the shade, the day before and it was not exactly the right hour, earlier or later in the day were better undoubtedly, but what matters it to the unaccustomed? Fancy beautiful farming country, gently undulating valleys and hills on either side of the winding road, with a bit of woodland beyond. Then fancy the most glorious fields of color coming into view as the hilltop is reached; fields of green and bronze foliage surmounted by orange scarlets, deep oranges, bright yellows, rich pinks and ever pure whites, each color flowing like the water of a brook down the hillside until lost to view in the valley below. Would you care whether these cannas had looked a little better at some other time? Not a bit. You would just be glad that you were there to see them looking so amazingly lovely in the afternoon sunlight. You would smile at them and they would smile back in the joy of life. You would also wonder whether Mr. Pyle knew what a rare gem lay at his feet and as you looked at him you thought that perhaps he did know and hoped you were right.

Mr. Pyle would not permit a detailed examination of form and color without the presence of the man who has improved the canna, Antoine Wintzer. So down the hillside to the greenhouses the road was followed, bordered by long rows of cannas. There was Mr. Wintzer ready to show and talk of cannas with a knowledge and simplicity that never fail to charm.

Firebird and Its Brood.

There is a Barnum story—the name of the bright visitor who told it was missed—to the effect that he liked any color so it was red. This story was to the point because of the seedlings of Canna Firebird and the prominent position accorded them and their parent. There were ten of these seedlings deemed worthy of saving. Three of the ten have shown especial promise. All three are nearly identical with the parent in color of flower and in foliage.

It may not be regular to say so, but it is quite true that a hurry-up telephone call and its consequent distractions, to say nothing of the lapse of hours, has shaken up the mental view of the gorgeous canna fields at West Grove. Where was I? Oh, yes—looking at the seedlings of Firebird! Three of the ten are like the parent in color, a glorious red between scarlet and crimson. All these three make heavier plants than Firebird; that means that they bloom more freely. One of them, No. 6, is planted by Mr. Wintzer's house. The other two, No. 9 and No. 10, are on the main road by the offices in a canna until you see it. The critics say City of Portland bears blooms that show more life than the blooms of Mrs. Conard. Time will prove this and other points of comparison. Meanwhile, City of Portland clearly shows that it is a fine canna.

The Symbol of Purity.

Now for the whites. Here also there is something doing. Some fifteen years ago, Mr. Wintzer produced Mont Blanc, the finest white canna. Six years later, more or less, the floral world was again startled by Mrs. Blanche Wintzer. Today he has a show of seedlings from Mont Blanc and Blanche Wintzer that promise another step forward. There are four or five of these white seedlings that are simply fascinating—great, big trusses of pure white flowers of immense size, borne erect, above strong, clean foliage. They are a sight. You go up the field to look at Flag of Truce, a fine, showy canna of stronger growth than the Mont Blanc-Blanche Wintzer seedlings, but not a pure white, though at a distance the color in Flag of Truce cannot be distinguished. There are other white canna seedlings, notably from Eureka, but they are not so promising. It may be that a hybridizer's own seedlings do best with him, or it may be that the best blood is in the Mont Blanc-Blanche Wintzer strain; anyway, it looked like a sure victory for the home team.

Quest for Pure Gold.

The yellow canna is today, as it has been for many years, a matter of deep interest. The aim is to get a pure yellow flower that will not fade. The strongest yellows are marred by markings, usually of scarlet. Florence Vaughan is an example of this class, a fine canna but not a pure yellow. The purer the yellow, the more apt it is to fade. Buttercup was close to the real thing, but Buttercup has not enough stamina and is difficult to propagate. Even at its best Buttercup is not a modern canna.

Whether Mr. Wintzer will get a satisfactory yellow from his seedlings I don't know. I am inclined to think he will some day, for more intelligent, painstaking, thorough hybridizing cannot be imagined. You feel that he must succeed. You look back over the old cannas, then at the great (at that time) Crozy type, and now at these wonderful cannas of today and you feel that this quiet, unassuming man who stands before you has, with God's help, produced colors and forms and size in the

A Coming Pink.

City of Portland is a wonderful pink canna. Its quality can be judged by the fact that it is giving Mrs. Alfred F. Conard a great race for supremacy. Mrs. Conard has stood at the top for years, with scarce a rival for the title of queen of the pink cannas save Beauty of Hungary. Now City of Portland has come. It is of the same type as Mrs. Conard. I think Mr. Wintzer said it was of the same blood. It bears flowers of the same lovely La France shade of pink, a shade that seems so impossible canna flowers never before dreamed of and you respectfully doff your hat as you clasp his hand in parting.

SUCCESS WITH POTTED PLANTS.

The Right Pots and Compost.

It is quite an art to get potted plants of any kind into the market in first-class condition. Every stage of growth must be watched with the greatest possible care. In the early stages we lay the foundation of our future work. If it is not wisely laid, we get an unbalanced development, which the best future attention cannot correct.

The flower pot plays an important part in plant culture. In the first place, we want a light, porous pot. Of course, it must be sufficiently heavy to stand the wear and tear of ordinary plant life, but it must also be porous. Otherwise the plants will become waterlogged and the roots will decay; a condition impossible to repair.

From the present point of view, it does not matter what plants we are going to pot. It is the condition of the compost that we are concerned with. If possible, the potting composts should be prepared six months ahead and stored in open sheds, in the summer, to protect them from the rain. When required for potting during the winter and spring, they should be stored where they will be safe from frost.

Crocking the Pots.

The proper crocking of the pots is absolutely necessary to good cultivation. Right drainage is the basis of pot plant culture. Without good drainage the soil will become saturated with surplus moisture, which the plant cannot absorb. The soil will then become plastic and cold; root action will cease; the foliage will soon turn yellow and the roots will commence to decay.

The crocks in the pots, with judicious watering, will prevent this trouble. An open, porous space is maintained at the base of the pot. All surplus water can drain away. The atmospheric air can penetrate the soil. This aeration of the soil maintains it in a healthy condition, in which the roots can grow and develop freely. With good root action the grower can handle the plants as he wishes, and will be able to turn out good stock.

When and How to Repot.

When a plant is well furnished with fresh, active roots to the outside of the ball of soil, it should be repotted. It is a mistake, usually, to allow a plant to get potbound before potting it over. Never pot a plant when the ball of soil is dry. Soak the plants well and allow them to drain out properly before repotting. When a plant is potted on with the ball of soil dry, the whole of the surrounding soil will be in a sodden condition before the ball of soil around the plant will be moistened. As a result the plant will flag and droop its leaves. Therefore, never pot up a plant dry. When potted, it will be found that a gentle watering will be far better than the soaking often given to the plants. As the plant grows and produces roots, the amount of water can be increased, with benefit.

It is sometimes necessary to shade young plants when they are first potted.

In many instances this may be due to an excessively sunny spell of weather. Then the shading should only be temporary, and cheesecloth stretched on wires will answer the purpose. This form of temporary shading is cheap, portable and lasting and can be used to shade flowering plants if necessary.

F. E. B.

MEETING THE PROBLEM.

Probably there is no one thing today that engages so much of the growers' attention as does the question of fertilizer, the kind required, the quantity to use and the source of supply. It is a subject new to most of the trade, for the reason that up to recent times nearly all of us have been able to obtain at small cost in money or effort all the cattle manure that has been needed. Now that this no longer is the case we are compelled to grapple with a problem for the comprehension of which we are ill prepared; we knew the action of the old-fashioned fertilizer and felt safe in its use without giving a thought to the chemistry of the subject. Now that we must use other fertilizing agents we are at a loss to understand our needs or even the language of the science of soil chemistry; the fertilizer expert talks in terms we can not grasp.

The fertilizer people themselves appreciate the lack of mutual understanding and are studying the growers' problems with a view, first of all, of getting the growers' practical knowledge of plant production and, second, of finding how to put the soil chemists' knowledge into terms that will be plain to the man under glass.

As an instance of what is being done to get together, the Chicago Feed & Fertilizer Co., Chicago, recently has devised a question blank for the greenhouse trade, through the use of which it gains a partial knowledge of a grower's crops, methods and, particularly, of his soil. After this has been studied and the information supplemented by such special questions as seem necessary, the data the florist wants, in regard to the kinds of fertilizer to use, the quantities, method and frequency of application are put before him in simple language on a printed chart. It was found necessary to prepare six different charts to cover all the commonly used soil variations, and of course it is not possible to set down a rule that can be followed without thought, but the charts suggest the quantities of various articles that will approximate the results of certain stated quantities of stable or cattle manures. Approached in this direction, the growers' fertilizer problems appear less complicated.

INSPECTING CHRISTMAS GREENS.

With relation to the federal quarantine against the shipment of plants, etc., from certain New England areas infested by gypsy and brown-tail moth. C. L. Marlatt, chairman of the Federal Horticultural Board, says:

"The Christmas tree and Christmas greens subject was discussed fully and it was decided to maintain the inspection of such products for another year. The arguments against certification of Christmas trees and greens were fully considered, but the evidence from the actual working of such certification during the year would indicate that there was probably less danger from the certification of such material than

Rotterdam, Holland.—Considering that practically all the horticultural products of Belgium and Holland must this season go to America by way of Rotterdam, the trade will be interested that the Holland-America line has seven new steamships which will be put into service between this port and New York within the next six months.

London, England.—With regard to imports of Japanese lily bulbs announced last week, the government agreed to admit up to fifty per cent of 1915 imports provided that the shipments are effected before October 31 and subject to the trade devising a scheme whereby the authorities may be assured that this quantity will not be exceeded.

Liverpool, England.—Rose budding is in progress on a good many nurseries, although some firms have scarcely anybody to do the work. Bees Ltd., who have a million stocks to bud, have a staff of lady budders, who are getting on famously, one getting 1,100 to 1,200 buds in per day. That is an average that compares favorably with the ordinary achievements of the experienced male, and tends to disprove the frequently made assertions that lady gardeners cannot stand hard work.

Cirencester, England.—In the autumn J. Jefferies & Son, Ltd., will disseminate Schizanthus retusus Pink Beauty, a pure self rose-pink without any markings whatever, especially effective under artificial light and excellent for retail store work, lasting well.

Nancy, France.—Although the nursery of V. Lemoine & Son has for two years been within sound of the big guns and sometimes almost on the battle line, business still is carried on. In July a special list of delphiniums and peonies for the American trade was issued and the annual autumn catalogue will be issued in September.

Newtownards, Ireland.—"It has always been our opinion that color and form are the minor attributes of the perfect rose," says Alex. Dickson & Sons, Ltd., a concern not without reputation in America. "The scent of the rose always has been, and will always be, its chief characteristic and charm. To a lover of roses a scentless rose is soulless. However plain a rose may be in color or form, if it has the true rose scent it will still endear itself to a true rose lover. We have developed the rose on this principle, striving always to combine color, form and flower with abundance of perfume."

from other materials certified for shipment.

"Of 454 different inspections of shipments of Christmas trees and greens, only two instances of infestations were found, one relating to a shipment of Christmas trees consigned to Philadelphia, where, prior to shipment, thirteen egg clusters were found, and the other to a stock of laurel collected for making into rope or wreaths, in which, also prior to shipment, nineteen egg clusters were found. No findings of infestations were reported from destination of any of these shipments. This contrasts with 127 infestations found out of over 5,000 shipments of forest products; 183 infestations out of over 22,000 shipments of quarry products; and 213 infestations out of over 5,000 shipments of nursery stock; there being found on these three products altogether some 10,000 egg clusters, larvæ, pupæ and moths, mostly egg clusters, of which more than 8,000 were taken on forest products.

"Stating the matter in another way, it appears that one infestation of Christmas trees was found for 277 shipments, while quarry products showed one infestation for each 120 shipments, and forest products and nursery stock one for each thirty-nine and twenty-three shipments, respectively.

"From this statement, Christmas trees and greens would seem to stand on a plane of safety by themselves, and to represent perhaps the least dangerous product which moves out of the quarantined territory. There is the further safeguard that Christmas trees and greens are not planted, but eventually go onto the rubbish pile and are, in most instances, burned before the hatching period for the eggs arrives, whereas forest products and quarry products remain permanently where they are used, and nursery stock is, of course, planted."

IMPROVING THE CYCLAMEN.

By means of two illustrations, the reader may here have a glance at the style of greenhouse used by the cyclamen seed specialist, Ferd. Fischer, of Wiesbaden, Germany, and may obtain an idea of the appearance of the plants which result from Mr. Fischer's equipment and methods. In fact, this is the second glimpse of the Fischer greenhouses provided in these columns. A recent issue of The Review contained a picture of a house of cyclamens of the Fischer salmon-colored strains. One of the present illustrations shows a house of the improved Rococo cyclamen, C. Rococo erecta; the other picture gives a more distinct view of a group of plants of the same variety. In speaking of his experiments with the Rococo and some other sorts, Mr. Fischer says:

"The variety Rococo, often called the orchid-flowering cyclamen, I have materially improved, and it may now be justly termed orchid-flowering. The petals are now stronger and hold themselves erect. The flowers have special beauty in the lighter shades of rose-lilac, edged with rose or lilac. The old Rococo was never held in much esteem, because its petals had a hanging, drooping or curling tendency. In this new generation, Rococo erecta, this fault is corrected, and its remarkably broad and distinctly fringed petals stand boldly upright.

"Crossing salmon-colored with dark crimson sorts, I obtained a new color, vermilion, both deep and light. This is a delightful color, outshining all the others. I shall be ready to supply seeds of this beautiful novelty in 1917."

LILIES FOR EASTER.

Will you kindly advise me how to treat Lilium giganteum to have it in bloom for Easter, 1917? I shall not receive the bulbs until about the middle of September. W. C. H.—Pa.

If you receive your lily bulbs as early as October 15 they will be in ample time. As a rule, giganteums do not arrive much before October. This lily likes a good heat from the start. Place the pots in a shed, in a cellar or below greenhouse benches, where the minimum will be 60 degrees. Maintain this temperature and your plants will be in ample time. The buds should show distinctly when Lent begins. About six weeks will be needed to have the flowers open. Some extra forcing or retarding may be necessary; it all depends on the weather. Watch the cultural notes on lilies in The Review from time to time. C. W.

PARIS GREEN BURNS ASTERS.

Will you please give me the best remedy for killing aster beetles? I have been using Paris green, but I do not like it, as it sometimes burns the foliage if too much of it is used. S. T. H.—Ind.

There is no better remedy for aster beetles than Paris green, used at the rate of one pound to 200 gallons of water. I am afraid you have been using a mixture too strong. Adding a little air-slaked lime to the water will lessen the danger of burning the flowers and foliage. At the above rate you should have no trouble from burning. C. W.

Charleroi, Pa.—Joseph Haube has recently returned from an automobile tour through northern New York, eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Business here is down to the usual summer grind.

BUFFALO.The Market.

Business has been quite lively. The cool weather which has been prevailing has been a favorable factor in the flower market. Some good stock is arriving and finds a ready sale. Of course, there is much inferior stock to be had, but this also clears easily.

Beauties are somewhat short in supply and other roses, whether short, long or medium-stemmed, experience no difficulty in clearing at good prices. Since the abatement of the excessive heat roses arrive in better condition, Ophelia, Sunburst and Francis Scott Key roses being about the best to be had at the present time. White Killarney and Killarney as yet are rather short and have a tendency to open too quickly.

Easter lilies are sufficient in supply. Cattleyas and valley have not recovered entirely, but the demand for either is rather small. A stray bunch of carnations may be seen occasionally. Gladioli are increasing in supply, and blooms of extra good quality may be had. Asters are mostly of poor quality and short of stem. Outdoor snapdragons are available, but they are of inferior grade. Rubrum lilies are falling off somewhat and sweet peas may be classed with the carnations. Few garden flowers are seen; evidently they are about done for.

About the only item that has been satisfactory during the entire season is greens. There seems always to be enough of this stock and the demand for it is satisfactory.

Various Notes.

William Grever, manager of Palmer's branch store, and family are motoring through the northern and eastern part of the state.

Robert Shoch, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, was in town last week. Good asters are being shipped in by Walter Stroh, of Batavia. The blooms were indoor-grown.

Raymond Harrison, who is with W. J. Palmer & Son, has been spending a week at Schenectady, N. Y.

William Ehmann, of Corfu, is installing a new boiler at his range.

The window display of "The Old Mill" at Palmer's branch draws as much attention as ever.

Before long the Wm. F. Kasting Co. will be permanently located at 568 and 570 Washington street. A refrigerating plant will be installed and the new refrigerator will measure 12x16x32 feet. A. E.

The Wm. F. Kasting Co. will move from its temporary headquarters, 491 Washington street, to a new 4-story brick building at 568 and 570 Washington street, and will be ready for business there September 4. This building is new, has four floors 50x90 and also a basement, giving a total of 22,500 square feet. An up-to-date refrigerating plant is being installed in the building, which already is equipped with passenger and freight elevators, and the plan is to make it one of the best wholesale houses in the country. The intention is not only to take care of the present large business, but to increase it considerably by adding everything pertaining to the wholesale florists' trade. E. C. Brucker and W. H.

Eiss will have charge of the business. Mr. Brucker was identified with Mr. Kasting for seventeen years and Mr. Eiss has been associated with the firm for ten years.

CINCINNATI.The Market.

Stock is not extra plentiful and everything is selling readily. The demand is steady. Roses are in only fair supply. Outdoor roses, however, are coming in faster than for some time. Asters are still rather scarce, as the late crop has been extremely slow. Gladioli are plentiful and prove to be the one big item in the week's offerings. Easter lilies are fairly abundant and sell readily. Lilium rubrum is selling well. Hardy hydrangeas have a fair market. A few good dahlias are arriving regularly. A limited quantity of cosmos may be had. The supply of smilax is scarcely sufficient for the needs of the market.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has returned after his last week's auto trip through the western and northern part of the state.

Charles Schumann has been sending some excellent dahlias to L. H. Kyrk.

Peter Herb, of Mount Healthy, has been shipping some excellent Maman Cochet roses to C. E. Critchell.

Recent visitors included Miss D. E. Ruch, of Shreveport, La.; Mr. and Mrs. Purllant, of Winchester, Ky.; Milton Alexander, representing Lion & Co., of New York; Julius Dilloff, representing Schloss Bros., of New York, and R. E. Adgate, representing the McCallum Co., of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Al Horning has returned after a fortnight spent at Toledo. C. H. H.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

"A busy summer," is the report from the two stores of the Krut Floral Co., at Elmwood City and Butler, Pa.

Charles McGrath, of Fischer & McGrath, of New Castle, Pa., is spending his vacation with his family on the banks of the Little Neshannock creek.

Fred Butz, of Butz Bros., also of New Castle, has returned from a motor trip over the White mountains and through the New England states.

J. J. Beck, of New Castle, has had a good cut of asters and gladioli.

John Murchie, of Sharon, Pa., is finishing the last house of the new range he started to erect last spring.

Messrs. Hackett and Clarke have joined hands in Sharon, Pa., and will grow cut flowers and bedding stock.

Hagan Bros., of Uniontown, Pa., are putting new benches in their houses. This and general repair work are keeping them busy.

The Walton Floral Co., of Rice's Landing, Pa., has its carnations all in and they surely do look healthy, the mums being in the same promising condition.

"Business has been exceedingly good all summer," smilingly remarked Joseph Haube, of Charleroi, Pa. He had just returned from an automobile trip through the east.

George Huseroft, of Steubenville, O., is reported to be in a bad way. He has considerable trouble with his head and the doctors can give him no relief.

Death again visited the home of John Hellstern, of Wheeling, W. Va., when his 18-year-old daughter died from an operation August 5.

George Stanley Wherley has left the employ of the Virginia Flower Shop, of Wheeling, W. Va. W. T. U.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

The craft in Saratoga, N. Y., is reported as having experienced one of the best of several seasons, which is attributed to the high-class patronage now favoring this charming place. Christian Dehn, John Ralph's Sons and Henry Schrade are the leading trio and predict a prosperous future. The new store of Henry Schrade is the pride of Mrs Schrade.

When the members of the Albany, N. Y., Florists' Club, accompanied by several friends, hied themselves to Henke's Grove last week for the annual clambake, they knew they were in for a good time. To quote Fred Goldring: "As the clams disappeared, the consumers opened up." William Hannell offered to tell the boys the secret of growing first-class Ophelia roses and invited all out to see that popular rose at its best. Manager Tracey, of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange, opined that the market, one of the best, would be even better the coming season, judging by the signs of the times. Louis H. Schaefer, as chairman of the outing committee, expressed the sentiment that such and similar social gatherings as this one are big factors in continuing a friendly spirit in the face of strong competition, as now is experienced by both grower and retailer.

The Trojans are enjoying their share of the general prosperity. The Sambrook brothers found time for a brief vacation, George Sambrook rusticated at Lake George and Brother John resting on his 80-acre gladiolus farm at Berlin, N. Y., from which he is sending in some grand spikes of the choicest varieties.

J. G. Barrett, of Troy, reports the usual heavy run on funeral work, of which he receives a large share from Troy's best patrons.

E. V. B. Felthousen, of Schenectady, N. Y., has exceptional success with Nephrolepis Whitmani, especially with large specimens. He predicts a good demand for home-grown stock during the coming season.

The Rosendale Flower Shop, of Schenectady, notes an increase in decorative work.

At Hatcher's, Schenectady, vacations are over and all hands are preparing for a busy season, in sympathy with the General Electric Co., which reports orders for peace goods that will keep them busy for two years ahead. The only complaint I have heard was from the Schenectady Seed Co., which says that the artisans who usually garden extensively are too busy to do so this season. Consequently the counter trade has suffered. W. M.

OBITUARY

Henry A. Salzer.

As chronicled briefly in the seed trade columns of The Review for August 24, Henry A. Salzer, president of the John A. Salzer Seed Co., of La Crosse, Wis., one of the largest seed houses in the country, was killed August 22, when the automobile in which he was a passenger turned turtle on a narrow road near the town of Dresbach, Minn.

On the afternoon of the day of the fatal accident, Mr. Salzer, accompanied by Mrs. Salzer, was taking two guests, Prof. and Mrs. Edward Kremers, from La Crosse to Ferndale, the summer home of John P. Salzer, Mr. Salzer's brother, in an adjoining county in Minnesota. On a steep and narrow road near Dresbach the automobile got beyond the control of the chauffeur and crashed into a buggy driven by a farmer, who was just rounding a bend in the road. The shock wrecked the buggy and threw the automobile over the 75-foot bank. The machine turned over twice in the descent, coming to a standstill against a large tree at the bottom of the bank. The occupants were thrown out before the car had made its first turn. Mr. Salzer was thrown against a stump, and the car crushed him against it as it passed. The others were thrown clear and suffered only bruises. The chauffeur and Mrs. Salzer were the first to reach Mr. Salzer's side, but he had already died. His back had been broken and chest crushed.

John P. Salzer was reached by telephone and arrived shortly after the accident. Kenneth Salzer, the 22-year-old son of the seedsman, was recalled as he was about to embark on a lake trip. The telegram informing him of his father's death reached him at Duluth, and he turned back at once.

The deceased was born January 23, 1855, at Dutch Creek, Ia., the second son of John A. Salzer, the founder of the seed business. The father was a German Methodist preacher and removed to La Crosse as pastor of the First German Methodist church, in 1866. Henry then was a boy of 16. The elder Salzer, a native of Germany, was a son of a gardener and the culture of flowers was his avocation during his period of service to the church. Upon his retirement from the ministry in 1869, his inclination turned him to his greenhouses, to which he thereafter, with his sons, devoted his entire time. Then the establishment, which now is known as the John A. Salzer Seed Co., was called the La Crosse Floral Garden.

Henry Salzer was brought up in the business and on the death of his father in 1892 he became head of the concern. The business prospered and grew until it was recognized as one of the largest in the trade. Mr. Salzer's other, perhaps greater, interests were in the United States Annuity & Insurance Co., the Darlington Electric Co., the Salzer Land Co., the B. F. Salzer Lumber Co., of Denver; the Salzer Lumber Co., of Minneapolis; the New Orleans Syrup Co., the Mercantile State Bank, of Minneapolis; the La Crosse Floral Co., of La Crosse. In fact, the deceased was rated as one of the wealthiest men in the trade. He became a member of the American Seed Trade Association in 1887, but in recent years had not been a frequent attendant at its meetings.

Mr. Salzer held no less important place in the religious world than in the world of business. He was actively identified with the world organization of the Methodist church and was a trustee of the Charles City College, of Charles City, Ia.

Funeral services were held at the family home, Seventeenth and King streets, La Crosse, Thursday, August 24. Floral tributes were heaped upon the bier, sent by a multitude of friends bound to the deceased by his numerous business and church affiliations. Interment was in Oak Grove cemetery.

In addition to his two brothers and Mrs. Salzer, two children survive: Kenneth, aged 22, and Gertrude, 11 years of age.

Charles E. Grunewald.

Charles E. Grunewald, 924 Madison avenue, New York, died suddenly August 26 and was buried Monday afternoon, August 28. Mr. Grunewald had been in the retail business in New York for over thirty years. He had been ill from a complication of diseases since his return from Germany in 1913.

William S. Lyon.

William S. Lyon, the foremost expert in botany and horticulture in the Philippine islands, passed away July 14, at St. Paul's hospital, Manila. July 11 Mr. Lyon was operated on for peritonitis, which set in following an operation for appendicitis in April.

Deep regret will be felt by men of many nationalities, as the deceased was as well known throughout England, Germany and Belgium as in the United States.

Mr. Lyon was born in 1852. A graduate of Amherst, he had served as head of the state board of forestry in California. He removed to the Philippines in 1902 and soon became known as a man of remarkable ability and extraordinary vigor of mind. He left the government's service in 1905 to engage in the business of collecting and exporting orchids, which he continued to his death. He was one of the most reliable orchid collectors in the Orient, and to his energy and foresight is due the vogue the phalaenopsis has among the spray orchids.

Recently the writer had the pleasure of enjoying an afternoon and evening at Mr. Lyon's garden and home in Balic-Balic. I can properly state that throughout my travels I have not seen a place more interesting. During our talk Mr. Lyon was extremely optimistic regarding the future trade in orchids. As the war has put a stop to exporting orchids to Europe, he was going to turn all his interest to the United States, as he fully realized the future there for Philippine orchids.

When the St. Louis exposition was enjoying attention Mr. Lyon was a member of the Philippine board which arranged the insular exhibit, and more recently he was in charge of the large exhibit of Philippine orchids sent to San Francisco. A practiced and effective writer, his articles were greatly sought by the Manila papers.

His family was gathered about him at his bedside when the end came—Mrs. Lyon, Ward W. Lyon, his son, and Mrs. Johnston, his daughter, and to them will go out the deep and ready sympathy of a large body of friends.

The body was cremated and the ashes will be sent to the United States for burial at his boyhood home.

Charlottesville, Va.—Walter H. Page and William S. Holloway have purchased the greenhouses operated for so many years by the late L. A. King. The new owners, both young men, were associated with Mr. King for a number of years.

Ada, Okla.—W. E. Pitt planted 2,500 carnations during the first days of August and he has not lost a plant. The weather has been hot and dry through July and August. Early in July there was one good rain, but not enough since then to settle the dust.

Lynchburg, Va.—Miss Julia C. McCarron, accompanied by her sister, is on a business and pleasure trip to Atlantic City, New York and other northern points. She will purchase supplies, fixtures and furniture for the new store, which will be ready for occupancy November 15.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—During the closing days of the S. A. F. convention this place passed through the worst tropical hurricane that ever struck this portion of the country, the wind, which attained a velocity of more than ninety miles an hour, wrecking everything along the bay front of the city. Every pier, bath house and pleasure resort was swept away, the only indication remaining to mark their existence being the piles sticking out of the water. Every ship in the harbor was either sunk or beached, but no lives were lost. The Casa de Flora Greenhouses, owned by Margaret Perkins, Don E. Curtis, manager, are standing in fine shape, although in an exposed location. The only loss was about 275 panes of glass; no damage whatever to the stock. They had just finished planting carnations the day before the storm, thereby saving the stock, as everything in the fields was ruined. The greenhouses are 150 feet in length, each house fourteen feet in width.

Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

Results bring advertising. The Review brings results.

THERE will be more new retail stores opened this autumn than in any previous season.

It is no longer a matter of price on the greenhouse sizes of window glass, but a question of getting early delivery.

THE trade evidently expects to use freesias in place of valley and Romans next spring, for the calls for bulbs never were stronger.

INSTEAD of trying to undersell the man across the street, why not see if you can not get a little better prices than he does? Your stock and your service are better, you know.

THE day has passed when a man without capital can start a retail flower store; the wholesale florists and supply dealers no longer are willing to supply the means to a man without assets.

HARRY A. BARNARD, who has been coming to America these many years, for Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, London, writes that he has taken passage on the Adriatic, due in New York about September 1.

OUTDOOR stock through the middle west has suffered severely because of the long dry summer. There is more than one florist who finds himself with a better market than ever before and almost nothing to sell. Carnation plants in the field have had a hard time and good stock is scarce; the man who has a surplus can clean it up quickly.

THE RAILROAD STRIKE.

It is anybody's guess whether or not there will be any trains running on American railroads when next week's issue of The Review goes to press. At present it looks as though the trainmen will go on strike September 4 unless somebody backs down, but the railroad managers assert their ability to maintain a partial service from the start.

Florists will not suffer any more than other business men from such a strike. The bulk of every florist's out-of-town sales and purchases move by express and as long as the passenger trains are running there will be express service of a sort. The growers of course soon will need freight service for fuel, but the larger establishments make it their practice to fill their sheds during summer and are in a position to go some little time without further supplies.

On the whole, this trade probably is as well situated as any to stand a tie-up of freight train service and the principal loss that is to be expected will come from the general disorganization of business that will take the thoughts and activities of the people to unaccustomed matters—what the flower business needs is peace and quiet; excitement of any character and flowers are incompatible.

DATE OF 1918 CONVENTION.

The executive board of the S. A. F., in session at Houston, Tex., August 17, passed the following recommendation:

In the matter of changing the convention date, providing the National Flower Show is held in the spring of 1918 in St. Louis, Mo., we recommend that definite action on this be taken at the mid-Lent meeting of the executive board to be held in New York.

PLEASED READERS, ADS PAY.

The men who study advertising, making it a profession, long ago noted marked differences in the order-bringing qualities of different media. For instance, if one publication printed half the number of copies printed by another similarly circulated, it might be expected to pay advertisers half as well, but that does not prove always to be the case. The psychologists have told them why: The difference lies in the interest the readers take—there MUST be greater interest taken in one than the other, else it would not have the double circulation. Perfectly plain, isn't it? The paper that is bright, cheerful, newsy, interesting, has an advertising value greater than in proportion to its circulation—advertisements in it make their appeal at the moment that is correct psychologically. That is why The Review pays its advertisers so well.

The readers' interest:

If a man will read The Review he will keep posted: I can not do without it.—W. E. Pitt, Ada, Okla., August 20, 1916.

And then the advertisers, east and west, write like this:

We are swamped with orders and all sold out. Thank you.—J. F. Sabransky, Kenton, O., August 21, 1916.

The season has been a most successful one and our ads in The Review brought splendid results.—Los Robles Nursery & Garden, Santa Cruz, Cal., August 18, 1916.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

GUDE ASKS AMENDMENT.

A third letter on the subject of the "unfair competition" paragraph of the so-called general revenue bill has been forwarded by William F. Gude, chairman of the tariff and legislative committee of the S. A. F., this time asking for a modification of the paragraph as now written.

It seems that Mr. Gude has found that there is a clause therein which will practically nullify the provision because it requires the complainant to assume the burden of proof when bringing action against an importer or other person charged with dumping foreign goods on an American market. This would be largely impossible and Mr. Gude so informs the Senate finance committee in a letter, as follows:

It has come to the attention of the Society of American Florists that the anti-dumping or unfair competition clause in the general revenue bill now pending in the Senate, which we have gone on record as favoring, will be entirely ineffectual and will accomplish no purpose whatever if allowed to be enacted into law in its present form, i.e., containing the following clause:

"That such act or acts be done with the intent of destroying or injuring an industry in the United States, or of preventing the establishment of an industry in the United States, or of restraining or monopolizing any part of trade and commerce in such articles in the United States."

In our opinion it would be extremely difficult to prove that any person, firm or combination in a foreign country dumping their products on the American market and working a hardship on American dealers intended to do so. We believe that an anti-dumping clause is highly desirable and we wish to see one enacted into law that will leave no opening for controversies as to whether or not the intent to evade the provision was present when any particular case of dumping took place.

May we ask that your committee take steps to remedy the condition noted?

Respectfully yours,
William F. Gude,
Chairman Tariff and Legislative Committee, S. A. F.

DATE OF NEW YORK SHOW.

The date of the next International Flower Show, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, was stated in the first preliminary schedule to be March 16 to 23, 1917. This was an error. The correct dates of the coming exhibition are March 15 to 22.

The Market.

With the return of cool weather the general supply has been reduced sharply and demand, more particularly shipping, has been appreciably quickened. To such a marked degree is this true that the opening of the week found the market cleared of lilies, Beauties and Russells early each day. Some of the increasing demand is, of course, attributable to fall openings and county and state fairs. Quality, on the whole, is much improved, although there is yet much to be desired in that direction.

The supply of Beauties is short of actual needs and the quality gives evidence of a marked improvement. Russell proves an exception to the general rule in the matter of supply, as there are a few more on the market this week than there were last. Practically all rose stock is beginning to show the beneficial effects of cooler weather, though most of that reaching the market is too short for anything but funeral work.

There are plenty of late asters on the market, but they are, for the most part, of inferior grade. Good shipping stock continues scarce. Gladioli are in heavier supply, but for all that they clear remarkably well. It is hardly necessary to remind the trade that valley is still scarce. Easter lilies are enjoying a good demand and are clearing regularly with a fair supply. Cattleyas are still scarce, though comparatively few have occasion to know it. Daisies and snapdragons have made their bow. In fact, all garden flowers have ceased to be factors in the market. The supply of auratum and rubrum lilies is not great, and they are moving in a quite satisfactory manner. Sweet peas, remarkable for their short stems, clear readily, though that is not a difficult task, as there are few of them. The latest arrival on the market is the Golden Glow chrysanthemum. Though welcome enough as a sign of approaching autumn, it meets with no special demand, and most of the flowers are too soft to amount to much; the best have sold for $2 per dozen.

Greens are moving smoothly and regularly, untroubled with either a shortage or an oversupply.

Changes Coming in Market.

August 25 the leasehold interest in the property at 159 and 161 North Wabash avenue changed hands and it is announced that the new owner will proceed as speedily as may be possible with the erection of a new 10-story building on the site. The basement of the old building now on the property is occupied by A. L. Vaughan & Co.

The transaction follows by only a month a similar one on the corner, the building in which Ziska & Sons and Percy Jones, Inc., are located. This ground lease was acquired last month by A. Starr Best, children's outfitter, who will replace the old building with a new one for his own occupancy as soon as existing leases can be got out of the way.

days under the name of the University Floral Co.

Competition is becoming decidedly keen in the neighborhood. On the corner of Sixty-third street is the establishment of J. H. McNeilly. The new store is just across the street on the University avenue side. Last spring J. A. Michal, who has greenhouses farther south, opened a store at 1168 Sixty-third street, opposite McNeilly on that side, so there will be three stores within a stone's throw. One block east is one of A. F. Keenan's two stores. Three blocks east are two other florists. Bombenger is just south.

If competition still is the life of trade a lot of flowers should be sold in that part of Woodlawn this season.

Various Notes.

This has been a wonderful season for the gladiolus growers shipping to this market. In spite of the injury to the stock caused by hot, dry weather, sales have run to much better money than last season. As an example, C. S. Clausen, who is perhaps the principal shipper of up-to-date varieties, says that up to August 20 his sales were slightly more than double in money value what they were in all of last season, and he still is shipping about $100 worth per day. As for quantity, he has cut a few more flowers than last year in spite of the bad season, because he increased his acreage this season, but he estimates the price to have averaged better than double last year's average price.

It is reported that J. E. Pollworth, who is known to many in this market, is interviewing growers on the subject of another commission house.

There are now twenty-six houses, 28x300 feet, that run north and south in the Greggs Station range of Bassett & Washburn greenhouses. This winter twenty-six more, running in the same direction and of the same size, will be erected, to be ready for planting early next spring. According to C. L. Washburn, houses running north and south are much better for Beauties, Russells and young plants than houses running east and west, as they permit of a more even distribution of sunlight during the winter months. Hence these houses will, of course, be devoted to the varieties mentioned.

"What if the German cyclamen seed doesn't get by the British blockade this season, I should worry," says E. Rober, who has grown a large quantity at his place at Wilmette. Mr. Rober was one of the first to grow the newer varieties in quantity and last season he came to the conclusion that each seed would ripen into a penny, or perhaps two pennies.

The remodeling and enlarging of the George Wienhoeber store was completed August 25; it now is one of the handsomest and largest in town. There is an entrance on Monroe street as well as on Wabash avenue and the area is 1,500 square feet on the street floor, to say nothing of the large workroom in the basement. The walls are French gray, painted in perfect appearance of dressed stone. Stock should show off to excellent advantage with such a background.

The new rose range of the L. A. Budlong Co., Otto Benthey, foreman, has begun shipping. The cut is handled by J. A. Budlong.

Anton Then will spend the week end and Labor day at Powers Lake, Twin Lakes and Lake Geneva, Wis. He goes as a member of a singing society of which he has been a member since 1876. Miss Josephine Then has returned from a three weeks' visit in St. Joseph, Mich. While away she gained ten pounds. This is sufficient evidence that she has completely recovered from the effects of her severe illness of last spring.

According to the daily papers, the estate of Levi Z. Leiter has leased to Fred Ronsley, florist, the store at 17

After enjoying an automobile trip through the Wisconsin lake region, John Steinmetz is again busy in his store at 1643 North Halsted street.

Joseph Kohout has had his hands fairly full this summer with his own rose range at Libertyville and the management of the Meredith Flower & Vegetable Co. Both places now are in shape for the autumn season.

At the establishment of the Albert F. Amling Co., Maywood, the season's big building program is being brought rapidly to a close with the completion of the addition to the power plant. Peter Knowe & Son are setting two big Kroeschell boilers.

August 26 was observed at the establishments of Pyfer & Olsem and A. T. Pyfer & Co. as Mr. Pyfer's thirty-eighth birthday anniversary.

The Bohannon Floral Co., in moving a few doors east to the Monroe building, gets the advantage of a location near Michigan avenue, in a high class building, but the real reason for the change is the opportunity to get a long lease on which to build business. The building in which the store now is located is an old one and no tenant is given a lease which will prevent rebuilding being undertaken on short notice. A large and profitable business has been done there and the old store will be continued until the new one becomes well known.

It seems evident that more growers than ever before are planning to follow the mums with sweet peas this season and that the supply of the latter flower in the first half of 1917 will be larger than ever, but Joseph Foerster, of Kyle & Foerster, says he believes the market will take the increased quantity all right, because of better business, the increasing popularity of sweet peas and the decreased supply of violets.

One would be justified in supposing business to be good, judging from H. N. Bruns' purchases of automobiles this season. First he bought a big Buick truck for the store, then a Packard Twin Six for his personal use, and this month a light Overland for the store.

Driving his big Moline-Knight, John Michelsen, his father and some friends, went to Fox Lake August 29 for a three days' outing.

The Park Ridge growers complain that the season has been one of the worst on record for the violet plants and they are the principal source of supply of Princess of Wales for this market.

Shipments of Paper Whites and cold storage giganteums are leaving the establishment of the American Bulb Co., also deliveries are being made by the novelties department, many buyers having indicated a wish to help give the boys a start.

That this has been the most peculiar season in his long experience is the comment of E. F. Winterson, referring to the supply of summer stock. All field stock has suffered severely.

George Walther has returned from California, where, with his family, he has been visiting Mrs. Walther's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hills, formerly of Maywood. The baby narrowly escaped serious injury when hit by a street car, but has completely recovered.

Orders for field-grown carnation plants are coming more heavily than ever, according to Felix Reichling, of Peter Reinberg's, who says the call for Enchantress and White Perfection has been especially strong. Miss Marguerite McNulty leaves September 2 for a trip on the Great Lakes to Niagara Falls and Buffalo. She will be gone two weeks.

It has been remarked by Paul Kling-sporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, that the varieties of gladioli that were in little demand last year have the heaviest call this year. Now it is America or Augusta or any good shade of pink.

John G. Poehlmann, of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., is again in his accustomed place after a month's rest in Michigan.

According to the Post, of Houston, Tex., the hand-made willow furniture exhibited by the A. L. Randall Co. at the S. A. F. convention has attracted much attention in the display window of the W. C. Munn Co., of Houston. The entire exhibit was purchased by this concern.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Simple's asters are the feature of the market this week. They are even better than the astermums, and both are fine. There are hardly half enough asters coming into town to satisfy the demand, in the absence of carnations. Most of the asters now are of good grade; the poor stock is decidedly in the minority. Roses are an important factor. The larger number are of ordinary grade; they do duty in place of asters and carnations. The smaller number are high-grade. Curiously enough, Beauties do not share in the activity of the other roses. The supply of Beauties has increased to an extent that at times exceeds the moderate demand. Gladioli stand next in importance; they are mostly of good quality and they have advanced in price.

Dahlias are just beginning to make their appearance in numbers sufficient to be considered; the cooler nights help them. Asparagus plumosus sprays stand next on the list, though they are a green rather than a flower. Easter lilies close the list of staple commodities. The supply is quite large, the demand sufficient. Cattleyas and valley are extremely scarce. It is difficult to fill a considerable order for either, and next to impossible unless notice is given in advance. The outdoor flowers, which played so important a part earlier in the season, have waned. The heat, the drought and, now, the cooler nights, have contributed to this result.

Summing up the month of August, a thoughtful observer of the market asserts confidently that the volume of business has been a little, just a little larger than that of last year's August and that it has taken many less flowers to bring this result. Prices were better, with less waste.

The Convention at Houston.

A middle states' member of the Society of American Florists, who took the trip to Houston, Tex., for the convention August 15, was interviewed regarding his impressions of Texas in midsummer. His reception was cordial, but when the subject of the convention was broached he became serious. "I am afraid it is the wrong season for those who live here to go south," he said. "It was hot, too hot for active exercise, but that did not matter, for I did not feel like doing much while there. C. W. Ward's California-grown bulbs were extremely fine, as fine as I have ever seen. They were the feature of a rather small exhibition. The attendance was as large as could be expected so far from the great horticultural centers. I hope that the society will not decide to go so far south again."

Why He Succeeds.

The telephone bell rang. Said a voice: "I left a little box of flowers in your friend's car. Where is it?"

"I am afraid that box is still in the car, now on its way home, fully twelve miles away. I will go in at once and get it."

The speaker was the head of one of the most important cut flower growing establishments near Philadelphia. He needed those flowers, few as there were, to fulfill a promise for an early morning order. Though late at night, it was not too late, or too far, for him to go at once to get those flowers, bring them back and keep his word.

At Wyncote.

The greenhouses of the Joseph Heacock Co., at Wyncote, are devoted to palms, ferns, orchids and carnations, the palms leading. There growing has been reduced to a science. The quality and the quantity annually turned out are remarkable. The feature of the palm houses today is the extremely healthy condition of the stock, both individually and collectively. Each palm is a picture of health, and the whole lot shows that in no size is there overproduction. This is most quickly seen in the houses devoted to the larger sizes; for when the demand lags, it shows there. A glance over the kentias is sufficient to see that the specimens have been taken as quickly as they were ready. Kentia seeds that formerly came from Australia via Hamburg now come by way of San Francisco, thence overland by freight. The last sowing is coming up well.

Cibotium Schiedeii, pedestal-grown, is coming into greater favor here. A whole house is surmounted by shapely speci-

The orchid range is of especial interest today, for two reasons. One is the new importation of 5,000 cattleyas, which now lie moistened under the benches, awaiting potting. The other is the batch of orchid seedlings in the nursery, coaxed into orchid life by means of an ingenious contrivance formed by a gas jet, a teakettle and a small pipe through which water circulates under the plants.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The veterans in the wholesale cut flower market unanimously declare that last week, for dull and unprofitable business, holds the record. The street Saturday, August 26—the good day, naturally, of every week—was as quiet as a funeral. There was a fair clean-up of roses, thanks to an order for 40,000 blooms—another of those Sunday religious society distributions. There is a fair demand for the higher grades and novelties in roses. The season at Newport is at its height and some large decorations were executed last week that used all the American Beauties obtainable. Roses generally are rapidly improving in quality and size. Of the short-stemmed and small-flowered sorts, it may be said that many thousands go for $5 and under per thousand. Some fine Prima Donna, Russell, Ophelia and Sunburst roses now are arriving
